(b) The Postal Enquiry Committee recommended a difference of Rs. 10 between the emoluments of the men stationed in Rangoon and those in the rest of Burma.

(c) The answer to the first part is in the affirmative. As regards the second part the revised rates of pay of postal clerks and sorters in Rangoon and in the rest of Burma were worked out after due consideration of the rates allowed by the Local Government to their employees The third part does not arise.

REVISION OF THE PAY OF THE POSTMEN AND LOWER STAFF IN THE BURMA POST OFFICES AND THE RAILWAY MAIL SERVICE.

1052. *U. Tok Kyi : Is it a fact that revision of pay of the postmen and lower staff in the Burma Post Offices and the R. M. S. is still under consideration ? If so, will the Government be pleased to state its reasons for not taking up the case of these lowly-paid men before any revision of the clerical cadre was contemplated ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Yes, except in respect of postmen and mailguards in Rangoon where the pay has been revised. The Honourable Member's attention is invited to the relevant portion of my speech in this House on the 11th March last.

PROTECTION OF THE RIGHTS AND INTERESTS OF INDIANS RESIDENT IN TANGANYIKA.

1059. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the articles published in the African Comrade of Dar-u-Salaam, dated the 18th May 1927 (pages 3, 6, 11) in which it is stated that the "Kenya policy" is attempted to be introduced into Tanganyika as regards Asiatic settlement, in pursuance of a resolution passed by the East African Section of the London Chamber of Commerce ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to ascertain and quote the text of the Resolution referred to in (a) above ?

(c) Are Government aware that the speech of Sir Edward Grigg at Falmouth in this connection has given rise to considerable misgivings and anxieties in the minds of the Indian settlers in the East African Colonies ; and what steps have Government taken, or propose to take to protect the rights and interests of Indian residents against White settlers ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : Government have not seen, either the articles in the African Comrade newspaper of Dar-es-Salaam, referred to by the Honourable Member or the report of the speech of His Excellency Sir Edward Grigg said to have been delivered at Falmouth. If the Honourable Member will supply me with the articles and the text of the speech I would endeavour to answer his question.

SEGREGATION OF INDIANS IN MOMBASSA.

1060. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the articles published in the African Comrade, dated the 23rd March 1927 (pages 4, 16) and dated the 30th March 1927 (pages 3, 9, 11), regarding the renewed scheme of segregation of Indians in Mombasa ; and will the Government be pleased to state the present position with regard to this subject, and also indicate the steps taken, or proposed to be taken, in this connection ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : Yes : the Honourable Member's attention is invited to the answers given by me to his question No. 55 and the connected supplementaries asked on the 22nd August 1927. I regret I am not in a position to add anything to what I said on that occasion.

CLAIMS OF INDIANS IN TANGANYIKA AGAINST GERMANY.

1061. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the articles published in the African Comrade, dated the 9th March 1927 (pages 7, 9, 11, 13), and dated the 16th March 1927 (pages 5, 7, 9), regarding the debt claims of Indians in Tanganyika against Germany during the War ?

(b) Is it a fact that several test cases have been fought out against the German Government, in which the Tribunal has decided in favour of the Indian claimants, but that the German Clearing Office has declined to accept these awards as binding upon it in settling claims of a similar description ?

(c) Is it a fact that Germany has accepted and admitted the locus standi of the claimants to prefer their claims before the Tribunal as decided by the Allies and Associated Powers on the one hand, and Germany on the other in the Treaty of Versailles ?

(d) Are Government aware that instead of paying up the claims in full, the German Clearing Office has written to the claimants individually with offers of compromise on such miserably low terms as 25 per cent. ?

(e) Have Government taken any steps, or propose to take any, to render assistance to the Indian claimants in the realization of the war debts ?

Mr. W. T. M. Wright : (a) The attention of Government has been drawn to the articles mentioned.

(b) The articles deal with the claims of Indians resident in Tanganyika Territory in respect of currency notes issued by the German East Africa Bank. As far as Government are aware no test case relating to such notes has been decided by the Anglo-German Mixed Arbitral Tribunal

(c) It does not rest with Germany to admit the locus standi of claimants to prefer their claims before the Tribunal. All such claims preferred within the period allowed [In India 8 months from the date of formal rejection by the Treuhander (Custodian's) Dept.] are accepted by the Tribunal and if the question of jurisdiction is raised by the German Government it is for the Tribunal to decide it.

(d) The claims in respect of the currency notes involve difficult questions of law and of the effect of depreciation of currency and it cannot be said what would be the decision of the Tribunal if the cases were fought out before it. The offers of compromise referred to were made to the claimants after consultations at which the Custodian of Enemy Property, Tanganyika Territory, attended in the interests of British and Indian claimants in Tanganyika Territory and approved of the proposed offers. It is understood that the offers of 25 per cent. of the face value of the notes are being made only in respect of notes acquired after 15th November, 1915, offers of 80 per cent. being made in respect of notes held before that date.

Taking into consideration the difficulties of the case and the uncertainty of the decision that would be given by the Tribunal it is doubtful if the offers can be characterised as inadequate. Similar offers have been made in all the claims in respect of such notes preferred to the Tribunal by claimants resident in India and have all been accepted. It is open to any claimant who is not disposed to accept the offer of compromise to fight out the case before the Mixed Arbitral Tribunal.

(e) The Government have endeavoured to keep themselves informed as to the progress of these claims generally and Sir, Darcy Lindsay who had interested himself in the matter was furnished with all the information in the possession of the Government that might be of assistance to the claimants in prosecuting their claims before the proper Tribunal. The claimants are aware of their legal remedy and it is not practicable for the Government of India to render them any further assistance in the matter.

UNSTARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

118. Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the articles published in the November 1926 and January 1927 issues of Labour under the captions " Premature decease " and " The Vale of Tears " ?

(c) Will the Government please furnish a similar statement of relatives and dependents of postal officials who died from illness during the last six years while postal officials to whom they were related were employed in the Jalpaiguri and Darjeeling Divisions ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Yes.

Information relating to parts (b) to (d) is being collected and will be furnished to the Honourable Member in due course.

If so, what action has been taken to safeguard the lives of postal officials employed in the Division ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Yes. The state of affairs in the Jalpaiguri Postal Division has attracted the attention of the Director-General long before those interpellations. An increase of 88 per cent. in the leave reserve for the Division has been arranged by the Director-General and other remedial measures are under his consideration.

INCREASE OF THE LEAVE RESERVES FOR THE JALPAIGURI POSTAL DIVISION.

120. Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Is it a fact that in view of the extremely unhealthy condition of the Jalpaiguri Division the Postmaster-General had issued sanction by wire for the entertainment of 15 per cent. leave reserves in excess of the usual number sanctioned for all Postal Divisions on the recommendation of the Postal Enquiry Committee ? Has the sanction been given effect to ? If not, why not ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : On account of the unhealthy climate of certain places in the Jalpaiguri Division the Government of India sanctioned the increase from 17 to 32 in the number of reserve clerks attached to that Division. Effect has been given to the sanction.

ALLEVIATION OF THE DISTRESS AND SUFFERING OF POSTAL OFFICIALS EMPLOYED IN THE DOOARS AND THE TERAI.

121. Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : (1) In view of the extremely unhealthy condition of all localities situated within the Dooars and the Terai in the Jalpaiguri Division do the Government propose to adopt any of the following remedial measures as suggested in Labour, dated January 1927, page 502 :

I. (a) That expert travelling doctors should be sanctioned for the Eastern Dooars, Western Dooars and the Terai.

(b) The number of relieving hands in the Jalpaiguri District should be increased by 50 per cent.

(c) Sick officials should be transferred to healthier places.

(d) Suitable quarters should be provided at Jalpaiguri town to accommodate at least two patients with their families.

(e) All single-handed offices in the Dooars and the Terai should be increased by additional hands without any consideration of statistics.

(f) Suitable residential quarters should be constructed at all stations in the District for postal officials of all classes and the rent be fixed at 10 per cent. of pay or interest on capital outlay, whichever is less.

II. (a) That the compensatory allowance sanctioned for the Dooars and Terai should be increased to Rs. 40 for men of the clerical cadre and to Rs. 20 for men below that cadre.

(b) Suitable compensatory allowance should be sanctioned for Inspectors and Overseers required to tour in the Dooars and the Terai.

(2) If not, what measures do the Government propose to adopt for alleviating the distress and suffering of postal officials employed in Post Offices situated in the Dooars and the Terai ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : All the remedial measures suggested in the issue of Labour of January, 1927, are being examined by the Director-General and certain action in this direction has already been taken.

REVISION OF THE TIME TEST OF DEAD LETTER OFFICES.

122. Mr. Sris Chandra Dutta : With reference to the assurance given by the Director-General of Posts and Telegraphs in the last Session of the Assembly that the time-test of Dead Letter Offices is under revision will the Government be pleased to state if the revision has been completed and with what result ? If not when may completion be expected ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : The question is still under consideration and it cannot be stated at present when a final decision on the matter will be arrived at.

NIGHT DUTY IN THE MUNSHIGUNJ POST OFFICE.

123. Mr. Sris Chandra Dutta : Has the attention of Government been drawn to page 92 of Labour, April 1927, apropos night duty in the Munshigunj Post Office (Dacca District) ? If so, what measures have been taken to afford relief or compensation to the officials affected ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : The information has been called for and will be furnished to the Honourable Member in due course.

TREATMENT OF HIS STAFF BY THE SUPERINTENDENT OF POST OFFICES, HOOGLY DIVISION.

124. Mr. Sris Chandra Dutta : (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to pages 65, 66 and 145 of Labour, March and May 1927 regarding treatment of men under his charge by the Superintendent of Post Offices, Hoogly Division ? Are the facts related therein substantially correct ? If so what action do Government propose to take for affording relief and redress to the aggrieved staff ? Is the Superintendent's appointment permanent at Rangpur Division and if so why has he been retained in the Hooghly Division ? Is no other Superintendent competent to administer the Division ?

(b) Is it a fact that orders have been issued by Director-General of Posts and Telegraphs for prompt relief of men who report sick and submit applications for leave on medical grounds duly supported by medical certificate ? If so, what action has been taken against the Superintendent who is alleged to have ignored or contravened the Director-General's order ?

(c) What action was taken against the Superintendent of Post Offices, Hooghly Division, for ignoring the Director-General's orders in respect of the Sub-Postmaster, Baly as alleged in page 145, Labour, May, 1927 ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : The information is being collected and will be furnished to the Honourable Member in due course.

CASE OF MR. HARIHAR PRASAD.

125. Mr. Sris Chandra Dutta : Are the facts relating to Mr. Harihar Prasad narrated on page 142 of Labour, May 1927, substantially correct ? If so, are the Government prepared to consider a review of his case ? If not, why not ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the reply given by me on the 31st August, 1927, to Mr. Ganganand Sinha's starred questions Nos. 712 and 715 to 721.

INORDINATE DELAY IN THE APPEALS OF POSTAL EMPLOYEES.

126. Mr. Sris Chandra Dutta : Has the attention of Government been drawn to page 214 of Labour, June 1927 apropos inordinate delay in the disposal of appeals ? Will Government please lay on the table a statement of appeals pending over three years from each circle separately with reason for delay in every case ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The reply to the first part of the question is in the affirmative. As regards the second part I would inform the Honourable Member that there are no appeals pending for over 3 years in the Director-General's office.

SORTING WORK IN THE AMHERST STREET, BOW BAZAR AND BEADON STREET POST OFFICES.

127. Mr. Sris Chandra Dutta : (a) Is it a fact that with a view to cope with the voluminous work in connection with the large number of newspapers and periodicals posted at the Amherst St., Bow Bazar and Beadon St. T. S. Os., also for preliminary sorting one sorter from the Calcutta Sorting office used to be deputed to each of these offices during the past several years ?

(b) Has the practice of deputing sorters to these offices for sorting newspapers and periodicals for preliminary sorting of letters, been discontinued ?

(c) If the reply be in the affirmative will the Government please state how the work is being managed since the discontinuance of the practice ?

(d) Is the staff of each post office regulated according to a fixed standard called " Time-test " ?

(e) Is the work in connection with newspapers and periodicals and also preliminary work included in the time-test ?

(f) If so, where was the necessity for deputing a sorter from the Calcutta Sorting Office to the T. S. O.'s mentioned above for coping with work ?

(g) If not, do the Government propose to increase the staff of these offices adequately for purposes of the additional work thrown on them ?

(h) If not, why not ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : The information has been called for and will be furnished to the Honourable Member in due course.

SITUATION AND CONDITION OF THE BOW BAZAR POST OFFICE BUILDING.

128. Mr. Sris Chandra Dutt : (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the paragraph published at page 513 of Labour, dated January 1926, regarding the situation and condition of the Bow Bazar Post Office building ?

(b) Are the statements made in the paragraph substantially correct ?

(c) If so, do the Government propose to remove the Bow Bazar T. S. O. to a more suitable building at an early date for the convenience of the staff as well as of the public ?

(d) If not, why not ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : (a) and (b). Yes.

(c) The question of extending office is under consideration.

(d) Does not arise.

MOTION FOR ADJOURNMENT.

SERIOUS SITUATION IN THE BENGAL NAGPUR RAILWAY WORKSHOPS AT KHARAGPUR.

Mr. President : I have received the following notice of motion for adjournment of the business of the Assembly from Mr. M. K. Acharya :

"I desire after question time to-day to make a motion for the adjournment of the business of the Assembly to discuss a definite matter of urgent public importance, namely, the serious situation that has arisen in the Bengal Nagpur Railway workshops at Kharagpur as evidenced by the fact that the railway authorities have thought it necessary to lock up the workshops and call in the aid of military police for patrolling the streets and guarding the workshops."

When I ruled out of order the Honourable Member's motion on the same subject the other day, I had hoped that the situation would improve. Unfortunately, however, I find that by the recent action of the railway authorities the situation has become worse. I am, therefore, inclined to admit this motion unless the Honourable the Commerce Member satisfies the Chair that the motion is out of order.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy (Member for Commerce and Railways) : I do not wish, Mr. President, to raise any objection to the moving of this motion.

Mr. President : I rule that the motion is in order and ask whether the Honourable Member has the leave of this Assembly to move the adjournment.

(No Honourable Member rose to object to the motion.)

As no Honourable Member objects to the motion for adjournment, I intimate that leave is granted and the motion will be taken up at 4 o'clock.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett (Finance Member) : Sir, I present the Report of the Public Accounts Committee.

11,250 0 0 Hungarian.	The lowest tenderer, Messrs. H. J. Skelton & Co., offered buffers to be manufactured at a works near Buda Pesth which had had no experience of the class of work required under the present contract. It was therefore not considered advisable to entrust the whole order to this firm, and one third of the order was placed with the next lowest tenderer, Messrs. P. and W. MacLellan, who could be relied upon to supply satisfactorily and within a reasonable time.
412 10 0 German.	The lowest tender was from a firm which offered German springs for delivery in 12/14 weeks. The works at which it was proposed to manufacture the springs had already several contracts in hand for springs for the Indian State Railways, and were in arrears as regards delivery. It was thought advisable to place the order with the second lowest tenderer who offered delivery in 8 weeks.
23,887 10 0 German. 24,000 0 0 Austrian.	The Indenting Officer was on deputation in England and opportunity was taken to discuss these tenders with him. As in the light of previous experience, the indentor preferred the boards offered by Messrs. Jas. Cropper & Co., the order was on this occasion divided equally between Messrs. Cropper and the lowest tenderer Messrs. L. S. Dixon & Co., in order to secure further trial and experience.

They were originally ordered from a firm which proved to be unable to deliver satisfactory supplies. Part of the original order was therefore cancelled, and fresh tenders were obtained. Of these tenders the lowest offered delivery in instalments to commence in 4 weeks and to be completed in 18 weeks. In view of the urgency of the demand and of the delay which had occurred, this delivery was considered to be too long, and the order was accordingly placed with the second lowest tenderer who was known to be reliable and who undertook to complete in 16 to 20 days.
6,278 19 2	The manufacture of junction fishplates of cast manganese steel is work of a very special nature. The lowest tenderer had not previously made fishplates of this Material. APPOINTMENT OF A COMMITTEE TO CONSIDER THE QUESTION OF RESIDENCE AND ACCOMMODATION FOR MEMBERS OF THE INDIAN LEGISLATURE.

Mr. President : The House will now resume further consideration of the following motion moved by the Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra on the 5th September 1927 :

"That the Honourable the President do appoint six members of this House to serve on a Committee to consider the question of residence and accommodation for Members of the Indian Legislature, including the use and disposal of the Western Hostel, New Delhi, and that the Council of State be asked to nominate members to serve on the Committee."

Sir Hari Singh Gour (Central Provinces Hindi Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, I beg to move the following amendment to the Honourable Member's Resolution :

"That after the words 'New Delhi' the following be inserted :

'and the question of constituting a Standing House Committee to deal with all matters connected with the allotment to Members of accommodation or quarters available for their residence'."

Sir, I need not take up the time of this House because the Honourable Members will remember that I have said all that I had to say on the last occasion when the Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra moved his original motion. I pointed out then that we have a somewhat similar Committee in charge of the accommodation and comforts of the Honourable Members, but it never functions. And I now wish that a formal motion in the shape of an amendment be accepted by this House so that this Committee may consider the advisability of re-instating that defunct Committee. Sir, I move.

Mr. P. B. Haigh (Bombay : Nominated Official) : Sir, I desire to oppose this amendment. I wish to make it quite plain at the outset that I have no objection to raise to the appointment of a Standing House Committee to function in Delhi or in Simla after the Session is begun. But what I do strongly object to is that this Standing House Committee should be entrusted with the business of allotting quarters to Members. I do not suggest for a moment that, if you appoint a committee for that purpose, they will not do their work with the best good will and as speedily as possible. The point I wish to make clear is that the proposal is not feasible.

Mr. President : Perhaps the Honourable Member seems to have misunderstood the scope of the amendment of Sir Hari Singh Gour. All that the amendment seeks is that this particular Committee which is proposed to be nominated by the Honourable the President should also be empowered to consider the question of constituting a Standing House Committee to deal with certain matters and formulate their recommendations which Government might or might not accept.

Mr. P. B. Haigh : Sir, I ask your permission to lay before the House at this stage, before the matter goes before the Committee which you are to appoint, the view which, I think, is shared by several Members on this side of the House and I do not think we shall have another opportunity of putting that view before the Committee. What I wish to point out is this, that the date of the meetings of the Assembly is not always fixed very long before hand. When the list of the dates is fixed, it is customary for the Secretary of the Legislative Department to circularise all Members of the Assembly and to send them out forms inviting their applications for accommodation. Those forms are not received filled in until a short time before the Assembly meets and the work has necessarily to be done towards the end in a few days. Now, how is the Committee to deal with that ? The members of the Committee will presumably include non-officials and probably they will not be present in Delhi at all. The work cannot be done by correspondence and the consequence is that the matter will be delayed and Honourable Members will arrive in Delhi or Simla to find at the very last minute that accommodation has not been settled and all sorts of confusion and discontentment will arise. I therefore submit that this point of view may be borne in mind by the Committee which you are about to appoint and, if possible, I would like this House to record its opinion that this question of allotment should not be entrusted to the members of this Committee. Sir, I oppose the motion. (Applause.)

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra (Member for Industries and Labour) : Sir, my Honourable friend Mr. Haigh has drawn the attention of the House to certain practical difficulties which may stand in the way of the adoption of the amendment moved by my Honourable friend from Nagpur. At the same time, there is considerable force in the observations which you made, namely, that what my Honourable friend Sir Hari Singh Gour wants is that this Committee which will be nominated by you should go into this particular question. Therefore, neither the House nor Government is at present committed to the acceptance of this proposition that there should be a Standing House Committee one of whose functions should be the allotment to Members of accommodation or quarters available for their residence. That being the position, on behalf of Government I am not prepared to oppose the amendment of my Honourable friend from Nagpur. At the same time it is a fact that there is a considerable amount of feeling on this question on the part of certain Honourable Members, particularly official Members who come up from the provinces. In view of this feeling, Government would leave the matter to be settled by the free vote of the House. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. President : The original motion was :

" That the Honourable the President do appoint six members of this House to serve on a Committee to consider the question of residence and accommodation for Members of the Indian Legislature, including the use and disposal of the Western Hostel, New Delhi, and that the Council of State be asked to nominate members to serve on the Committee ".

Since which the following amendment has been moved :

" That after the words ' New Delhi ', the following be inserted :

' and the question of constituting a Standing House Committee to deal with all matters connected with the allotment to Members of accommodation or quarters available for their residence '."

The question is that that amendment be made.

The motion was adopted.

Mr. President : The motion, as amended, runs as follows :

"That the Honourable the President do appoint six members of this House to serve on a Committee to consider the question of residence and accommodation for Members of the Indian Legislature, including the use and disposal of the Western Hostel, New Delhi, and the question of constituting a Standing House Committee to deal with all matters connected with the allotment to Members of accommodation or quarters available for their residence, and that the Council of State be asked to nominate members to serve on the Committee ".

The question I have to put is that the motion, as amended, be adopted.

The motion was adopted.

THE INDIAN INCOME-TAX (SECOND AMENDMENT) BILL.

(AMENDMENT OF SECTIONS 2, 23, 28, ETC.)

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett (Finance Member) : Sir, I move that the Bill further to amend the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922, for certain purposes (amendment of sections 2, 23, 28, etc.), be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinions thereon.

This is a Bill designed to do something towards checking what is known as legal evasion of income-tax and super-tax. The provisions of the Bill are technical and obviously the first requisite is that the Bill should be circulated and public opinion elicited thereon. I do not know whether the House desires that I should enter at this stage into the details of the Bill and, on the assumption that they would prefer to be spared from having that done, I will confine myself to moving that the Bill be circulated.

Mr. C. Duraiswamy Aiyangar (Madras ceded districts and Chittoor : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, as this motion is only for circulation I do not propose to detain the House by any detailed examination of the Bill. But at the same time I want to know from the Honourable the Finance Member what are the principles involved in the Bill which he has brought before the House, so that we may get some opinions from the persons to whom the Bill is to be circulated. For instance, I do not find on what principle section 23A is to be added here, giving liberty to the Income-tax Officer either to levy the tax on the income of the individual member of a firm separately or on the profits of the firm as a whole. Is it on the principle of getting as much money as possible ? If the individual member is otherwise not assessable, then add this profits amount to his income and the Income-tax Officer will have the discretion to levy income-tax on the individual separately. If, on the other hand, there is a likelihood of individual members being assessable for their share in the profits of the firm, in addition to their private income-tax, then I suppose it will be upon the firm that the income-tax will be assessable. Is that the principle involved ? Is the discretion to be given to the Income-tax Officer to get some tax by hook or by crook, either by levying the tax on the firm or on the individual members separately, according as such income-tax will be enhanced by such a discretion being exercised ?

Again, in clause 5, I am unable to understand why in 28 (2), because some partners who are not able to get the profits distributed to them on account of some dispute in the firm, everyone should be penalised not only by making them pay the income-tax which they would otherwise have to pay by adding those profits, but by levying a penalty. Disputes in partnership may arise at any time and it does not seem fair that every individual member who is unable to get his profits distributed by the firm should also be asked to pay some penalty for his not getting his profits and for not having included those profits as a portion of his income.

I do not propose to go into further details at this stage and will only ask whether the Honourable the Finance Member in framing this Bill will not also see his way to making some provision for references to the civil courts in each district in cases of minor importance instead of confining the reference always to the High Court. There is a wide demand from assessees that some provision should be made for reference to the local civil courts instead of always making a reference to the High Courts, which may be done in more important cases.

With these suggestions I do not propose to detain the House any further at this stage.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : Sir, I should be glad to have the points raised by my Honourable friend Mr. Duraiswamy Aiyangar carefully considered before the next motion comes on in regard to this Bill. I think he has slightly misunderstood the purpose particularly of clause 5, which is a case of penalties for concealment of income or improper distribution of profits. I think one might say that the principle of this Bill is to prevent income-tax that is due in equity failing to be collected owing to hook and crook, not an effort by the Government by hook or by crook to obtain all sorts of income-tax but to prevent the taxpayer, who is paying equitably, from being unfairly treated in comparison with someone who equitably ought to pay more and is in fact succeeding in evading it. As the motion is only one for circulation I will not detain the House by a more learned or more lengthy discussion of the Bill at this stage.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That the Bill further to amend the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922, for certain purposes (amendment of sections 2, 23, 28, etc.) be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinions thereon."

The motion was adopted.

THE INDIAN FOREST BILL.

Sir Hari Singh Gour (Central Provinces Hindi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, I beg to move that the Bill to consolidate the law relating to forests, the transit of forest-produce and the duty leviable on timber and other forest-produce, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration.

Honourable Members will remember that when introducing this Bill I pointed out to the House that this was a purely consolidating measure. The Statute Law Revision Committee since its inception has consolidated several Acts of the Indian Legislature, the object being to clean up the Statute-book by putting into one consolidating measure what is found scattered throughout the various volumes of the Indian Statute-book. As such this House passed that very important measure, the Succession Act. We have also had one or two minor Acts like the Criminal Tribes Act and one or two others of a similar consolidating character. Following that policy the Committee decided to consolidate the Indian Forests Act, and if Honourable Members will turn to the copy in their hands they will find from the schedule at page 25 that no less than eight different Acts of the Legislature are affected by this measure. I submitted on the last occasion, when a motion was moved by one of the Honourable Members of this House for reference to a Select Committee, that no principle other than the principle of consolidation could be gone into because the purpose and object of consolidation is nothing more than mere consolidation. This House was anxious to consider whether the Bill was purely a consolidating measure or anything more. The Select Committee have since held their sittings and some members wanted to discuss principles and suggest amendments. You, Sir, on the last occasion ruled that it is not the purpose of a purely consolidating measure to revise and amend its underlying principles, and the Chairman of the Select Committee has also ruled to the same effect. We discussed, Sir, the two main points that were raised by one of the members of the Select Committee ; one was the retention of section 34 of the old Act VII of 1878, and the other was a slight verbal change made in section 42 of the Act. Now the Select Committee have fully dealt with both these points, but for the information of Honourable Members I may recapitulate our views on the subject. So far as section 34 of the Forests Act is concerned, it was a transitory provision enacted and inserted for the purpose of safeguarding the rights of persons into whose claims no inquiry had been made before the enforcement of Act VII of 1878, and they were given one year's time within which to set the law in motion for the purpose of settling any claim they may have regarding the forests which were then to be notified. I pointed out, Sir, on the last occasion that this transitory provision spent itself after the expiry of one year from the date of the notifying of the Act. Some Honourable Members hold that this provision should be re-inserted in the consolidating measure, and I wish to point out that the legal effect of re-inserting this provision would be to unsettle all old claims and titles that have been hushed up after inquiry on or before the last day of 1879. Now that is not the object of any Honourable Member of this House. It has been suggested that this Act does not apply to the whole of India and Burma, and there are certain districts, or at any rate one district, excluded from the operation of this Act, and if by notification of the Local Government this Act is extended to those territories, persons possessing private rights would be deprived of the right which is given to those who came under the operation of Act VII of 1878. Now that would have been a perfectly valid argument, and I have no doubt my Honourable colleagues on the Select Committee would have acceded to it, only that the Legislative Department made inquiries and found that in the exempted provinces of Madras and Burma, where they have local Forests Acts of their own, they have a provision analogous to section 34, by which inquiries have been made and titles in those provinces settled. The Legislative Department after considerable research reported to us that there is no place where this Act is to be extended hereafter, and if it is to be extended the Local Government would naturally ask for an ad hoc provision to be added to the Act should they desire to extend its provisions to their local territories. My submission therefore is that it would not only not serve any immediate and useful purpose, but if this provision is re-inserted in the consolidating measure it would confuse titles already settled and set a premium upon litigation.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru (Agra Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : How ?

Sir Hari Singh Gour : My friend Mr. Aney ejaculates, " How ? ".

Mr. M. S. Aney (Berar Representative) : No, Mr. Kunzru.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : I am glad, Sir, that at any rate my friend Mr. Aney who was the protagonist of the opposition on the last occasion now assures me that he is with me. (Laughter.)

Mr. M. S. Aney : No, no.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : I stand corrected. My friend Mr. Aney has put that question through Mr. Kunzru. Now, Sir, the answer is very simple. If you were to re-insert the provisions of section 34—that section runs to the following effect :

" That within 12 months from the date on which this Act comes into force in the territories administered by any Local Government such Government shall, after consideration of the rights of Government and private persons in all forest lands or waste lands then under its executive control, for the purposes of forest conservation determine which of such lands, if any, can, according to justice, equity and good conscience, be classed as reserved .....

I will leave out the rest of the section because it is more or less on the same lines. This section 34 therefore gives the public a new right to compel the Local Government to inquire into their claims within one year from the passing of that Act. That period has long expired and we are only now putting together all the existing law which is contained in eight different Acts of the Legislature. In doing so we have naturally lopped off some dead branches, such as section 34, which would create confusion and unsettle old titles already settled. That is my answer to my friend's query as to how it will affect existing rights.

As regards section 42 which has been slightly altered, my friend's contention was—and I have no doubt it will be repeated on the floor of this House—that while under the original section 42 of the Act the magistrate had the discretion to inflict a double penalty in cases of subsequent conviction, the present draft Bill gives the Local Government the power to make rules for the infliction of double penalties if they should deem it necessary. The view of the Select Committee is that, so far as this section is concerned, it is ambiguous, and if Honourable Members will turn to section 42, they will find that it is ambiguous, because under clause 1 of section 42 we have :

" the Local Government may by such rules prescribe penalties for the infringement thereof imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months or fine which may extend to Rs. 500 or more ", and then we have the second clause :

" double penalties may be inflicted in cases where the offence is committed ".

But whether " the double penalty may be inflicted " must be read in conjunction with " the Local Government may prescribe penalties " or it is an independent clause conferring upon the magistrate jurisdiction to inflict double penalties, is a question upon which section 42 was ambiguous, and the Statute Law Revision Committee thought that the ambiguity must be solved in favour of the subject, the result being that under the corresponding clause we give the Local Government the authority to prescribe double penalties if they consider them necessary. That is all that has been done by the draftsman with the concurrence of the Statute Law Revision Committee in section 42. I, therefore, submit, Sir, that so far as this draft Bill is concerned, it has been thoroughly examined now by the Select Committee, and with the exception of one Honourable Member who has tabled an amendment to which I shall reply, if it is moved, there is absolutely nothing which has in the slightest degree added to or subtracted from the existing statute law appertaining to forests. I therefore submit, Sir, that this House should pass the motion I have made that this Bill be taken into consideration. Sir, I move.

Mr. M. S. Aney : Sir, my friend the Honourable the Mover of this motion has tried to explain what has been done in the Select Committee and how and why the provisions of this Act have been examined in the Committee purely on the principle of consolidation. In this connection, Sir, I should like to remind the House of what was stated by the Honourable the President when the motion for referring this Bill to the Select Committee was pressed to a division last Session. The Honourable the President then declared that the Chairman of the Select Committee should bear in mind that the amendments that should be considered in the Select Committee should have reference to the principle of consolidation. So, that point was again raised in the Select Committee, and the Chairman of the Select Committee ruled that any amendments which have no bearing purely on the principle of consolidation but are intended to have a bearing on the merits of the Forest Act by some changes in other provisions of the Bill could not be considered there ; and therefore the Select Committee had to confine its attention only to such provisions and to such amendments as were intended to show that the law was defective even from the point of view of consolidation. I am stating these facts, Sir, for the sake of emphasising that because the Select Committee has not considered the other amendments and had not examined this Bill from other points of view, it should not be understood that the Forest Law, as it now stands, was in any way acceptable to the Members on this side of the House. The obvious defects of this law had been clearly pointed out when this Bill was discussed in the other place. When the discussion took place in the Council of State it was suggested on behalf of the Government itself that, this being a consolidation measure, Government would not like to consider any amendments on the merits of the Bill, but that Government would be prepared to consider any suggestions that would be made by the House to rectify the law at the next opportunity. Consequently, a Resolution was moved in the other House to appoint a Committee to revise the Indian Forest Law, and that Resolution was in a modified form accepted by the Government. The Resolution has been circulated by the Government to various Provincial Governments to elicit their opinions as to whether a Committee should be appointed to revise the Indian Forest Law and, if so, what should be the nature of the Committee. Up to this time we do not know what decision the Government have arrived at in regard to that Resolution. In reply to certain questions put in the other House, I find that the only reply given by Government is that some opinions have been received and that the matter is still under consideration. If, therefore, the Government are going to give an assurance that in pursuance of that Resolution they will appoint a Committee to revise the Indian Forest Law from all possible points of view to meet the popular demand in this matter, then I might not think it worth while even to move the amendments that stand in my name here ; but if no such assurance is forthcoming, it will be my duty to move at least one of the two amendments that stand in my name here and to show that the Bill, as it stands, is not a purely consolidating measure.

It may be asked what would be the propriety for not moving the amendments even if the Government do not give an assurance that they would appoint a Committee. My answer is this. If they are going to give an early opportunity to revise the whole Act, then the question of considering those provisions which are now being omitted from the present Bill can be appropriately re-opened and even profitably considered afresh along with other cognate points to amend the Law. But if no such assurance is forthcoming, then I will have to consider, Sir, whether I should not now, when this Bill is under consideration, press the amendments that stand in my name.

As regards certain points to which reference was made in the speech made by my friend, Sir Hari Singh Gour, I think I should give a brief reply. I was not satisfied with the explanation given by him here nor with the explanation given in the Select Committee. It has been urged that section 34 of the Act of 1878, the old Act, or rather the existing Act,—because the present Bill has yet to pass into an Act, and come into force—is only a transitory measure. A part of that section has been read by my friend Sir Hari Singh Gour. I do not want to take up the time of the House by reading the whole section, but I shall briefly tell this House what that section is. That section consists of three parts. The first part of that section is that immediately after this clause comes into force, it shall be the duty of the Government within twelve months to determine what parts of the forest, which were till then for the purposes of forest conservancy under the executive management of the Government, should be classed as reserved forests and what parts as protected forests. Then comes in the first proviso to the effect that in the course of such inquiry, Government should try and find out what were the rights of Government as well as those of private persons over the forests that were going to be classed as reserved or " protected " forests respectively. That inquiry has to be made within the aforesaid period by the Government. If any such inquiry has already been made at any time before the application of this Imperial Act, and the rights are settled and a due record has already been prepared, then this new inquiry need not be made and the forest officer should recognise the rights previously settled and recorded. But if any such inquiry was not previously made, and no inquiry contemplated under section 34 be instituted to prepare the record of popular rights within the period of 12 months, then the rights of the Government and of the private persons over those parts which have been classed as " reserved " and " protected " shall remain unaffected and unabridged. It is certainly not merely a transitory or a permissive provision. If the Government for any reason fail to make an inquiry and settle the rights of the people and make a proper record of their rights and consequently no such record is forthcoming in any particular tracts within the province to which the Act is extended, then notwithstanding and even in spite of any notification issued by the Government determining certain forests as reserved and certain forests as protected such rights as the individuals have been exercising over these forests for a number of years will remain unabridged and unaffected. It is a very important proviso from this point of view. Provisions in clauses 12, 13 and 14 of this Bill under Chapter II relate to certain inquiry to be made by the forest officer in regard to Reserved Forests. It will be found that if within three months no claim to their rights has been set up by individuals before the forest settlement officer, the right of the individual shall cease to exist. Now, the Honourable Member can see what the omission of section 34 will mean. The difference is this. If section 34 is retained it is clear that whether any such complaint is made by the person concerned or not, if the Government of its own accord fails to institute any such inquiry, the rights subsist and remain unaffected. The obligation is upon the Government to hold the inquiry and register the rights and there is no lapse of right because the private person has not set up his claim within a period of three months or 12 months. That is the main point of difference. Unfortunately it is not duly taken into account by the Statute Law Revision Committee or the Select Committee. I am confident that if this difference is properly appreciated by this House then the House will agree with me in urging that section 34 cannot without some prejudice to the rights of the people in as much as it leads to the position that if a private person bearing any rights do not apply within three months from the date of the notification which the Government may issue all private rights automatically lapse. Government knows that there are tracts to-day to which the Forest Act is not extended. It was no use for Dr. Gour to inform me that in the second clause of this Bill, the names of the provinces to which the Act is at present extended are mentioned. I will ask him and the Honourable Members to read the third clause, and in that clause of the Bill Honourable Members will find that besides these provinces mentioned in clause 2 provision is made empowering any Local Government to extend this Act either to the whole province or to any part of a province administered by the Local Government. Even in provinces where this Act is already extended, there are certain tracts to which this law does not apply. And if Honourable Members are careful in reading the Gazette of India notifications published from time to time they will find—I know certain recent cases that notifications to extend the application of this Act to new tracts and areas are often published from time to time. There is still room for extension and to move in search of fresh fields and pastures new. That is to say that the process of extension of this Act is still going on. And so long as this process is going on, I maintain, Sir, that the propriety of section 34 undoubtedly exists. That propriety cannot be gainsaid and treated as a redundant superfluity. And if it be merely a consolidating measure, as it is contended on behalf of Government, then my contention is that it is the strongest ground on which this House can urge that the clause which was intended to safeguard the rights of the private person and the Government also in case of certain contingencies must be retained intact and should not be lightly tampered with or interfered with. That is the particular point I wish to make. It is not merely a formal change that is being brought about. It is not merely the elimination of a clause

here and a clause there to remove some real or imaginary ambiguities. A very fanciful contention was urged on a former occasion. Last time when my Honourable and learned friend Sir Hari Singh Gour argued this point before the House, he said that this Act came into force in 1878, and the period of 12 months within which the Government was to inquire was over after 1879. He feared that if this provision, namely, section 34, be retained in this Bill which after being passed will come into force in 1927 or 1928, then that period of 12 months will extend to 1929. And therefore all the orders which might have been made before would be reopened and that would give rise to immense difficulty. He said it would create immense confusion, and incalculable disturbance. Even now he maintains it will create confusion. I think if he reads proviso 2 of section 34, he will find that, if there are inquiries already made with regard to the rights of the people and duly recorded, then that very record had to be accepted by the Government. When this law will come into force, the mere fact that it has come into force in 1928 or any other year will make absolutely no difference. At the same time my Honourable friend will realise that in tracts where any inquiries of this kind have not been previously made the omission of clause 34 will result in great hardship. In certain tracts it has been taken for granted by the Government that the rights must have been settled, as they found that under the old forest conservancy rules certain forests had been already declared State forests. On the strength of these declarations notifying certain forests as State forests Government proceeded to treat them as the reserved and protected forests under this law without any bother of an inquiry contemplated under section 34 The position that is now created is this. The rights which the people have been up till now exercising over these forest areas as legitimate rights will not be legitimate rights immediately after this provision is eliminated from the law. (Sir Hari Singh Gour : " Why ? ") That is the position. The reason is very simple. The implications of this law are not known to many Members. The real difficulty is this. Very few Members have any idea as to how this law is being administered in tracts which are adjacent to the Government forests. The real position is that there are certain parts where Government have declared that certain forests are reserved and certain forests are protected. But they have made absolutely no inquiry in certain parts at all. They have gone by the entries in the official register to classify state forests into two classes aforesaid. But as they did not immediately want waste lands treated and classified as reserved or protected forests for any immediate purpose, they did not find it necessary to make any inquiry to settle and record the rights of the individuals or communities over them and allowed the people to enjoy such rights uninterruptedly as they had been exercising over those parts from time immemorial. Now, it so happens that certain tracts which have been in this way classed in forest records as reserved but virtually left out in the uninterrupted enjoyment of the people are being used by the people for herding their cattle or for similar other purposes. I know a particular instance which very recently occurred in Berar, and which created a good deal of trouble and worry to the villagers. It has occurred to one of the Forest officers in Yeotmal District that a certain waste site in a village was in reality classed as a reserved forest. And he thought that he should enforce the rule that no part of such forest could be used for purposes of herding cattle without express permission. He paid possibly a surprise visit to find all the cattle in the village in that very area. A case was going to be instituted against the owners for using a reserved tract without permission. All the cattle were taken into custody and sent to the cattle pound in a neighbouring village. Now, here there was in my opinion a clear infringement of a right and usage from time immemorial. When this matter came up for consideration before superior forest officers I brought it to the notice of the Forest Officer the provisions in section 34. Have you settled those rights ? Have you made any inquiry. Were the rights of the people over this part of the forest recorded any where ? If not, then their rights remain unaffected, inspite of any official notification. But although criminal proceedings against them were fortunately not started, still they had to release the cattle from the pound on payment of a very heavy sum. Other clauses of the law penalising the use of that tract by certain people, I strongly urged, will not apply in absence of such record. The rights which have been exercised by the people for a number of years must remain unaffected unless there is a specific record duly prepared in the manner provided for by this Act. What I mean to say is that there are possibilities of things of this nature and this House must scrupulously guard against all possible dangers when they consider any piece of legislation.

I urge another reason. Assuming that it is true that the Government have extended the whole of this clause to the whole of India. But it is also true that in every province there are certain big private estates which contain a good deal of forest administered by the proprietor as he liked. Suppose for some reason that land or estate escheats to Government or becomes Government estate. It is undoubtedly a new tract. In the case of such private lands with a considerable forest you will naturally find that the people have been using certain rights over that and if an inquiry which should be made under section 34 be not made to settle and record their rights they can persist in exercising them unmolested, but if this section is taken away to relieve the forest officer from the bother and worry to make any inquiry what will be the position ? The user of these rights of which they have been rightfully in possession from time immemorial will become an illegal act and they shall be liable under sections 26 or 33 of this Act. Well, there is that difficulty. I say that the Statute Law Revision Committee may have made certain inquiries. My learned friend who was on the Select Committee, representing Government, may have given certain information. But what is it ? He did not show that in several parts of the forest which are either administered under this law or which is likely to come under the administration of this law some time later, Government have made certain inquiries and rights have been recorded. The members of the Select Committee did not insist upon seeing any such record. And therefore I am at any rate not at all satisfied with that. Particularly with the certain and definite knowledge which I have got of conditions existing in my own province, it was impossible for me to be satisfied. That is the position according to my understanding. Therefore, I was not satisfied with the information given and I was unable to agree with my colleagues in the Select Committee on this point.

Secondly, Sir, with reference to the other question which is touched by my learned friend, namely, the modification that is made in section 42, I am rather surprised that in the Report of the Select Committee.....

Mr. President : Order, order. The Honourable Member is exhausting all the arguments in favour of his amendments which have not yet been moved.

Mr. M. S. Aney : My position is this that, as I have already stated, if Government are going to give me an assurance that.....

Mr. President : Order, order, the Honourable Member should wait.

Mr. M. S. Aney : In that case I do not want to proceed further with this motion, and I will only state that the explanation given by my learned friend does not at any rate satisfy me, and I think ought not to satisfy any Member in this House.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That the Bill to consolidate the law relating to forests, the transit of forest-produce and the duty leviable on timber and other forest-produce, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration."

The motion was adopted.

Clauses 2 to 34 were added to the Bill.

Mr. President : Mr. Aney.

Mr. M. S. Aney : I am not going to move my amendment.

Clauses 35 to 86 were added to the Bill.

The Schedule was added to the Bill.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The Title and the Preamble were added to the Bill.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Sir, I move that the Bill be passed.

The motion was adopted.

THE TRANSFER OF PROPERTY (AMENDMENT) BILL.

Mr. W. T. M. Wright (Secretary, Legislative Department) : Sir, I introduce a Bill further to amend the Transfer of Property Act, 1882, for certain purposes, which was published under Rule 18 of the Indian Legislative Rules on the 20th August 1927.

(At this stage Sir Hari Singh Gour rose in his place.)

Mr. President : The Honourable Member is not called on.

Sir Hari Singh Gour (Central Provinces Hindi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan) : I thought, Sir.....

Mr. President : Mr. Wright.

THE TRANSFER OF PROPERTY (AMENDMENT) SUPPLEMENTARY BILL.

Mr. W. T. M. Wright (Secretary, Legislative Department) : Sir, I introduce a Bill to supplement the Transfer of Property (Amendment) Act, 192 , which was published together with the Bill which I have just introduced.

Sir Hari Singh Gour (Central Provinces Hindi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, I.....

Mr. President : Is there any point of order ?

Sir Hari Singh Gour : I am raising a point of order.

Mr. President : There is no motion before the House on which a point of order can be raised.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : I am entitled, Sir, to state to the House a point of order.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member can only state a point of order to the Chair in connection with some business which is before the Assembly. There is nothing before the House at present.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : The Bill is before the House.

Mr. President : There is no Bill before the House. The Bills have been introduced.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : I want to point out that the Bills have been introduced without any formal procedure laid down by the Standing Orders.

Mr. President : Order, order. Sir Basil Blackett.

THE INDIAN INCOME-TAX (AMENDMENT) BILL.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett (Finance Member) : Sir, I hope no point of order arises on this Bill of mine. As I explained when I introduced this Bill, it is for the purpose of amending the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922, with reference particularly to the difficult problem of the assessment of tea companies. Under a rule in existence until a short time ago, a specific percentage of the profits of tea companies was laid down as the amount which should be treated as non-agricultural profits. It has been found that there is at any rate some considerable question whether that rule was intra vires. On the other hand the tea companies who have been assessed regard it as most undesirable that the question of the exact percentage of the profits which should be treated as non-agricultural should have to be examined in every individual case. It would mean a great deal of trouble to the tea companies and trouble to the income-tax authorities. It is therefore proposed that we should take power, as we propose in this Statute, to make a rule that will be valid fixing a percentage. If we had been in a position to do so, the Government would much have preferred to introduce a Bill laying down the exact percentage. But we need some more experience in the case of tea companies and in other cases before we can safely do so. We therefore propose in the first instance to proceed as under this measure. Then, when we have obtained fuller experience of the way the matter has been worked, the Government will try to put the matter, as I think all will agree, in a position which will be a more satisfactory one by introducing legislation to fix definite percentages. They cannot do that now, because it is impossible without more experience to know what the figures should be in several of the cases in question.

I move, Sir, that the Bill be taken into consideration.

The motion was adopted.

Clause 2 was added to the Bill.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The Title and Preamble were added to the Bill.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : Sir, I move that the Bill be passed.

The motion was adopted.

THE INDIAN LIGHTHOUSE BILL.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy (Member for Commerce and Railways) : Sir, I move that the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to the provision, maintenance and control of lighthouses by the Government in British India, as passed by the Council of State, be taken into consideration.

Sir, it will not be necessary for me, I think, to speak at any length on the subject of this Bill. The Bill is really part of a scheme that the Government of India have in view for bringing mercantile marine matters of all kinds under the direct control of the Government of India, and this is the first instalment of the Government of India's plan. At present lighthouses on the coast of India are under a different system of administration in almost every province, and I believe that in the sub-province of Sind there is a different arrangement from that which is in force in the rest of the Presidency. This Bill proposes that all the lighthouses should be brought under the control of the Government of India under a uniform system. It provides for the appointment of a Chief Inspector of Lighthouses and of Inspectors of Lighthouses. It classifies lighthouses into general lighthouses which will be under the direct control of the Government of India and the local lighthouses which will be controlled ultimately by the Government of India, but will be administered for the most part by Local Governments and port authorities. It provides for the constitution of an advisory committee on which the interests concerned will be fully represented. And, finally, it provides for the levy of light dues, so that the administration of lighthouses may be self-supporting and may not be a charge on the general tax-payer.

On the subject of this Bill, Mr. President, we have consulted very fully commercial and mercantile opinion. The Bill has been considered by a strong Joint Committee composed of the Members of both Houses. That Committee has presented a unanimous report and I have no doubt that the House will agree that the recommendations of such a Committee ought to be accepted. For that reason, I do not propose to enter into any further explanation of the provisions of the Bill. I should like, however, to refer to two recommendations made by the Joint Committee on particular points. These are recommendations in which they did not propose any amendment in the Bill but recommendations as to the action that Government should take. The first of them is this. They say :

> "The question of inserting a provision requiring that the advice of the Central Advisory Committee should always be accepted was discussed, and we strongly recommend to Government that its advice should in all ordinary cases be accepted."

Well, on that point, Mr. President, I would say this. It is clear that the Government of India must retain ultimate control over expenditure. But subject to this, we are prepared to accept the recommendation that the advice of the Central Advisory Committee should in all ordinary cases be accepted. The second recommendation was as to the constitution of the Advisory Committee. The Joint Committee said :

"As regards the constitution of the Central Advisory Committee we recommend that the Commerce Secretary should be Chairman, and that the Committee should include representatives of the following interests :—Royal Indian Marine (or Royal Indian Navy), shipping registered in India, and commerce, both British and Indian, which should each be represented by an equal number of members appointed after consultation with the commercial bodies concerned."

The Government of India have no objection to accepting the proposed constitution as a suitable constitution for the Committee subject only to this, that as the Joint Committee themselves recognised as time goes on it may be necessary to revise the constitution for certain reasons. The example they give is that eventually it may be necessary to have District Advisory Committees and the District Advisory Committee might suitably elect a member to the Central Advisory Committee.

I do not think, Sir, I need add anything further and I move the motion standing in my name.

The motion was adopted.

Clauses 2 to 22 were added to the Bill.

The Schedule was added to the Bill.

Mr. President : Clause 1.....

(Some Honourable Members rose in their places.)

Honourable Members should not rise when the Chair is standing.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The Title and Preamble were added to the Bill.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I move that the Bill, as passed by the Council of State, be passed.

Mr. W. S. Lamb (Burma : European) : Sir, I desire to give a hearty welcome to this Bill and to the establishment of the principle that such revenue as is secured from light dues shall be utilised to maintain lights and light ships and also towards reduction of the dues payable for lights. I think the House would like to have a certain assurance from the Honourable the Commerce Member in this connection. We are not unacquainted with the ways of Chancellors of Exchequer, and Finance Members, and we should like to hear from our Honourable friend that the principle I have mentioned will always be kept in mind. With regard to the Report of the Select Committee, who have done their work well, I am sure the House would be glad to hear from the Honourable Member for Commerce repetition of the assurance given in another place concerning the Central Advisory Committee. I have no more to say about the Bill. But I should like to say a few words with regard to the Burmah lights. We have a very dangerous coast. I think it is admitted that it is the most dangerous part of the Indian coast, and therefore anything which militates against that efficiency which should at all times characterise the service of the lights is to be condemned. There are quite a number of questions which will engage the attention of the proposed Committee. I should like to mention two. One is this that at the present time the crews of lightships, of which there are five, are not under the terms of the Merchant Shipping Act, although I understand that in Bengal they are under the Act. This, of course, affects the discipline and accordingly efficiency, and I do trust that this particular point will have the early attention of the Advisory Committee. There is another matter, and a more important one. That is the provision of a craft which will attend to the lights and relieve the men who serve those lights. At present these services are being carried out by two trawlers. No doubt they are very good stout sea boats, but being trawlers they have very little accommodation. They cannot carry on board the crew which is required to serve the relieving boats. Further, there is no accommodation for any medical officer, an officer who, I think, is as important as the Captain who commands the trawler or other ship. Now, being served by two trawlers only, when the monsoon comes along, it is quite proper to describe the service as dangerously inadequate. I should like to hear from the Honourable the Commerce Member that one of the very early duties of the Advisory Committee will be to cause to be designed a ship especially fit for the job. I should like to have an assurance of that nature because I regret to say that at the moment I have some misgivings about the attitude of the Government of India towards this matter. Only some months ago a character was arranged for a term of years for a certain vessel to serve the Andamans generally and the lights there and this ship has been described by a nautical friend of mine as " a standing disgrace " and " the worst selection that could possibly have been made." I trust that the proposals of the Government of India will be made in no spirit of cheese-paring and that they will accept recommendations on the lines of certain suggestions I have put before the Department of the Honourable Member. They are not my own suggestions or recommendations. They are the suggestions of a man who has the most intimate acquaintance with the coast lights. Sir, I support the motion.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji (Bombay Central Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, the Honourable the Commerce Member and the Honourable Mr. Lamb have drawn the attention of the House to certain points in the Joint Committee's Report, but with your permission I would like to draw the attention of the House to another point in that Report which unfortunately has been overlooked by the previous speakers. That, Sir, is a reference to the Indianization of the staff engaged in connection with the lighthouses of India. As it happens, this is a Bill upon which the Joint Committee has as important points to make as are made in the body of the Bill itself, and if there were any means by which the Report of the Joint Committee could be tagged on to the Act proper I should have very much preferred that it was done. But the facts being as they are, I would draw the attention of the House to the recommendation of the Joint Committee that, as regards the personnel of this staff and of the expert mechanics, it may be found necessary, to begin with, to recruit them from England. The Committee, however, recommends to Government that an Indian personnel should be trained in the special work as quickly as possible so as to fit them for these posts. This being the verdict of the Joint Committee, I do hope that the Government would try their utmost to get Indians, even to begin with, if possible, for this technical work. And if Indians are not available, then the initial recruitment of non-Indians should be as small as possible. I consider that no more than one or two mechanics need be brought out from England, that simultaneously with them a number of Indian apprentices should be put in, who in a year or two would be fit to take the place of the expert mechanics imported from abroad.

There is, Sir, in the Joint Committee's Report another principle, or rather the recognition of another principle, to which I should like to draw the attention of the House. It is in connection with the composition of the Central Advisory Committee. You will notice, Sir, that the composition is made up of :

(1) The Royal Indian Marine or the Royal Indian Navy,

(2) Shipping registered in India—and this is the point I want to lay stress on—, and

(3) Commerce, both British and Indian, which should each be represented by an equal number of members appointed after consultation with the commercial bodies concerned.

Here, I hope, we have a recognition by the Government of India of the principle that in matters connected with shipping and allied subjects, the Indian Mercantile Marine, which has so far received very niggardly and step-motherly treatment from the Government has a definite place, a place which is its own by right and I hope that the precedent that has been set up now will be followed up in later measures.

With regard to the definition of " Indian shipping ", which is here represented by " shipping registered in India," I should like to draw the attention of the Government to the fact that when at a later date either of their own volition or under pressure of public opinion and of this House, the Government of India see their way, which they do not now, to accept the coastal reservation recommendation of the Indian Mercantile Marine Committee with regard to the development of Indian shipping, I hope they will replace the present definition of Indian shipping as " shipping registered in India " by the definition given in the report of the Indian Mercantile Marine Committee, namely :

(a) that is registered in India ;

(b) that it is owned and managed by an individual Indian or by a Joint Stock Company, public or private, which is registered in India with rupee capital with a majority of Indians on its directorate and a majority of its shares held by Indians ; and (c) that the management of such company is predominantly in the hands of Indians.

This, to my mind, should be the proper meaning of the words " Indian shipping ". But under the circumstances of to-day we have to manage with the definition that was available in the Merchant Shipping Act, namely, that Indian shipping means shipping registered in India.

With regard to the question of separate accounts of lighthouses to which reference was made by my Honourable friend Mr. Lamb, I should like to make it quite clear that the Joint Committee did get a definite undertaking on the part of the Government which has been expressed by them in their remarks on clause 20 which reads as follows :

"We have not amended clause 20 but we here record our recommendation that any surplus to the credit of the lighthouse account should be definitely earmarked for the purpose of lighthouse administration and should not be appropriated for any other purpose".

This is a recommendation which, I trust, will always be borne in mind by the Government along with the other recommendations made in the Joint Committee's Report.

There is just one point more and I will have done with this subject. That is with reference to the exemption of sailing ships from the dues that are payable by them now. Up to the moment, different provinces have had different scales with regard to exemption of sailing ships from the payment of light dues. The original Bill, as introduced by the Government, laid down the limit of 30 tons. The Joint Committee, taking the Burma figure as the one which was likely to cause the least heart-burning, raised the figure to 50. The reason why the Joint Committee raised it to 50 and not to any other figure was that, as they mention, they tried to keep the Burma figure in mind. But, unfortunately the Government themselves are not in a position to give the House any information as regards the various types of sailing ships and their tonnage plying along the Indian coast. The information, at our disposal in the Joint Committee, was more or less empirical and the remedy designed is also very much of that nature. Since the publication of the Report, I have received a telegram from the Chairman of the Buyers and Shipping Chamber at Karachi which reads :

"Reference lighthouse consolidation measure before the Assembly. My Chamber strongly urge sailing craft up to 100 tons be exempted from dues in order to secure some relief from already hampering condition."

In view of this telegram and the representations that have been made or might be made later on by interests concerned, I do hope the Honourable the Commerce Member will, if the case is fully represented to him, see his way to exceed this limit of 50 tons because, after all, as I said before, the figure has been more or less empirically fixed.

Finally, I would just like to say one word with regard to this question of sailing ships which are to be exempted from the operation of the clauses of this Bill. As I said before, the Government did not have sufficient information which they could put before the Joint Committee and I am afraid they have not got that information even now. It is to my mind an example of the utter indifference which the Government have shown to this question of Indian shipping, whether steam or sail, and I do hope that in future no occasion will arise when the Government would come forward with the excuse that they have not in their possession facts and figures, statistics and particulars which would facilitate the work of the House and the Select Committee, and I do hope that the Government would on future occasions be in a position to place all the necessary materials before the Committee and this House so that the country might see that the Government are quite serious in their intention to revive the Indian mercantile marine. Sir, with these words, I support the motion made by the Honourable the Commerce Member.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : Sir, I am indebted to my Honourable friend Mr. Haji for drawing my attention to the recommendation of the Joint Committee which I had intended to mention in my previous speech, but which I inadvertently omitted. The Government of India accept the recommendation of the Committee, namely, that though it may be found necessary to begin with to recruit expert mechanics and the personnel of the staff from England, an Indian personnel should be trained in the special work as quickly as possible so as to fit them for these posts. The Government of India have accepted that recommendation. (Applause.)

Then, Sir, as regards the point that he raised about the limit of tonnage which would justify the exemption of sailing ships from the payment of light dues, as matters stand at present we cannot go beyond the recommendation of the Joint Committee, namely, that the limit should be 50 tons. But once the Advisory Committee has been constituted and the new system has got into working order, there would be no objection to considering whether that limit might not be raised. But, clearly, this is one of the matters on which the opinion of the Advisory Committee will be very important, and as I stated a few minutes ago that in all ordinary cases the Government of India would accept the recommendation of the Advisory Committee, it is clearly out of the question now, even before the Advisory Committee has come into existence, to say what the opinion of the Government of India would be.

Then, my Honourable friend Mr. Lamb asked for an assurance that the light dues would be appropriated solely for the purpose of maintenance and so on of the lighthouses. He had apparently some apprehension in his mind as to the practice to which Chancellors of the Exchequer and Finance Members are said to be addicted when they feel like robbing henroosts. All I can say is that it is the intention of the Government of India that, while the lighthouse administration should be self-supporting, light dues should not be used as a source of profit. (Hear, hear.) I will add this, that the total amount of revenue likely to be obtained from this source is, I think, too small to be an appreciable temptation to my Honourable friend the Finance Member. (Laughter.)

Then, my Honourable friend Mr. Lamb mentioned two matters which, he was anxious, should be brought before the Advisory Committee at an early date. I do not think there ought to be any difficulty about that, and I will certainly make a note of what my Honourable friend has said, so that these matters shall not be overlooked when the Advisory Committee comes into existence.

Finally, I would refer to the closing remarks of my Honourable friend Mr. Haji in which he complained of the indifference which the Government of India in the past had shown in mercantile marine matters. I thought his tone was unduly gloomy, and I missed, I confess, the absence of any recognition of our sign of repentance in the shape of this Bill which the Government of India have placed before the Assembly.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That the Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to the provision, maintenance and control of lighthouses by the Government in British India, as passed by the Council of State, be passed."

The motion was adopted.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar (Home Member) : Sir, I move that the Bill further to amend the Indian Succession Act, 1925, and the Married Women's Property Act, 1874, as passed by the Council of State, be taken into consideration. To Honourable Members who are lawyers the Statement of Objects and Reasons will be adequate to give a clear idea of the intention of this Bill. I think that I shall sufficiently discharge the necessities of the case if I explain very briefly in non-technical language to Honourable Members who are laymen what the Bill sets out to do.

Sections 223 and 236 of the Succession Act of 1925 reproduce provisions of the law which have been in the Indian law since, I think, 1865. They prohibit the grant of probate or of letters of administration to a married woman when the deceased is a Christian or is at any rate not within the categories specified in these two sections. Those provisions were based, and have since been continued without amendment, on the law as it existed in England at that time. Since then, however, there have been many changes in the English law and it is desirable that the Indian law on these points should be brought into conformity with the English law. Nor is it merely a question of any academic discrepancy in the law. This measure was as a matter of fact originally drafted in consequence of representations made to the Government of India by the High Court of Bombay. They pointed out that under modern conditions serious hardship could be caused and as a matter of fact within their knowledge had been caused by the existing prohibition. There may be, for instance, physical reasons which render it impossible in cases arising under these sections for the consent of the husband to be obtained. The object of the Bill therefore is to bring the law into conformity with what is now the English Law in the matter, and also to provide remedies for those specific cases of hardship which have come to notice.

The other part of the Bill limits the liability of a husband in cases in which his wife has obtained probate or letters of administration and is a trustee, executrix or administratix either before or after marriage. The object of clause 3 of the Bill is to limit the husband's liability in that case also in accordance with the principles of the English law in the matter.

I hope, Sir, this brief explanation will commend this small measure to the favourable consideration of the House.

Mr. K. C. Neogy (Dacca Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I have no observations to offer on the present measure but I rise to make an enquiry from the Honourable Member in charge. I was one of the members of the Joint Committee that had to deal with the Indian Succession Consolidation Act of 1925, and when we were dealing with that measure of consolidation the desirability of a general revision of the whole law of succession was pointed out, and, as far as I recollect, Government also admitted the necessity of undertaking a general revision at an early date. I do not know what are the particular reasons that have induced Government to bring up this measure as a sort of piecemeal proposal instead of undertaking the revision of the whole Act as was said would be done.

* Speech not corrected by the Honourable Member.

Mr. President : The question is :

" That the Bill further to amend the Indian Succession Act, 1925, and the Married Women's Property Act, 1874, as passed by the Council of State, be taken into consideration. "

The motion was adopted.

Clauses 2 and 3 were added to the Bill.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The Title and Preamble were added to the Bill.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Sir, I move that the Bill, as passed by the Council of State, be passed.

In making that motion I should like to explain, with regard to what fell from my Honourable and learned friend Mr. Neogy, that the question of a general revision of the law is one on which Government have not yet arrived at any conclusion ; and the reason for introducing this particular measure—which I hope will not fall within the category of those boxes of chocolates for which my Honourable friend has expressed an extreme distaste in which I cordially admit I participate,—the reason for introducing this measure was that specific cases of hardship had been brought to the notice of the Government of India and this amendment had been pressed upon them by the High Court of Bombay as a measure of very considerable urgency.

Sir, I move the motion standing in my name.

The motion was adopted.

THE PRESIDENCY-TOWNS INSOLVENCY (AMENDMENT) BILL.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar (Home Member) : Sir, I move that the Bill further to amend the Presidency-towns Insolvency Act, 1909, for certain purposes, as passed by the Council of State, be taken into consideration.

I think, Sir, this is another case in which it is unnecessary for me to go elaborately into the details and technicalities of the Bill, which again will be apparent to Members of the House who are lawyers, and I propose, therefore, as on the previous measure, to indicate very briefly what the object of this Bill is. It relates to the interpretation which ought to be placed upon sections 7 and 36 of the Presidency-towns Insolvency Act and to elucidate and settle the law on that point. The position is this. Section 7 as it stands appears to give very wide powers to Insolvency Courts to decide questions of priority and all other questions whatsoever, whether of law or of fact, which may arise in any case of insolvency coming within the cognizance of the court. Section 36, on the other hand, empowers the court inter alia to summon before it any person supposed to be indebted to the insolvent and to require such person to produce any documents in his custody or power relating to the insolvent, his dealings or property. If on the examination of any such person the Court is satisfied that he is indebted to the insolvent, the Court may, on the application of the official assignee, order him to pay to the official assignee....the amount, etc. It is important to notice that this section taken alone does not empower the Court to enquire into and to decide a claim which the alleged debtor does not admit.

[Mr. J. Crerar.]

There has been some difference of opinion between various High Courts in India on the subject. The High Courts of Calcutta and Bombay following I think the cursus curiae in England on similar matters have held that the joint effect of these two sections is not to enable the Insolvency Court to decide a claim of this kind unless the claim is admitted. The High Court of Madras have taken a different view and it has been their practice to deal with matters of this kind by a procedure which is known in legal parlance as garnishee summonses and orders. It appears to the Government, as it has appeared to the High Courts who have followed a different procedure, that this might involve a very serious injustice in ordinary circumstances. A person against whom a claim for debt is made has ordinarily certain very definite remedies. He may file a written statement. He may claim to have access to and to examine documents on which the plaintiff relies, and he is entitled to cross-examine the plaintiff and any witnesses that the plaintiff may produce. Now there appears no just reason why any one against whom a claim of that character is made should, merely because his creditor happens to be an insolvent or a person who is a petitioner for insolvency, be deprived of the remedies which are necessary for an equitable determination of the claim. I should like to say incidentally that the proposal which is comprised in the Bill has been laid before the High Court of Madras, and the High Court of Madras have expressed their willingness to adopt the procedure. The object then of the Bill is to bring the law into conformity with the law in England, or rather to make quite clear that the law is so in conformity and to remove all doubts as to the procedure which ought to be followed. Clauses 3 and 5 of the Bill provide for a subsidiary matter. They make it clear that rules may be framed regulating the conditions in which a petitioner in insolvency may be required to produce his books of accounts, to file lists of creditors and debtors and to afford such assistance to the Court as may be prescribed. The necessity for a provision elucidating the law on that point arises from the fact that in some cases rules have been made for this purpose, and in one case at any rate a ruling of the High Court of Calcutta has raised doubts as to whether such rules are intra vires. It is obviously necessary for the convenient and efficient administration of insolvency law and also for the ends of justice that any doubt on that point should be put at an end to and that rules which are framed for this purpose should be of unquestionable validity.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That the Bill further to amend the Presidency-towns Insolvency Act, 1909, for certain purposes, as passed by the Council of State, be taken into consideration."

The motion was adopted.

Clauses 2 to 5 were added to the Bill.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The Title and Preamble were added to the Bill.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Sir, I move that the Bill, as passed by the Council of State, be passed.

The motion was adopted.

THE CANTONMENTS (AMENDMENT) BILL.

Mr. G. M. Young (Army Secretary) : Sir, I move that the Bill further to amend the Cantonments Act, 1924, for certain purposes, be taken into consideration.

This Bill, Sir, is a miscellaneous collection of amendments on points of detail which have come to light in one way or another recently in the working of the Cantonments Act. I have explained those points at length in the Statement of Objects and Reasons, and when I moved for leave to introduce the Bill. I do not suppose that the House will wish me to enter into them again.

Sir, I move.

The motion was adopted.

Clauses 2 to 13 were added to the Bill.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The Title and Preamble were added to the Bill.

Mr. G. M. Young : Sir, I move that the Bill be passed.

The motion was adopted.

THE INDIAN EMIGRATION (AMENDMENT) BILL.

Mr. A. R. Dalal (Secretary, Education, Health and Lands) : Sir, I move that the Bill to amend the Indian Emigration Act, 1922, for a certain purpose, be taken into consideration.

It is unnecessary for me to explain the object of this Bill as I have already done it more than once in introducing the Resolution on the subject of ratifying the Convention, and I shall therefore confine myself to a few comments on the two operative clauses of this very simple and small measure. Under clause 2 we define the term " emigrant ship " as " any ship specially chartered for the conveyance of emigrants, or conveying emigrants exceeding a number to be prescribed ". A ship specially chartered for the conveyance of emigrants becomes ipso facto an emigrant ship. But it may happen that passenger vessels might carry emigrants in large numbers and in that case Government might consider it advisable to include them under the definition of emigrant ships so as to extend to them the provisions of the Indian Emigration Act. There is a further proviso to this clause which runs :

" Provided that the Governor General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, declare that ships conveying emigrants to any specified port shall not be deemed to be emigrant ships."

The object of this proviso is to exempt the ports of Ceylon and the Malay States at present from the provisions of this Bill. As I have explained in moving my Resolution on the ratification of the Convention, it is not necessary to institute any system of inspection of emigrants on board ships plying to Ceylon, which is merely a short journey across the straits by what is practically a ferry boat ; and as for the Malay States we have already a system of inspection by the Malay Government itself. It would not therefore be necessary for us to extend this measure to ports which might be called home-trade ports. As for the definition of what are home-trade ships I would draw the attention of the House to section 2 (3) of the Indian Merchant Shipping Act, which runs as follows :

" Home-trade ship means a ship employed in trading between any ports in British India or between any ports in British India and any port or place on the continent of India or in the Straits Settlements or in the island of Ceylon."

As the House will notice we have reserved power, if and when it is necessary, to extend the provisions of this Act to any port even within home waters, if we consider it necessary. But for the present we do not consider it necessary to extend the provisions of this Bill to the ports of Ceylon and the Malay Straits.

As for clause 3 (1), it is purely a drafting clause. Under clause 3 (2), we take upon ourselves the power to make rules for the purpose of providing for the safety and well being of emigrants during the voyage. Under the existing clause 24 of the Indian Emigration Act, we have power to provide for the safety, well-being and protection of the emigrants up to the date of their embarkation and on their return, but not during the voyage. But by this clause we take upon ourselves the power to provide for their safety, protection and well-being during the voyage. Sir, I move.

The motion was adopted.

Mr. President : The question is :

" That clause 2 do stand part of the Bill."

Mr. N. M. Joshi (Nominated : Labour Interests) : Sir, I move :

" That in clause 2 of the Bill, in the proposed clause (cc), after the word ' conveying ' the words ' more than ten ' be inserted ; and the words ' exceeding a number to be prescribed ' be omitted."

The object of my amendment is that the minimum number of emigrants which is required to be carried by a ship in order to constitute it an emigrant ship should be prescribed by this House and not by the Government of India. Sir, the personnel and the policy of the Government of India vary from period to period. To-day we may have a progressive department which manages this business of emigration; but to-morrow we may not have such a progressive department. It is, therefore, better that the minimum number of emigrants which is necessary to constitute an emigrant ship should be defined by this House, so that the definition may not vary according to the vagaries of the Government of India of a particular period. I therefore think that my amendment is very necessary and reasonable.

As regards the second portion of my amendment, it is also quite necessary, because if we once fix the number at 10, we have to omit the latter portion of the first part of sub-clause (cc).

I hope, Sir, the House will accept my amendment.

Mr A. R. Dalal : Sir, I very much regret that I cannot accept the amendment moved by my friend Mr. Joshi. I think, Sir, I have repeated almost to the point of weariness that the object of the Convention was not the institution of any new system of inspection of emigrants where none existed, but the simplification of the system of inspection of emigrants where it did exist. Now, Sir, what would be the result of accepting the amendment of my Honourable friend Mr. Joshi ? The result would be that whenever any ten persons who come under the definition of the word " emigrants " travel, even say to Ceylon, immediately all the provisions of the Indian Emigration Act including the various Articles of the Convention would come into operation. Now, has my friend put forward a single argument to prove the necessity of such a provision ? Has he proved that there are any hardships undergone by emigrants who now travel to Ceylon and the Malay States ? I submit, Sir, that he has not attempted to do anything of the sort.

I would draw the attention of the House to the provision of the old Emigration Act, 1908. Section 2 (4) of that Act says :

" ' Emigrant ' and ' emigration ' denote the departure by sea out of British India of a Native of India under an agreement to labour for hire in some country beyond the limits of India other than the Island of Ceylon or the Strait Settlements ".

A similar provision exists in the British Act, section 364, which says :

" The provision of this part of the Act respecting emigrant ships shall apply to all voyages from the British Islands to any port out of Europe and not within the military.... ".

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask the Honourable Member on which of my amendment he is speaking, because I have not moved all of them. I thought he was speaking on the amendments which I have not yet moved.

Mr. A. R. Dalal : Sir, if we accept the Honourable Mr. Joshi's amendment and do not take to ourselves the power to define the number of emigrants who travel by what we call emigrant ships, then I submit the arguments which I have just adduced are valid. As a matter of fact, the two amendments of my friend Mr. Joshi are so closely interconnected that it is really difficult to speak on the one without touching upon the other. Under the British Act also, I find that the number of steerage passengers which a ship should carry to constitute it an emigrant ship is 50, and not 10, as now proposed by my friend Mr. Joshi. I submit, Sir, that for these reasons I cannot accept my friend Mr. Joshi's amendment. Apart from that, as I have mentioned before, he has not made out a case to prove that any hardship is now undergone by passengers who travel to Ceylon or the Malay States, to which ports alone the Emigration Act is now applied and which alone we propose to exempt from the proviso.

Mr. President : The original question was :

" That clause 2 do stand part of the Bill ".

Since which an amendment has been moved :

" That in clause 2 of the Bill, in the proposed clause (cc) after the word ' conveying ' the words ' more than ten ' be inserted ; and the words ' exceeding a number to be prescribed ' be omitted."

The question I have to put is that that amendment be made.

The motion was negatived.

Mr. President (to Mr. N. M. Joshi) : Does the Honourable Member wish to proceed further with his second amendment ?

(Several Honourable Members : " Withdraw, withdraw ".)

Mr. N. M. Joshi : I move, Sir :

" That in clause 2 of the Bill, in the proposed clause (cc), the proviso be omitted."

Sir, this proviso gives power to the Government of India to make an exception, namely, that even though a ship may be chartered for carrying emigrants or even though a ship may be carrying emigrants of the prescribed number, still the ship may not be called an emigrant ship. Sir, the Honourable Member in charge of the Bill explained that it is not the intention of the Government of India to apply this Act to emigrant ships going to Ceylon or the Malay States, and he gave it as a reason for the policy which the Government are adopting that Ceylon and the Malay States in the first place are what he calls " home-trade ports ". Sir, Ceylon and the Malay States may be " home-trade ports ", from the point of view of the British Government, because they are under the same Imperial Government, but from the point of view of Indian emigrants, they are not home-trade ports. Our Government has no control over the Ceylon Government nor over the Malay Straits. I therefore think that the argument that these two ports are called home-trade ports cannot have much influence on the decision of this House as regards that point.

Secondly, he said that at present the ships conveying emigrants are being inspected by the Inspectors of the Government of Malaya and the Straits Settlements. Now, Sir, my point is that if Indians are being carried as emigrants on ships, the ships ought to be inspected not by the Inspectors appointed by the Government of Malaya but by the Inspectors appointed by the Government of India. It is only then that the emigrants will receive adequate protection. The Honourable Member in charge of the Bill stated that, so far no complaints have been received. Sir, it is difficult for me to say when Government will say that complaints are received. I have read several times in the Press that the condition of deck passengers going to Malaya and the Straits Settlements is not quite good and Mr. C. F. Andrews has once or twice made serious complaints about the point. I therefore think, Sir, that it is not right that we should give power to the Government of India to exempt ships going to the ports of Ceylon and Malaya from the operations of this Bill. I hope, Sir, the House will accept my amendment.

Mr. A. R. Dalal : Sir, I regret I cannot accept the amendment. The only point that the Honourable the Mover of the amendment has made is that certain hardships are being undergone by deck passengers travelling to Malaya and that it is necessary for the Government to see that those hardships should be removed. I understand, Sir, that the Report of the Deck Passengers Committee is now under consideration.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask when was the Report of the Deck Passengers Committee made ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : I am afraid, Sir, he must address that question to the Honourable Member for Commerce.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji (Bombay Central Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Was it not in 1921, Sir ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : That point, I submit, Sir, does not arise out of the consideration of this measure. If any hardships are being undergone by deck passengers, they are being undergone by deck passengers travelling throughout the various ports and not merely by deck passengers travelling to Malaya. As for the conditions of the voyage of emigrants to the Malaya States, perhaps, I might expand my remarks to a certain extent. Recently, the Government of the Malay States urged the shipping companies to increase the number of their vessels and the accommodation on board ship, and I understand that two very fine vessels have been put on by the shipping companies at the request of the Malaya Government for the conveyance of emigrants and those vessels which were formerly conveying 5,000 British troops are now only conveying 3,000 emigrants. The accommodation provided for emigrants travelling to the Malay States is therefore very much in excess of what is laid down under our Indian Merchant Shipping Act and is better than the accommodation provided for British troops. Under these circumstances, Sir, I do not think that my Honourable friend has made out any case for removing the proviso altogether. If we were going to do so, we should have to consult the shipping companies and it would be impossible for us to carry this measure through in the present Session and that would be defeating the Bill altogether, because we would not be able to give effect then to the recommendation of the International Labour Organisation and bring into operation the provisions of this Convention by the 1st January 1928.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That in clause 2 of the Bill, in the proposed clause (cc), the proviso be omitted."

The motion was negatived.

Clauses 2 and 3 were added to the Bill.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The Title and Preamble were added to the Bill.

Mr. A. R. Dalal : Sir, I move that the Bill be passed.

The motion was adopted.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Twenty Minutes to Three of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Twenty Minutes to Three of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

RESOLUTION RE CENSORSHIP OF CINEMATOGRAPH FILMS.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar (Home Member) : Sir, I beg to move the following Resolution :

"That this Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council that he be pleased to appoint a Committee to examine and report on the system of censorship of cinematograph films in India and to consider whether it is desirable that any steps should be taken to encourage the exhibition of films produced within the British Empire generally and the production and exhibition of Indian films in particular."

Sir, in view of the fact that a considerable amount of criticism has lately been passed in this House upon the appointment of Committees and of the fact that on some occasions the Government of India have been unwilling to appoint Committees which this House has been desirous of appointing, I should have some hesitation in making this motion if I did not feel confident that I had a really strong and convincing case to lay before the House. I think that in the matter of appointing Committees there are two considerations to be taken into account. The first is whether there is a problem of sufficient importance and urgency to call for an inquiry and the second whether a Committee of inquiry is the best means of carrying it out. I shall revert to this particular point later. Meantime, I think I need say very little to emphasise the great importance of this question. It has been pressed very strongly upon the notice of Government in many ways and in particular on more than one occasion by Resolutions moved in the Indian Legislature. The last occasion, in fact, on which it was prominently brought to the notice of Government was the Resolution moved by the Honourable and learned gentleman who is the Leader of the Congress Party in another place. Sir, the rapid and extraordinarily wide development of the cinematograph throughout the world has brought a new force into being. It is as a matter of fact now one of the great forces for good or evil now operating upon society. In respect of very large sections of the population it rivals, if in some cases it does not even surpass, the power of the printing press and the platform and even the pulpit for the communication and dissemination and formation of ideas. It has a peculiar appeal because it appeals directly to the eye. It is not only that the cinema has become a favourite amusement of large sections of the community. We have to deal with what is not only a great force but what may be a great art. And in dealing with matters of that kind, we have to be very careful of the principles on which we proceed and the expedients by which we propose to operate. Now, Sir, the censorship in itself, however efficient the censorship may be, is by no means a final answer to the various problems which the cinema sets up. Censorship in all forms is an extremely difficult and extremely delicate task. It imposes a very heavy responsibility on those who are entrusted with it and it is not unnatural that the operations of the censorship should be subject to a very great deal of criticism. Indeed, Sir, I do not overstate the case when I say that an official censorship set up by law of all forms of official activity is itself one of the most exposed to censure. It is by no means easy to establish any rigid or hard-bound rules by which the censorship could operate. If, for example, we set out to exclude from the cinema such matter as an educational authority might exclude from school books we should find ourselves very much in the wrong. If we attempt to proceed on rigid principles of that kind, if I may paraphrase a familiar phrase, the public would fight and the public would be right.

Sir, I intend to dwell very briefly on what is the existing law. Two Statutes were passed, one in 1918, and one which very considerably amended it in 1919, to set up a censorship. The main principle adopted was that the Government of India should be empowered to authorise Local Governments to institute boards of censors and it was then provided that at least half of such boards should consist of non-official members. In pursuance of those powers the Government of India have authorised the Local Governments of Bombay, Madras, Calcutta and Burma to institute such boards. Those provinces have been selected for the natural reason that they are sea port towns and the points at which the greater part of films shown in India come into the country. Other Local Governments are of course not left without powers. The certificates of films which are censored by the boards at the 4 centres I have mentioned are in the first instance valid for any part of India. But the Local Government may at its own discretion declare to be uncertificated any film which they consider unsuitable for exhibition in their own jurisdiction, and such a film cannot be exhibited. Other local authorities have also powers enabling them to deal with matters arising in their charge. The District Magistrate, for example, may, if he finds that a film which is being exhibited or is proposed to be exhibited, in his charge, is unsuitable, suspend the certificate and submit the case for the orders of the Local Government. That, Sir, is the general existing machinery and so far as the actual powers which it conveys are concerned, I do not think they are inadequate. The question is largely whether we have arrived at the most convenient method of applying them. As I have said, it is impossible to attempt to establish any machinery with standards of universal application.

The kind of criticism which has been made against the operation of the existing censorship is of a very diverse character. Exception has been taken by members of the European community, to a class of films which has particularly aroused the criticism of the members of that community and which are of a type of film, usually coming from America, which, without coming within the extreme limits which obviously render the film unfit for exhibition, nevertheless represent customs of society and manners in an undesirable light. That objection has been taken not only by the members of the European community. The objection has been taken equally strongly and in respect of the same matter by Indian opinion, and the point was argued at very considerable length and with great force and lucidity by the Honourable and learned member, to whom I have already referred, in another place. Then there are questions of a provincial point of view. For example, there is a case which came to my personal notice. It was a film dealing with the life of Buddha. It was imported I think, at Bombay and was there certified. The film, as a matter of fact, dealt with a great and sublime episode in a reverent and respectful spirit. It was produced in Bombay, Calcutta and in many parts of India without any objection being taken to it. But when it was produced in Burma, very strong exception was taken to it. There are several instances of that kind which I could quote which indicate that films may be passed by the board of censors according to very reasonable standards for large cities like Bombay or Calcutta, but which, nevertheless, when they are exhibited to less sophisticated audiences in Upper India, are found to be objectionable. That point of view has been impressed upon the Government of India from several parts of the up-country of India. As regards the criticisms that have been made regarding the work of the boards of censors, I should like to point out that to a very large extent they have been of a very general nature, which makes it difficult for the boards to take effective notice of them. I would suggest one practical measure that if in any film anything obviously objectionable comes to the notice of any private person, the best course is to call the attention of the board of censors which certified it, not in general but in specific terms. Criticism of that character would be of very material assistance to the Boards.

Now, Sir, in the various discussions which have taken place on our general system of censorship, on more than one occasion the suggestion has been made that the particular machinery set up by the Acts of 1918 and 1919 was not well conceived. A non-official Member of the Legislature actually urged upon the Government of India that the censorship ought to be strictly official, strictly stipendiary and central. There are some obvious objections to that course being taken, but it is a view which has been very widely held, even by Indian public opinion. Of course, if any change were made in that respect, it would be necessary that the matter should come before the House in the form of legislation. Now, in referring to the criticisms which have been levelled upon the existing machinery of the censorship, I desire particularly to be understood as not in any way endorsing those criticisms. I think that the work done by the two main boards which deal with the greater part of the work, namely, those at Bombay and Calcutta, has been carried out on the whole extremely well and that the country is under an obligation to the members of those boards, both official and non-official. The standards that they have set up are, on the whole, sound and practical. But there are, as I have pointed out inherent difficulties in the case and it is desirable that the whole system should be overhauled and examined.

The second part of my Resolution refers to a somewhat different matter. It refers to the question of the industry as distinct from the question of the censorship. The Resolution refers in particular to the films produced within the Empire and especially to those manufactured in India. The question was raised before the Imperial Conference I think two years ago, on which India was represented. A resolution was passed suggesting that all the Dominions represented at the Conference should consider this question.

Lala Lajpat Rai (Jullundur Division : Non-Muhammadan) : May I ask who represented India in that Conference ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I think it was Mr. Chadwick, but I am not quite sure. At any rate, that resolution was adopted. Whether we find it possible to proceed on these lines or not, it would be premature to say. That is a question which might very well be examined. But, in particular, I think the question of the Indian film industry is one which ought to engage the sympathy of this House and is a matter which ought to be inquired into. At the present moment the manufacture of films in India has hardly got beyond the initial stage. There is no reason why it should not become a large and a thriving indigenous industry. Personally, I should welcome a large extension of the manufacture of films in India because I consider that Indian films, if properly contrived and properly treated, would be in many respects more attractive to the average Indian audience than foreign films, the attractions of which often are of a very doubtful character. I think that films of that character, if we could get them, would not only be more instructive and more interesting to the Indian public, but would do a great deal to squeeze out from the market those films which we all unitedly condemn. I think, therefore that if a committee of inquiry could devise means by which this nascent Indian industry could be encouraged and put upon a sound footing, it would have rendered a very great service not only from an industrial point of view but from the point of view of instruction and healthy amusement.

Now, Sir, I do not want to delay the House longer on this point. I only wish to say this. The constitution of the Committee which the Government of India have in mind would be a small committee with a preponderance of non-official representation. We contemplate a committee with a non-official Indian chairman and I think that it would not be improper on my part to inform the House that if this Resolution is passed and the committee is duly appointed, Diwan Bahadur T. Rangachariar, late Member and Vice-President of this House, has been good enough with great inconvenience to himself to consent to assume the duties of the Chairman. (Applause.) Of the five other members of the Committee, we propose that three should be non-official, two of them Indian and one a non-official European ; that is to say, in all four non-officials of whom three, including the Chairman should be Indian. The remaining two members were contemplated to be officials. The necessity of that is, I think, apparent. The question of cinematograph censorship, the whole organisation that has been set up, is a matter now of very considerable complexity and technicality and a purely non-official committee, however, constituted, would spend a very great deal of their time in exploring, the voluminous, almost overwhelming correspondence, which exists on the subject before they could really extricate the issues to which their attention ought to be directed.

I revert now to the point why it is desirable that a committee should be appointed to deal with this problem. The magnitude of the problem, its complexity and its difficulty will, I think, be recognised generally. When I say that we cannot get any further without the appointment of a special agency, I have some credentials for expressing that opinion. I have myself been personally connected for nearly nine years now with the whole course of the correspondence and discussions which have taken place in the matter of cinematograph censorship from 1918 when the first Act was passed. I have seen it from the point of view of a local board of censors. I have seen it from the point of view of the Local Government. I have seen it from the point of view of the Government of India. I hardly like to compute the many hours, the many days which I have spent in reading the extraordinarily voluminous mass of correspondence, of despatches, and of other proceedings on paper in the course of the enquiry. I am convinced that we have now arrived at a stage when nothing effective can really be attained without some special agency for the purpose. The ordinary methods of correspondence will serve merely to add to the volume of our records without adding very much to our knowledge of the subject or to the practical expedients which we should undertake to deal with the question. I am convinced of that, and I hope the House will agree with me. We have now, I say, reached the stage where the ordinary method of examining questions of public importance by correspondence between the Government of India and the Local Government and between the Local Government and the various subordinate authorities has been nearly exhausted. We have passed that stage and it is because I am convinced, that we have passed that stage, that I have put forward this proposal before the House. If the House agrees with me that this is an important question, one which ought to engage the attention both of the executive and the Legislature, one on which some advance ought to be made, then I trust it will agree with me that the committee that I have suggested ought to be appointed.

Mr. C. Duraiswami Aiyangar (Madras ceded districts and Chittoor : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I rise to move the amendment which I have given notice of and which runs as follows :

"That for the original Resolution the following be substituted :—

'This Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council that he be pleased to appoint a committee consisting of a majority of non-official Indians with an Indian as the President of the committee :

(a) to examine and report on the system of censorship of cinematograph films in India ;

(b) to examine and report on the kind of films now exhibited in the various theatres ;

(c) to suggest legislative measures to be adopted for preventing and penalising the exhibition of films having a demoralising effect ;

(d) to consider and report on the desirability of preventing religion being dragged into the films of cinematograph '."

Sir, I have heard with great pleasure the fine arguments of the Honourable the Home Member in presenting his case for proving the necessity of appointing a committee for cinematograph censorship. The Honourable the Home Member started by saying that this House is naturally prejudiced against committees and that, therefore, he with great diffidence moved the Resolution relating to the appointment of a committee. But I may assure him that, if the Government have the same warmth in putting into force the recommendations of a committee as they have at its institution or inauguration, surely much of the prejudice of this part of the House would have faded long ago. On the other hand, what do we find in practice ? We find in practice at the inauguration of a committee, all the warmth and zeal is exhibited by the Government. They start with big pronouncements ; they start with pompous declarations and they start with all sorts of communications. But after the committee have sat for a long time and after they have spent lakhs of rupees of public money in their investigations, and after they have made the recommendations, then comes all the delay and the disinclination and the aversion to give effect to those recommendations. If this be the conduct pursued by the Government of India, we are amply justified in viewing with alarm the starting of any committee. I hope the Honourable the Home Member will in this case, at least, try to give effect to the opinion of the Indian members on the committee, such as he has described to us, as forming the constitution of this committee.

Sir, when I read this Resolution, I considered, at first sight, that it was of the gravest importance that a committee of this nature must be appointed to make the enquiries under contemplation. But, when I got deep into this, I found the Resolution as framed by the Honourable the Home Member contained words which must be taken with a little bit of suspicion and alarm by this part of the House. Sir, in this Resolution the Honourable the Home Member says :

"That the committee should consider whether it is desirable that any steps should be taken to encourage the exhibition of films produced within the British Empire generally and the production and exhibition of Indian films in particular."

Sir, I do not know why this partiality should be exhibited for films produced in the British Empire alone. If the films exhibited in cinematographs are to have an educative value to the audience which are attracted to it, then I cannot understand this partiality shown to the British products. I, for one, Sir, will always be willing to have films of all countries exhibited in cinematographs provided they do not have a demoralising effect, provided they are not calculated to humiliate one section of the world and exaggerate the virtue of another section of the globe. If that be the object with which these films are exhibited, if the cinematographs represent the true state of conditions, they thereby act as an educative force. Then, I am sure, films coming from Japan, films coming from China, those coming from Russia, from Germany or those coming from any country for the matter of that, must necessarily be wholeheartedly welcome to Indians. I do not for one moment understand why this Imperial Preference, why this preference for British films alone must be shown even in the cinematograph industry. They have a good deal of preference in every industry and in all other things that concern the British interests. At least so far as the film industry is concerned, let them not have this partiality for British Empire films, or for Imperial films alone.

Sir, the Honourable the Home Member has also stated that the censorship is being made effective and is worked with more or less efficiency. But, Sir, the proof of the pudding is in the eating. When we see the various kinds of films that are exhibited in this country, we find that there has been absolutely no efficient or effective control over the exhibition or the selection of appropriate films in India. I am glad to hear from the Honourable the Home Member that the European community itself has expressed resentment always at the manner in which the Western life is depicted in the films in this country. Yes, they feel it, and I wish that feeling is also reciprocated. I wish that it is also realised that when we Indians are depicted in books like that of Catherine Mayo and when we resent the atrocious manner in which we are depicted in books of that sort, I hope that the Honourable the Home Member will realise and appreciate the feeling of Indians. I say with all the emphasis that I can command that we are injured by such films, by such book-films and by such treatises aided and subsidised and financed by the various persons who are interested in humiliating this country. If, Sir, some of the pictures which are depicted in this book are to be transformed into films and brought to this country and exhibited in the cinematographs, then I hope the Honourable the Home Member will stand by our side and see that these films are prohibited. I feel for the European community. I appreciate their indignation when Western life is depicted in the most undesirable ways in this country. I hope that feeling will also be reciprocated by the Honourable the Home Member so far as we are concerned.

Sir, the Honourable the Home Member has informed us what the constitution of this Committee is going to be and he has informed us that the Indian President has already been selected. I am glad to hear that. Sir, very often we do realise that Committees are pre-arranged, pre-formed, and everything is settled and the recommendation of this House is only a formal affair. However, if this Committee is properly constituted we shall have not the least objection to that. But as it is we do not as a matter of fact find that there is a majority of non-official Indians, and I do not see how Government will suffer if they satisfy the desire of this part of the House by adding one more Indian and thus make it a majority, which my amendment seeks to do.

In the amendment of which I have given notice I have not tried to exclude any of the main purposes for which this Committee is to be appointed according to the scope of the Resolution moved by the Honourable the Home Member. But I wanted to emphasise the fact that certain necessary instructions must be given to the Committee in the shape of definite propositions and definite powers which they have to exercise as members of the Committee. Oftentimes you find that the members of a Committee are told that a particular enquiry or a particular investigation is not exactly within the scope of the reference. To avoid that sort of thing I place before the House certain items of specific reference which must be considered by the Committee. First of all, I say, Sir, it is " to examine and report on the system of censorship of cinematograph films in India "—which I have reproduced from the Honourable the Home Member's Resolution itself ; but I have also asked them not only to examine and report on the system of censorship but to examine the actual films that are being exhibited in the various cinematographs, so that they may see how far the censorship is obeyed. If the censorship is not properly obeyed and is in practice ineffective it is the duty of the Government to frame the necessary legislation in order not only to prevent undesirable films coming into existence but also to punish those who have exhibited films contrary to the censorship.

Now, Sir, the most important thing that I wanted to put into this amendment of mine is the question of religion not being dragged into the cinematographs ; and I am glad to see that the Honourable the Home Member has himself stated an instance where the Life of Buddha was exhibited as a picture and approved in various parts of this country but when it went to Burma there the devotees of Buddha resented it and it was found to wound the religious feelings of Buddhists in that province. I can also quote to my Honourable friend the Home Member several other cases in which religion and religious legends and incidents which are recorded in the Puranas and the Holy Texts have been dragged into the films. There is the birth of Krishna, there is the Kalinga Mardana Droupadi Vastrapaharana. So many things of this character are now being manufactured by Indian film producers. I found also at these exhibitions that a good deal of Puranic history has been converted into some false stories, legends and other things. So great is the mutilation of it that when these pictures are taken to other countries, as sure as anything those other countries will try to ridicule them without understanding where the mistake lies or where the mistake does not lie. In this connection I may point out to the Honourable the Home Member the remarks of the Editor of the Madras Mail about the mentality of the persons who attend these cinematograph exhibitions. He says :

" It is extremely difficult for a member of the audience constantly to remind himself that the scenes he is witnessing are influenced by the place of their production, the nationality of their producer, the kind of people he works with, the producer himself and by the actors considered in similar relations. Even the most aloof, critical and highly educated person is only partially able to rid himself of the impression that the camera does not lie when a film is convincingly presented."

That shows the enormous psychic force and the psychological effect which is produced by the films upon persons of various kinds of education and culture who are attracted to them, and it is absolutely necessary that a good deal of care should be taken in seeing that the Puranas and other religious subjects are not brought into the scene of ordinary cinematographs. Of course the Honourable the Home Member has stated how British people do not appreciate and even condemn the American cinemas. I believe the reason is also mentioned by the Editor of the Madras Mail as to where the crux of it lies. The Madras Mail says :

"The outcry against the American war film 'The Big Parade', for example, was directed not against any actual details of presentation, but against the underlying assumption of the film that America won the war."

Therefore the British people naturally resent America exhibiting in all the cinematographs that they won the war, and not the British people. And if the British resent this simple thing, how much more must we resent it if our religion is sought to be exposed even to the extent of being humiliated by foul and perverse stories. Therefore, I am strongly of opinion that much care must be taken by this Committee in prescribing what kinds of films alone can be exhibited. Sir, the film exhibitor after all is not there for educating the people ; he is not an educationist. On the other hand, he is a commercial man. The more he can draw people to his shows, the more profitable it is for him. Therefore he mixes up so many things which are false but which he wants to make appear true, as the Editor of the Madras Mail again points out :

"For him a historical picture means 90 per cent. production and 10 per cent. historicity. Production is the art of making the impossible credible. British historical films have largely succeeded in making the truth incredible."

If, in dealing with history, the truth is presented in such a crude and undesirable manner what shall we say when they begin to deal with our Puranas which belong to 5,000 or even 10,000 years ago ? They are exhibited to us in most humiliating forms and in figures which are ridiculous, humiliating and demoralising. I say, Sir, that it is absolutely necessary that this Committee should work promptly and immediately. It is also equally necessary that as we are dealing with the exhibition of films in this country and dealing with films relating to this country, the majority of that Committee must be Indians. Indian sentiment must prevail and it must be properly brought before the notice of the Committee. These things are absolutely essential and, therefore, I request the Honourable the Home Member to consent to this amendment by raising the number of non-official Indians that are to sit upon this Committee, to such an extent as to make it a majority. Certainly he is interested in seeing that the films are properly regulated, controlled and checked in the interests of both the European as well as the Indian community ; and among non-officials there are certain Europeans domiciled here who will no doubt take an interest in this matter. I will go to the length even of not objecting to such a member on the Committee who will make it a non-official Indian majority. I for one have been anxious that this Committee should commence its existence soon if it is to do really useful work ; and therefore it is that I did not put into my amendment that the non-official members of the Committee must be elected by the elected members of the Legislature which might act as a red rag to the Government. I avoided all these expressions for the sake of promptly bringing into existence this Committee, and provided the Honourable the Home Member agrees with my view in this matter, a view which I believe is shared by all my Honourable friends on this side of the House, the Committee will be quite acceptable to the Indian community.

Sir, I move the amendment.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub (Rohilkund and Kumaon Divisions : Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I am fully alive to the necessity of appointing a Committee for the censorship of films, but I agree with my Honourable friend Mr. Duraiswamy Aiyangar that the sphere of the activities of this Committee should not be confined only to encourage the exhibition of films produced within the British Empire. I think, Sir, as he has already pointed out, that no Imperial preference should be given in this connection.

The other point, and the point in my opinion which is more important than that, is the appointment of the Chairman of this Committee. Sir, I have great respect for the Honourable Mr. Rangachariar. He was for a long time a Member of this Assembly and I have very great regard for his ability. But I consider it a slur upon the present Members of this House that an outsider should be given preference in being appointed to an office or as a member of a committee. I note that the Honourable Mr. Rangachariar was appointed by the Government to represent India in Australia last year, and now I find that the same Honourable gentleman is appointed as Chairman of this Committee. It means that the Government have no faith in the capacity of the present Members of this House or that they consider that the present Members are not fit to hold that office in the Committee which is being appointed. I have not the slightest idea of saying anything against the Honourable Mr. Rangachariar, but what I submit is that making a selection of the members and office bearers of such Committees the rights of the present Members of the House should be kept in the forefront. If, of course, no Member of this House is willing to serve or is capable of working on such Committees, then an outsider may be appointed. But as long as Members of the House are willing and capable of holding office or of being Members, they should be given preference over outsiders. The work of censorship of cinematographs is not I think such a highly technical thing for which you require the special knowledge of an expert ; and even if you do require it I do not think my friend Mr. Rangachariar possesses any special qualifications in that direction. He is a distinguished member of the Bar and I think we, in this House, have many distinguished members of the Bar like the Honourable Mr. Rangachariar. I therefore strongly urge upon the Government that in appointing the office bearers of committees they should not go over the heads of the present Members of the House, who should be given preference in the matter of such appointments. With these reservations I support the Resolution.

Lala Lajpat Rai : Sir, I consider it my duty to enter an emphatic protest against the insidious way in which various methods are adopted to thrust the principle of British Imperial preference upon this House through the back door. I think this is a very objectionable procedure and I wish the Members of this House were strong enough to-day to show to the Government their resentment of the procedure adopted by the Government. Sir, I do not object to the appointment of a Committee to consider the question of censorship of cinematograph films ; but I find that the real object of this Resolution is practically to afford a kind of protection to films produced in the British Empire. As regards the encouragement of the Indian industry it is all eye-wash. We know that the Indian industry is not in a good condition. I would rather urge that no films except those produced in India should be exhibited in India at all. I do not see any reason why the British Empire should have the preference, and why only films produced in the British Empire should be exhibited and not those produced in any other country. If this principle is going to be adopted I do not see why it should not be introduced all round specially in the book industry as well. Cinematographs have an educational value ; so have books. Authors of books are being encouraged to come to this country and Government officials co-operate with them so that they may write books which are extremely humiliating to the Indians, full of lies and insulting to the manhood and womanhood of this country. I do not understand this parental solicitude to protect the morals of the people of this country. I cannot see any purity of purpose behind this Resolution considering the attitude and behaviour of various officials in connection with a book which is now on the lips of everybody in this country. I can see no basis for this Resolution except the anxiety of Government to protect and encourage British produced films. Why not extend that anxiety also to the protection of British Empire produced books and give those a preference over American produced books. If an American author can be imported into this country and helped in the work of degrading the people of this country, I see no reason at all why American films should not be exhibited in India. The European community is very anxious not to let films into this country which depict a degraded view of European life. But are those films entirely false ? And, if they are true to the life of the people, why should there be any objection raised to their being exhibited in this country ? Sir, I have travelled in many countries and I think there is a deliberate conspiracy amongst film producers in the various countries of Europe and America to bring into discredit and contempt all Asiatic countries by means of cinematograph productions. I have seen several films in England and elsewhere in which most disgraceful and humiliating scenes representing Asiatic life are shown nauseous details of a rajah's life or a nabob's harem, which are produced simply to prejudice the English and other people against Asiatics in general and Indians in particular. I say that the anxiety behind this Resolution is not genuine and is really an anxiety to protect the British film industry, because perhaps the British films in competition with the American article do not draw such crowded houses and do not bring in much money. I therefore strongly object to the whole of this Resolution, unless the words relating to British Empire preference are entirely deleted. If those words are deleted, I will have no objection to the Resolution. (An Honourable Member : " They are not in the amendment.") But in the amendment there is one defect which I wish to point out, namely, that the Honourable Mover has not added the words " manufactured in India ". His amendment therefore gives no encouragement to the film industry in India. If he adds those words the amendment will be an excellent one.

One word more. The Honourable the Home Member has told us that there was some kind of conference in England which discussed this subject and India he said was properly represented. I humbly beg to say that that is exactly how India is being wrongly forced to accept proposals which are said to be for the good of the Empire and which are very detrimental to India. No one in this House was ever consulted in this particular matter. No Indian was ever sent who could be said to represent the people of this country. This is the case generally in relation to all International or Imperial Conferences. Britishers that are sent support British interests rather than Indian interests. I wish emphatically to protest against this procedure of committing India directly or indirectly to various schemes of Imperial preference through people who do not represent India and who do not know India's wishes, who nevertheless commit India to schemes to which it is claimed afterwards that India was a party and therefore must abide by the commitments thus made. I submit that is a very objectionable procedure to which we on this side of the House very strongly object. To the League of Nations, the International Labour Conference and various other Conferences representatives are sent who do not represent the wishes of India and who make statements and commit themselves to schemes entirely detrimental to the interests of this country. We on this side of the House insist on non-official representation ; but the procedure which Government adopts is a very roundabout one ; and there are non-officials and non-officials. Government has got into the habit of catching hold of one or two gentlemen to represent non-official India in the different Conferences. Some times it is a Hindu and some times a Muslim ; but the character is almost always the same. He is ostensibly nominated to represent poor India's interests, the interests of 300 millions of the people of this country. Whatever he says, whatever he agrees to, is afterwards quoted as having been said or agreed to on behalf of India. That is a course which we strongly object to.

Then I come to the constitution of the Committee. My friend Maulvi Muhammad Yakub has dealt with that. I do not want to insist that the Members of this House only should be appointed to this Committee. There are many people in the country who can well perform that duty, but I may inform the Honourable the Home Member that the gentleman whom he proposes to appoint as Chairman does not inspire any enthusiasm in Nationalist circles and is not likely to protect the interests of the people of the country. He is a very able man ; he is a very good man ; but somehow or other he has a weakness for what I may call the milk and water policy. I say nothing against him. He is a very good man ; he is a very able man. (Laughter). But somehow or other he is a favourite of Government. For this reason, Sir, I say that.....

Mr. President : The Honourable Member is speaking against Diwan Bahadur Rangachariar.

Lala Lajpat Rai : I am not saying anything against him, Sir; nor have I said anything against him. What I am saying is that he is not the sort of person who is likely to inspire any enthusiasm amongst us, in spite of his ability and in spite of his goodness. Therefore, Sir, the mention of his name does not take us any further. I do not attach very much importance as to how many non-officials there are on this Committee. I only object to the element of introducing British Imperial preference in this otherwise simple and innocent Resolution.

*Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar (Tanjore cum Trichinopoly : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I desire to associate myself with all that my friend Lala Lajpat Rai has so forcibly and eloquently placed before the House on behalf of us all, Nationalists, who feel very keenly in this matter. But, Sir, I desire, in the first instance, to say that the logical conclusion of the reasoning which he so lucidly set forth must be that he should not be prepared to accept this Resolution merely with the omission of the words " within the British Empire ". On the other hand, I feel that the Honourable the Home Member having come to this House with a Resolution to strengthen his hands ought to have left it to this House to elect the Committee which is to sit and examine this matter. We claim, Sir, that it is the right of this House, when it passes a Resolution for the appointment of a Committee, to choose the Committee, and I do not see how otherwise this Resolution can properly be brought before the House. Sir, the Government in this country possesses any amount of power; not only does the Government in this country possess immense powers, but the Government in England can pull the wires from behind and can get this Government to do most atrocious things. If that is the state of things, Sir, I do not see why the Government of India should now come to this House and ask us to give them the power to appoint a Committee which they can do themselves. If it is necessary then that this Legislature should be a party to the appointment of this Committee, I say it logically follows—and Lala Lajpat Rai has definitely indicated it—that it is the duty of this House to appoint this Committee in the same manner in which it has been appointing so many Committees in connection with the administration of this country. Therefore, Sir, my objection to this Resolution is based not merely on the insidious method employed for introducing Imperial Preference, but because it derogates from the right of this House to elect its own personnel.

Sir, much has been said about the appointment of a particular fellow Indian of my province.

Mr. President : Order, order. The Honourable Member ought to be more dignified.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : I say fellow countryman of my province. Sir, I am not concerned here to discuss the merits or demerits of Diwan Bahadur Rangachariar, and I do not think they are germane to the Resolution before us. The real thing that we want is that the Chairman of this Committee should be appointed by this House, and when this House is asked to affirm the propriety of appointing a Committee, it is the duty of this House to point out as to who the Chairman should be, and the duty of judging of the qualifications or of the fitness of any Member, whether of this House or not, must pertain to this House. I therefore strongly object to the Government of India appointing the Chairman of this Committee. And I ask, Sir, why does the Honourable the Home Member ask this House to recommend to the Governor General in Council to appoint a Committee ? If the Governor General in Council possess the power, of course he does it himself; but if, on the other hand, he thinks this House is good for anything, he can consider it good enough also for the appointment of the Committee. Therefore, I sincerely trust that the Honourable the Home Member would be pleased to allow this House to elect this Committee and also to omit the words " within the British Empire", and that he would adopt the policy which his colleague the Honourable Sir George Rainy has definitely accepted and is out here to carry it out, namely, that of protecting Indian industries. Therefore, I hope, Sir, that both these amendments will be accepted by the Honourable the Home Member.

* Speech not corrected by the Honourable Member.

[Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar.]

Colonel J. D. Crawford (Bengal : European) : Sir, I rise to congratulate the Government on having taken steps to bring the Cinematograph Censorship Act under revision. I am one of those who have received very many complaints from my own community regarding the misrepresentation of the conditions of western life in cinematograph films shown in this country, and I can sympathise with my friend, Mr. Duraiswamy Aiyangar when he says that his community also have objected and must rightly object to any misrepresentation of Indian life in western countries through the cinematograph. Sir, the cinematograph is, I believe, of great educational value ; it is one of the greatest educational factors of the future, and it seems to me perfectly right that we should do all we can to see that the films presented in public places, both for amusement as well as for instruction, should be of the very best stamp and kind.

In regard to one aspect of the Resolution, namely, the production and exhibition of Indian films in particular, I feel that that is a point of very real importance. Sir, if the cinematograph industry is to flourish in this country, it has not only to serve a few communities, but it has got to serve all the different communities that inhabit this vast continent ; it has also got to penetrate right through into the Indian villages. For that purpose I feel very much in sympathy with my friend Mr. Duraiswamy Aiyangar's amendment, that the proposed Committee should have a non-official Indian majority, because I feel that a Committee of that description is likely to know exactly what type of film is wanted for Indian audiences.

I do not think, Sir, that the rest of his amendment is complete, although all the big questions he has put down are questions which will undoubtedly be examined by the Committee. I agree with my Honourable friend Lala Lajpat Rai that the question of building up an Indian film industry should be included. In India we have climatic conditions admirably suited to the building up of a film industry. In our historic life, there are romantic and historical incidents which would make very admirable pictures if the industry is controlled and guided on right lines, and altogether we have a great opportunity in India of producing films which will show to the other parts of the world what India really is, and that, to my mind, Sir, is a matter of very great importance. Sir, I would strongly support my friend Mr. Duraiswamy Aiyangar's suggestion that there should be a non-official Indian majority on the Committee, and I trust that the Committee will be able to produce really something more satisfactory than the present system of censorship, and will give very real assistance for the building up of an Indian cinematograph industry.

Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan (Nominated : Non-Official) : Sir, I am one of the regular cinematograph goers, and when I go to a cinematograph, I do not think I care very much to see whether the film is produced in Germany, America or England or in India ; but I go with a view to see good art and to get good enjoyment. I think, Sir, everybody who goes to a cinematograph has only one point in view, and it is that, after the day's work is over and after having spent the whole day (An Honourable Member : "In the Assembly") say in the Assembly or in other places, one would like to have some sort of relaxation which may give some relief to his brain. But one thing which I have noticed in England is that there are certain cinematographs which are reserved for people of tender age, the like of which we do not find in this country. There were cinematographs which were very instructive and certain cinematographs specialised themselves in producing films of the type which may give good instruction to people of tender age. One cinematograph I remember used to produce only historical events like the life of Queen Victoria, Julius Caesar, Napoleon Bonaparte and others. There were other cinematographs which produced only social events. Then there were others, Sir, which produced different kinds of films for people of different tastes. Here what we find is nowadays really one thing which is coming from the Pathe films and other films which come to India, though I do not attach so much importance to this kind of feeling which might be prevailing in the mind of my Honourable friend, Colonel Crawford, that people in India consider western life as they see it in the cinematograph—and they see western life in the worst form of it—or they attach some value to it, thinking that it is western life or what life, as I go to the cinematograph and I have a talk with many of the people who go regularly to the cinematograph, I can say that they do not think a bit about whether it is representing western life or not, but they want only some kind of fun. Nobody takes it seriously that it is really the life of western countries that is depicted. They say it is only some foolish acts that are done on the cinematograph and are shown just to please men.

Lala Lajpat Rai : All are not like Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan.

Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan : I think most of them are like myself.

Lala Lajpat Rai : I doubt that very much.

Lieutenant-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney (Nominated : Anglo-Indian) : Who says this ?

Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan : But I quite agree with one point which has been made by the Honourable the Home Member and by other Honourable Members too, that there are some films that, though they may be amusing to some people, are really objectionable if we find that they are visited by young boys from college or school children and women, and they find that these films go beyond the limit of decency. Those kinds of films are really objectionable. Though some things may not be considered objectionable in western countries, for instance in Europe and America and other places, from the point of view of India, on account of the different social customs prevailing here, they are really objectionable.

Mr. President : What about the Resolution ?

Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan : That is what I am saying. The Resolution aims only at stopping these very films which I was just mentioning. It asks that these objectionable films should be stopped and should not be exhibited. That is the only thing which we want at present in India. But to come to this conclusion and to make recommendations, Sir, we can only do this in two ways. Either by creating public opinion which may insist that these films should not be exhibited, and that nobody should patronise these films when they come, which is impossible. This cannot be done by creating any public opinion in favour of such action because the people who have got the cinematograph business can always find an audience willing to patronise them even by showing the worst kind of films and the most objectionable kinds of films too. Now, the only thing that can be done is by legislation and legislation can be initiated by the appointment of a Committee which will go thoroughly into this matter and after seeing the whole situation they might make definite and substantial recommendations which might be acceptable to the House as a whole.

There is one point, Sir, about the Indian industry. I think the Indian industry in films is making rapid progress. About three or four years ago, the films which were produced in Bombay and Madras—the Coronation Company and other companies—were worthless and did not attract any kind of audience. People would not like to go to see them in preference to the American films or English films or French films. But now I see that rapid progress has been made by these companies and they are putting up some very good shows, and this industry I think deserves a great deal of consideration and encouragement by this House. But one difficulty to my mind is coming up in the Indian Films Act, and I agree with my Honourable friend Mr. Duraiswamy Aiyangar's suggestion in clause (d) of his amendment with regard to the desirability of preventing religion being dragged into cinematograph films. In most of the films shown in India at present I find there is a touch not of social events but of religion : they drag in religion or some very delicate points and communal questions which are not desirable for creating a good atmosphere in India. And I think from the political point of view and from the social point of view, those things require to be checked.

One word, Sir, about the appointment of the Committee. Certain names have been dragged in which I consider very very unfortunate for this House to indulge in. The name of my old friend, Mr. Rangachariar, has been dragged in. Those Honourable Members who are here who were members of the first Assembly might remember in what esteem we all held Mr. Rangachariar.

Lala Lajpat Rai : Even now we hold him in esteem.

Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan : He was one of the foremost members and very liberal minded, and he always fought for radical changes in this Assembly. Mr. Rangachariar's character was unimpeachable from all points of view and from all sides in this Assembly. I think it deplorable that any attack should have been made on a Member who is not present to defend himself.

Mr. T. C. Goswami (Calcutta Suburban : Non-Urban) : I have not heard any attack.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : May I point out, Sir, that it was not intended to attack the character or the policy of the Honourable Mr. Rangachariar. What I submitted was the question of principle that an outsider should be given preference over the present Members of this House, and this I think is not right, and it throws a slur upon the present Members of the House. I do not in any way want to throw a slur on Mr. Rangachariar, but it is the principle which I consider to be objectionable.

Mr. President : I did not think the cap fitted the Honourable Member. I thought the Honourable Member was referring to the speech of Lala Lajpat Rai.

Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan : Sir, what I was alluding to was not the speech of the Honourable the Deputy President of this House, and I think like a valiant champion fighting for the honour of the present House, it was his duty to come forward and to say what he said.

I am sorry I cannot agree with his views. I do not think that the present Members of this House have got any preference over the Members who have once adorned the Benches of this House if they are suitable and capable to deal with this case. I do not think that even the present Members should have any privilege over those people who have not had the privilege of coming into this House as Members. It is fighting for a privilege which, I think, will defeat its own ends. I do not think Honourable Members of this House should be so narrow-minded as to want that they should be placed in each and every position and nobody else should have any privilege outside this House. It is too narrow ; we should not take that view ; it is undignified ; it is objectionable from the point of view of India. We should not exclude all Indians who could not come and serve or who have not had the opportunity of serving India here but who are quite ready to serve outside in different spheres ; they should not be shut out and Members of the present Assembly only should not be made to take each and every position. In other words, it is not right that we should get everything and not others. Is it that, if after three years the present Members go out of office, all those privileges should be taken away from them and they must be entrusted to somebody else ? That is not correct. I do not think that at this time the Honourable the Deputy President was voicing the feeling of this House.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : The feeling of a large number, at any rate, of the Members of this Assembly.

Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan : Coming to the merits of the resolution and the amendment, I certainly suggest, Sir, that it is not desirable to have Imperial preference in an industry and an industry which only indulges in amusements and nothing else. One point which strikes at the very root of the thing is this. How are you going to control cinematographs, those objectionable matters which may be coming in or are imported from America or other places, like the film Indian Raja ? He is depicted to be a great villain who abducts all the white girls and who is keeping a big harem in America and who comes riding on an elephant and who after inviting ladies shuts them up in his room. We have got no check over America producing this kind of film. Of course if a film is produced in England, if we have no direct control over the company in England, at least through the Indian Government we could bring pressure to bear upon them. If English people produce a film of that kind, India can produce just the reverse kind of film, showing English life and character badly. Of course that will soon teach every body a lesson. We can only go to this length to see whether the particular film is suited to the condition of the country. We have to see that our country does not get demoralising pictures which may tell very injuriously on the minds of the young and uncultured youths from schools and other places. Indian ladies have now started to see the cinematograph and I like it very much. But would it be desirable that Indian ladies after coming out from purdah should see such kinds of films that are exhibited nowadays ? There should be some check on them and for this purpose there can be only one control, which the Committee can go into. We should not show any kind of suspicion about a Committee that is going to be formed ? Supposing a Committee is constituted which is composed of certain people and the Committee does not do as we expect. The only result will be it will make absurd recommendations ; it is open to this House not to accept them. We can discuss that after the recommendations are made. But it is putting the cart before the horse to say we have got doubts that the Committee is not going to be good, because we do not know what sort of Committee is going to be formed. It was quite right on the part of Government not to mention the names, because we are all human beings, like my valiant champion in the Assembly. It is not right to say that if a Committee is to be formed it should be composed of the Members of the House. No Committee should be formed with the consent of this House, because we are bound on account of our feelings to say that we must prefer the Members of this House over others.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : If the consent of this House is required to appointing a Committee, certainly the Members of the Committee ought to be selected from amongst the Members of this House.

Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan : If this House is consulted about the formation of the Committee, I suppose there are some Honourable Members who have never gone to the cinematograph and they might be selected for this Committee. The only possible suggestion is the suggestion of the Government of India. The Honourable Member in moving his Resolution did not ask this House to form a Select Committee but that the Committee may be formed from outsiders who may impartially go into the whole question.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : As if Members of this House are partial ?

Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan : I suppose that the Member who is expected to sit sometimes in the Chair should know first how to keep himself in order.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Therefore he tries to keep order.

Mr. Muhammad Yamin Khan : At present if Honourable Members, who come and devote long time to the sittings of this House over a month in Simla and about three months in Delhi, are entrusted to do other public work too, I think it will be asking them to do too much. It may not look very good to some. I know that it will not commend itself to some Members, because it is going against the desires of some Members who want to sit on that Committee. I, at any rate, support this Resolution, and I think the Honourable Member in charge will accept at least clause (d) of the amendment.

(Some Honourable Members moved the question be put.)

Mr. B. Das (Orissa Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, I welcome this Resolution, this censoring of American films, I would rather welcome a Resolution which would censor American women. I particularly refer to Miss Mayo and her book. Sir, that book has aroused strong comment from Indians and we all condemn that sort of book. American films have no doubt done great injury to the minds of the Indian public and Indian youth. I find that American books are doing now great harm to the honour and dignity of India. I want British films, they must be good films and should be exhibited in India as well as Indian films and continental films if they are good and if they are educative to students and the youth of India. Sir, I support my friend Mr. Duraiswami Aiyangar's amendment which goes into the details and brings out the essential points that are necessary from the Indian view point. I am glad, Sir, that this Resolution has given an opportunity, to us to condemn the action of a certain American woman and I wish we could bring in another clause in this Resolution by means of which we will be able to condemn every foreign woman who writes irresponsibly anything about India ; and that book, I hope, will be proscribed under certain sections of the Criminal Procedure Code. In reference to films to be exhibited I want only....

(It being Four of the Clock, Mr. President called upon Mr. M. K. Acharya to move his motion for the adjournment of the House.)

MOTION FOR ADJOURNMENT.

SERIOUS SITUATION IN THE BENGAL NAGPUR RAILWAY WORKSHOPS AT KHARAGPUR.

Mr. M. K. Acharya (South Arcot cum Chingleput : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, from the pleasures of the cinematograph we have to turn to the pains of the workshops at Kharagpur. At the very outset I desire to convey to you, Sir, and to the Honourable Sir George Rainy the thanks of the thousands of workmen there for affording this opportunity to discuss the very serious situation that has arisen in that place. I want to be very brief, and I shall, therefore, not go into very ancient history. It was last Wednesday when compulsory notices were served upon about 1,300 people asking them to quit the workshops—it was then that the situation became very serious. Nearly 700 men had voluntarily resigned before that date. But on the 7th about 1,300 notices were served compulsorily asking as many men to retire. Then the next day, I believe, the men met and discussed the situation, and came to the conclusion that these notices were served upon men in a manner which was bound to elicit the sympathy of the other men. Therefore, they seem to have gone to the workshops, and simply attended them without doing the work. On the next day, it was that the men were determined that some justice should be obtained for those who, they considered, were unfairly retrenched.

[Mr. M. K. Acharya.]

It was then that the railway authorities found the necessity for locking up the workshops and calling in military aid to guard the streets and the workshops. Sir, the whole thing therefore relates to the retrenchment problem at Kharagpur. I am ready to admit that that retrenchment has been resolved upon evidently by the various agencies concerned from very different motives. It has been given out to the men that it is all brought about under the directions of the Railway Board. And I believe that the Railway Board with the very best of intentions, on the impression that there were too many men in the Kharagpur workshops, came to the decision that a large number of men must be retrenched. That was evidently the motive of the Railway Board. But the Managing Director, the Agent, the Chief Mechanical Engineer and some of the superior officers seem to have had also their own intentions. I do not say that they were wrong or right ; but I do say that they had other intentions than those which moved the Railway Board. Now, Sir, through the kindness of some other officers more sympathetic towards the men in their troubles the men have been able to obtain copies of secret correspondence which clearly shows that this matter had engaged the attention of the Managing Director and the Agent for some time past. In the early part of the year, soon after the unfortunate strikes, they seem to have been discussing this matter pretty seriously, and trying to find out how far the work of the railway could be carried on without depending entirely upon the workmen with whom they were dissatisfied. Therefore, and as a result of this correspondence, an attempt seems to have been made to see whether some, indeed a great deal, of the work that was being done in the workshops could not be got done through private contractors from the Calcutta firms. I will read, Sir, only one or two paragraphs.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy (Member for Commerce and Railways) : May I ask if this document is a document which the Honourable Member admits is not properly in his possession ?

Mr. M. K. Acharya : I am unable to make any such admission. It is a piece of information which has come into the possession of the men, and I want to give it to the Honourable Member to show exactly how the thing has been going on so that he may find out the proper solution. It has been sent to me by the Labour Union and they have obtained it, I take it, through very proper means. As I have said, they obtained it through the kindness of some of the officers who are very sympathetic towards them, and who were willing to let them know how the whole thing was being worked. That is my impression. However, here is the letter from the Managing Director to the Agent in which it is said :

" The work done in shops divides itself into two heads :

(a) Repair work,

(b) Manufacturing work.

The workshops must do repair work, and because in the early days of Indian Railways there were no private workshops in India capable of doing manufacturing work, railways had to embark on this work themselves. Times have changed and there are many private workshops in India that can turn out good work. The line, I think, we ought to take is to reduce our manufacturing work, giving it out on contract to private firms, and give this reason why we are making large reductions in our workshops."

Then, Sir, on this letter there is a long correspondence. There is a long letter submitted by the Chief Mechanical Engineer to the Agent ; and there he says :

"We are already arranging contracts for the manufacture of a substantial quantity of Loco spares, iron and brass castings and forgings and loco cylinders complete—which we can now buy cheaper than and fully as good as those we make ourselves. We shall probably cast as more cylinders here, and this I hope is the beginning of the end of the foundry."

This last sentence I would like to emphasise. The letter proceeds :

"The very favourable position of engineering firms in Bengal in relation to sources of coal and iron supplies should eventually enable us to do the same as many American Railways, and dispense with our own foundry altogether. Mechanical inspections we can easily arrange for and now that we have our own chemist we are or shall soon be in a position thoroughly to check all supplies.

We now have specifications for practically all our regular purchases in India, and conditions of contract also have been introduced for local manufactures corresponding with those used by our Consulting Engineers at Home, modified only where necessary to fit Indian conditions.

Partly as an experiment and partly to make good the outturn lost due to the strike, we are also arranging contracts with the Indian Standard Wagon Company and Jessops for the repair of a few hundred wagons.

If successful, this measure will indicate another means of rendering ourselves rather more independent of local labour. But at present it is an experiment.

A great deal has become possible since the war that we could not contemplate before the war, and the more outside firms become capable of dealing satisfactorily with manufactures for us the stronger will be our own position."

This, Sir, was a letter written about the 3rd of May. I have produced this simply to show what has been working in the minds of the men. The impression that they had was to the effect that whatever motive the Railway Board might have had their superior officers were gradually trying to eliminate local labour and to obtain the requirements of this particular railway from the manufacturing firms of Calcutta. That, Sir, was the position about the beginning of this month. So, when this question of retrenchment came, the men took the view that, if the workshops were conducted in the old way, no very large reductions would be required at all. In fact, in one of their meetings that they held with the Chief Mechanical Engineer or some other important officer about the beginning of August they came to the conclusion that about 700 and odd men would be the maximum number that will be required to be dispensed with. But later when this went up to 2,000, and when in the matter of choosing the men to be sent out it was naturally left in the hands of the subordinate officers, there came the third trouble for the men. I do not of course blame the Agent or the Mechanical Engineer who necessarily had to entrust this work to their subordinates. But human nature being what it is, the subordinate officers picked out those men against whom they had personal grudges. That is the kind of action which exasperated the feeling of the workmen and which made them come to the conclusion that under the plea of retrenchment, a large number of men were sent out in a most unjust manner. Under the plea of trying to put the workshop at Kharagpur on the same working level as other workshops with respect to other railways, under that plea, the subordinate officers gave full vent to their personal grudges against individual workmen. I again repeat that I do not blame the Agent for this. When one of the men interviewed the Agent he categorically denied that there was any intention on his part to victimise the men. He also informed the men that if it was proved to his satisfaction that his subordinate officers victimised the men, he would take necessary action against them. But it must be remembered that it is very difficult to get such proofs. Under those circumstances, the victimisation has gone on unchecked. That has aggravated the situation, and exasperated the feelings of the men.

The Union at first were willing to co-operate with the authorities in trying to get a large number of men voluntarily to resign ; and with the willing co-operation of the Union about 700 have up to date been retrenched. That was the position some time last week, when this compulsory notice was served on the men. Then the men began to feel that retrenchment was only an opportunity for sending away a large number of men in the most unfair manner. They feel that they have been working for many years, for some of them have put in 10, 15 and 20 years of service ; that they have really helped to build up the railway to its present level. Having worked for such a long period, they feel that some consideration ought to have been shown to them. They feel that they should not have been so summarily got rid of. They have no objection to superannuated men being sent away, they have no objection to the men recently employed being sent away, they have no objection to the men engaged on day-to-day wages being sent away ; or those who could not pull their required weight. They have no objection to such men being retrenched. But they feel that the retrenchment of the capable permanent men, of men who have put in long years of satisfactory service is quite unjust. With this idea at the back of their minds, they feel that the present method of retrenchment was merely intended to give more and more work into the hands of the private contractors. They feel, and I hope, Sir, everybody in this House will sympathise with them, that this method of sacrificing the poor people for the benefit of the contractors is very cruel and unjust. They feel that the bread has been snatched from their mouths and put into the mouths of other people. They have loyally and diligently served the company to the best of their ability for the past several years, and this is the reward they now get.

There is one more important point to which I should like to draw the attention of the House. Till recently the Bengal Nagpur Railway had a large amount of repairs very urgently required to be done and which were being delayed. The Director of Foreign Wagon Interchange seems to have complained about it ; and the Chief Mechanical Engineer in one of his notes has put this clearly down :

" There are 5,000 vehicles on the average per month running without due repairs, that is 20 per cent. of the authorised stock of wagons is without repair, a point very much commented on by the Director of Wagon Interchange and the Railway Board. This is the railway of all first class railways which has topped the list in the matter of running stock without repairs. Similarly coaching stock stands also on the same position when compared with other railways. The capacity of the Kharagpur workshop is only 600 vehicles per month though Ardhra and Waltair shops are newly named as mechanical workshops and other important loco sheds on the lines were also made to function as shops in the matter of repairs. The percentage of wagons running without repairs could not materially improve and in consequence huge recurring debit of Rs. 5 per waggon per day is realised from the Bengal Nagpur Railway by the Director of Foreign Wagon Interchange ".

Well, Sir, these admissions have made the men feel that there is plenty of work at Kharagpur workshops, if really the Bengal Nagpur Railway aims at keeping itself abreast with the other Railways. There are 5,000 wagons every month to be repaired. The men have therefore come to the conclusion that there is plenty of work. The officers of the Railway on the other hand having got permission to effect large retrenchments are wantonly sending away these men without justifiable reasons. The men feel that the retrenchment is not carried on in the best interests of the Company, nor in the best interests of the public, and certainly of course in the very worst interests of the men themselves. This, Sir, was the position last Wednesday which drove the men to down their tools. I have received telegrams, which I do not think it is necessary for me to read to the House ; which telegrams show that meetings of 5,000 men and 10,000 men were held, and resolutions were passed to the effect that there was ample work and that somehow unfortunately the railway officers had taken it into their heads to push through this retrenchment under any circumstance, not heeding the best interests of the railway itself. Now the men are determined to stand by their unfortunate brethren who had been given compulsory notice. That, Sir, is the position. I repeat, I do not want to blame anybody for it ; I do not want to blame the Railway Board.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member is mistaken if he thinks he does not blame the Railway Board. The constitutional effect of his motion is a vote of censure on the Government.

Mr. M. K. Acharya : Thank you, Sir, while I am not anxious to blame the Railway Board.....

Mr. President : If the Honourable Member does not wish to blame the Railway Board, he should ask for permission to withdraw his motion.

Mr. M. K. Acharya : On the other hand, I do not of course want to err on the side of being overcourteous. Certainly the Railway Board should have insisted on getting fuller materials before sanctioning such huge reductions ; and they should have examined the whole position more carefully, much more carefully than they have done in the present case. They should not have given a carte blanche to the railway officers to go on retrenching as they liked. The result is that the Railway Board have got into this position. Of course there is the final responsibility of the Railway Board in the matter. I want to make a few suggestions on this matter as the situation is very serious.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member has already exceeded his time limit.

Mr. M. K. Acharya : Very well, Sir. I appeal to the House to insist that real efforts should be made to meet this serious situation. I have no doubt that leaders on the front benches will say very much more. I appeal to the Government to realise the seriousness of the situation, suspend further retrenchments and take steps to ameliorate the hardships of these poor workmen, and enable them to resume work immediately.

Mr. N. M. Joshi (Nominated : Labour Interests) : Sir, my Honourable friend Mr. Acharya has narrated some of the main facts of the situation at Kharagpur. Sir, the workers at Kharagpur feel that the proposals for retrenchment which are being carried out at present have their origin in the last strike about which this House knows something.

[Mr. N. M. Joshi.]

They feel, Sir, that the authorities of the Bengal Nagpur Railway felt somewhat humiliated on account of the strike. They expected the strike not to become general. They expected that the men would not show any strength, but they were disappointed and thought they were humiliated and defeated. There is good ground for the workers to feel, that the proposals for retrenchment emanated from the Managing Director in London who was present during the last strike in India and who took that strike as a personal humiliation and a personal defeat. The men also feel, Sir, that this is an act of victimisation, and I feel, Sir, that they have some justification even for that feeling. It will be admitted that one of the superior officers at Kharagpur, the Works Manager, issued instructions to the foreman that while making retrenchment or while suggesting names for retrenchment, he should see that the non-strikers were not retrenched at any cost. If the men after knowing of these instructions, feel that the present proposals for retrenchment had their origin in the last strike and are an act of victimisation, I think the men are fully justified.

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons (Financial Commissioner, Railways) : Sir, those instructions were immediately withdrawn.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : I know, Sir, that the instructions were withdrawn after they were brought to the notice of the superior authorities, but the very fact that the instructions were issued by a responsible officer in the workshop, namely, the Workshop Manager to his foreman, was sufficient for the men to entertain the fear that the present proposals were an act of victimisation.

Then, Sir, the second feeling in the minds of the workers in Kharagpur is that the present proposals for retrenchment are intended to do away with the labour troubles at Kharagpur or at least to reduce the labour troubles at Kharagpur by giving work to private contractors and by ordering out things from foreign countries. Now, Sir, during the last few months the Bengal Nagpur Railway, when that Railway could repair any number of wagons, when that Railway could manufacture any number of articles themselves, gave an order for repairing 100 wagons to a private company. If after knowing these things the workers at Kharagpur feel that these proposals for retrenchment are intended as an act of victimisation against them, I think, Sir, they have some justification.

Now, Sir, the Bengal Nagpur Railway is a State Railway, and as that Railway is controlled by the Railway Board I think, it is the duty of the Railway Board to examine the policy of giving work to private contractors or getting articles made by foreign manufacturers when these articles could be made in the State workshops. It is not a right policy that when the Legislative Assembly and even the Government have accepted the policy of protecting the industries of this country, they should, when they have got their own workshops, order out things from foreign countries and of the State management of Railways and, when they have got their own workshops and superior staff, should get their work done through private contractors. Unfortunately the Railway Board has made this an item of their policy and not only on the Bengal Nagpur Railway but on other lines also. I have seen this being done gradually on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway also. Under these circumstances if the workers at Kharagpur feel that these proposals of retrenchment are also intended to benefit private contractors and foreign manufacturers, they have got sufficient justification.

It is said that the work is given to foreign manufacturers or to private contractors in the interests of economy. Sir, if the work is given to foreign manufacturers and private contractors in the interests of economy, it is necessary that the Railway Board and the railway authorities at Kharagpur or on the Bengal Nagpur Railway should convince the public that their policy is at least in the interests of economy. They have not done so. How is it possible that when superior officers are brought from England on very high salaries and they have been given the Lee concessions, and when the labour employed by private contractors and the State workshop is the same, how is it possible that private contractors can turn out articles cheaper than your own workshops turn out ? If there is a difference, then, the difference must be in the quality of the supervisors whom the Railway Board and the Bengal Nagpur Railway have appointed. I myself feel that the Railway Board have not yet made out any case that work given to private contractors is cheaper. Moreover, even if it is somewhat cheaper, I say, Sir, to give work to private contractors and to get work done by foreign manufacturers is against the policy which this House has approved of.

There is one more point which I would like to make and it is this. If the Railway Board want to effect economy and if they want to reduce the men and to reduce the work done at Kharagpur, it is necessary that they should also reduce the number of supervising officers ; but on the contrary during the last 4 or 5 years they have increased the number of superior officers by about 30. Why is it then that the number of ordinary workers is to be reduced and the number of superior officers is being increased ?

Sir, I do not believe that the proposals for retrenchment are actuated by considerations of economy. But even if these proposals are made upon considerations of economy, I think, Sir, there are considerations which are superior to considerations of economy. The Government as the trustee of the working classes in this country have a duty towards those classes. These men may have served the Bengal Nagpur Railway for several years, some of them for 3 years, some 5 years, some 10 years some 15 years and some even 20 years. Have the employers no duty towards the employees ? Government, as the trustee of the people and as the authority which lays down proper standards for labour legislation and labour conditions, must recognise that they have a moral duty towards the employees who are serving under them. Sir, I feel that Government do not recognise their duty towards the workers at Kharagpur simply because these workers belong to the working classes. They do not belong to the superior or the privileged classes. I know, Sir, there is at least one Department of the Government of India which only last year Government found it was overstaffed. It is clearly laid down in the report issued by the Department that it was overstaffed ; and still Government did not send away the men at once, though Government I understand are trying now to reduce the number gradually in the natural course of things. My Honourable friend Sir, Bhupendra Nath Mitra knows which is this Department which was considered to be overstaffed last year. Why did not Government send away those men all at once ? Because those men were considered to belong to the privileged class and the workers at Kharagpur belong only to the working classes. I hope, Sir, the Government of India do not make this distinction between the privileged classes and the working classes. Now, Sir, if the Government of India want to effect economy and want to reduce the number of men, I do not agree to the proposals for reduction at all, but even taking for granted that those proposals are necessary, Government should recognise their duty towards the men who have served them for some time and should see that no hardship is caused by those proposals. It is quite possible that if Government had recognized this necessity for retrenchment last year during this one year they could have reduced at least 500 men in the natural course of things, as there are always vacancies occurring in these big workshops, and in the next year they could have retrenched another 500 men, and in a short time it would have been quite possible to reduce the full number. If they had adopted this policy of waiting and gradually reducing the number, it is quite possible that Government would have to spend about a lakh or two lakhs of rupees more. But is it not due to the men who have served you so long that you should spend two lakhs of rupees so that they may not suffer the hardship which you are now asking them to suffer ?

Now, Sir, the Government proposals have been decided upon and notices have been given. The working classes who are very weak have only one remedy for protecting themselves, and that remedy is to stand by each other. And it is to the credit of the workers at Kharagpur that they have stood by the people to whom notices were given. I am proud of those people who refused to work because others were given notice. Sir, the men after all have their duty towards their comrades and they have done it. I want the Government to appreciate the spirit of those people who are making sacrifices for the sake of their comrades. I feel that it was wrong on the part of the management at Kharagpur to have made these proposals at all. I feel that the manner in which they tried to enforce these proposals was worse still. I hope, Sir, that the Government of India will not stand still. It is their duty towards the working classes at Kharagpur that they should not put any hardship upon these men. They should not ask them to make sacrifices which they themselves would not make. I want, Sir, the Members who are sitting on this side to consider what their position would be if the Government of India asked a large number of them to leave this country without what they call proportionate pensions. I want them to ask themselves whether they do not sympathise with the men who are being asked to leave their work, to leave their homes, without proper compensation. If the Government of India are prepared to give some kind of proportionate pensions to all these men there may be some justification for asking them to leave. I hope the Government of India will take the humane course of making the reduction, if they want to make a reduction, by not filling up vacancies for the next year or two. It is wrong to retrench in the way they have done. Moreover, Sir, the Bengal Nagpur Railway authorities as well as the Railway Board do not realize that if they had made economies in proper time this situation would not have arisen. It is their fault. They ought to have realized that it was wrong to reduce 2,000 men all at once. Are there any workers in the world who, when one-fourth of their numbers are threatened with reduction, will not stand by those who are being sacrificed ? It is the Railway authorities who have made the strike and not the workers. I would like any Member of this House to say that he would not in a like situation stand by the comrades with whom he has been working. Whatever the workers at Kharagpur have done, they have done their duty by their comrades. This House, Sir, should feel sympathy with these men, and I think the Railway Board and the Government of India will appreciate the spirit in which the men at Kharagpur have acted. I hope, Sir, this motion will be carried.

Mr. T. C. Goswami (Calcutta Suburbs : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Sir, the confidence which the Trade Union Congress has very often reposed in me and my connection with the Labour Union at Kharagpur demand that I should add whatever little weight my words possess in support of the motion which has been moved by Mr. Acharya. Sir, I was myself witness, during the last cold weather, to many of the conditions for which one Sir R. T. Wynne, whom I once described in this Assembly as the octogenarian Dandolo of the Bengal Nagpur Railway, who had come to hibernate in this country, was responsible. And I have reason to believe—and, Sir, I have been in close touch with the march of events in Kharagpur—that the state of things which we have to deplore in this House to-day is a continuation of those conditions which were the cause of the strike last cold weather.

Sir, you will forgive me if I feel great hesitation in proceeding further with my speech ; because, Mr. President, having in the course of the day read the official, uncorrected report of Mr. Chaman Lall's speech of yesterday on another motion for adjournment, I feel I have not had sufficient time to determine the criteria of relevancy which, no doubt, underlay your successive rulings. And, Sir, I assure this House that it is not that I have not, to quote your words, " nothing more to say " .....

Mr. President : Will the Honourable Member proceed with the merits of the motion ? Does he realize that he is making an insinuation against the rulings of the Chair ?

Mr. T. C. Goswami : No, Sir, not at all.

Diwan Chaman Lall (West Punjab : Non-Muhammadan) : May I ask on a point of order whether an Honourable Member is not within his rights in making a remark of that nature ?

Mr. President : The Honourable Member is not within his rights.

Diwan Chaman Lall : By what rule or regulation is the Honourable Member not within his rights.

Mr. President : Order, order. Mr. Goswami.

Mr. T. C. Goswami : Sir, I must say that I have been so unnerved by reading the report of the speech and your rulings that I feel it is extremely difficult to keep within the limits of relevancy which seemed to have been prescribed by you.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member is perfectly entitled to call into question the rulings of the Chair by a substantive motion in that behalf, but he is not in order in challenging them in this manner.

Mr. T. C. Goswami : Sir, I have absolutely no desire to call into question your rulings. Your rulings in this House are inexorable, though my religion forbids me to regard them as infallible. Therefore, Sir, the only thing I feel it safe for me to do is to paraphrase the Resolution which has been moved by my Honourable friend Mr. Acharya, namely, that there is a serious situation—there is a very serious situation, a large number of workmen are about to be thrown out of employment for no fault of their own. It is the prodigals who are making honest workers pay for their prodigality.

Mr. Varahagiri Venkata Jogiah (Ganjam cum Vizagapatam : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : I rise, Sir, to support this motion. In doing so, I must say that there is a widespread feeling and a lurking suspicion in the minds of the public of Kharagpur and those of the workmen, that the discharges and notices of removal that have been served on the workmen are not actuated merely by considerations of economy but that they are due to other causes. It is said that the retrenchment is proposed as a means of victimisation of strikers, though it was agreed when the strike was concluded that no victimisation would be resorted to. This feeling of suspicion is not altogether without foundation. As you are aware, during the strike the Managing Director, Sir T. R. Wynne, was in this country. Naturally he was against the strike and wanted to stop it, but he could not do so. Therefore, the conduct of the strikers enraged him very much, and it is stated that the present policy of retrenchment is dictated by the Managing Director more as a punishment to strikers than as a means of economy. It is also stated, and truly too, that if it were really a matter of economy, this would have been undertaken long before this trike commenced. As a matter of fact, not a word was ever mentioned about the retrenchment before the strike began, but only after it came off. There are other circumstances which strengthen this suspicion on the part of the railway authorities. We are informed that the Managing Director writing to the Agent stated—and that too after the strike—that the administration would not be able to give good reasons for making large reductions in workshops and that the administration was not in a position to sack men with bad records. He therefore suggested to the Agent the giving of contracts to private firms for manufacturing anything that is necessary for the railway administration in order to reduce the workmen in the workshops, and the reason that he gave for this was that that was the only thing that would enable the administration to escape the charge of victimisation. When suggestions such as these came from the Managing Director, it is no wonder that the railway officials out-heroded Herod, and gave contracts not only for manufacturing ordinary things but even for carrying out small repairs. As this House has already been told, private firms have been entrusted with contracts for carrying out even minor repair works. All this shows that the retrenchment is adopted with a view to punish the strikers, and not as a matter of economy.

There are also other reasons, Sir, which strengthen this suspicion. It is stated, and it has already been pointed out to this House by my friend Mr. Joshi, that one of the officers holding a high position in the workshop, Mr. Tyres, sent information to the foremen not to enforce the order of retrenchment against non-strikers. It is also stated that, while enforcing this order of retrenchment against strikers, about 300 new hands were employed, and sanction was obtained to import from England officers drawing high salaries. Further, Sir, there was never any indication that such a large reduction would be made in the number of employees engaged in the workshops by the administration. The only time we heard of it was, during the time of the strike. Even then it was said that the number of workmen would be reduced to the extent of 10,000 in the workshops, and I understand that to restrict it to that number, the officers estimated that there would be a reduction of only 600 employees—500 from the Loco. Workshop, 150 from the Carriage Workshop and another 150 from the Wagon Workshop. I do not know how this number of 600 was considered insufficient, and in the course of 15 days it was increased to 2,200. Even if this retrenchment is held to be unavoidable, I suggest that it should be done gradually in consultation with the members of the Indian Labour Union. Every year some men necessarily go out for reasons of death, resignation or other causes. Their places may not be filled up and no fresh appointments made ; and inducements may be offered to those who retire early as the railway administration itself now proposed to do.

Now, Sir, these methods, I submit, will go a long way to reduce the number of workmen gradually without causing much panic. No doubt, some pecuniary loss will result to the Government, but regard being had to the fact that these men have been serving the railway administration for a long time and have been living with their families for years in Kharagpur, these pecuniary losses should not be regarded as very great. Unless this is done, it will be no wonder if the railway workmen sympathise with the sufferers and take to passive resistance, as some of them have already done, and this might lead to further troubles.

In the light of the information I have placed before the House, it is necessary, in the interests of the good name of the Bengal Nagpur Railway administration and the well-being of the railway employees, especially regard being had to the serious disputes between the employees and the employers, to appoint a Conciliatory Board consisting of representatives both from the railway administration and the Indian Labour Union in order to see how, in view of the proposed retrenchment, that the least injury would result to the employees. This aspect which I place before the House was agreed to in another place, the House of Elders, a few months ago, in reply to a Resolution moved by a Member of that House regarding the grievances of railway workmen by the Honourable Member for Commerce. Sir, with these few remarks, I support the motion.

Lala Lajpat Rai (Jullundur Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, I just want to say a few words. It is extremely unfortunate that retrenchment in this country should begin with the lowest paid Indians, and while I am not going into the general question for want of full information on the subject, I want to associate myself with every word of what my friend Mr. Joshi has said. I want to point out very respectfully to the Government that, after all, most of the civilized Governments have begun to recognise that it is a part of their duty to keep every one of their subjects alive, and to find either work for them or to insure them against unemployment. We know that at the present moment in England over a million people are getting the dole of unemployment. So, if we look at the question from that point of view, it will not be good economy to dismiss these people at once and throw them entirely out of employment and to the mercy of circumstances. I therefore appeal in the interests of these workmen and in the interests of justice that the Government should do something to alleviate the sufferings of these people and not dismiss them at once. I fully sympathise with the object of this motion, and I hope the House will carry it.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : Mr. President, I have listened with great interest to the speeches which have been delivered by the Honourable Members who have spoken in support of the motion for the adjournment. I think, however, that before I say anything in reply to these speeches, it might be convenient if I were to begin by stating the case from the point of view of the Government of India and the Railway Board. The Agent of the Bengal Nagpur Railway last July when he was in Simla placed his proposal for the reduction of the staff of the Khargpur workshops by 2,000 men before the Railway Board. Now, the reasons which were held to justify this reduction fall in the main under 4 heads. In the first place, there is the question of economy which is always present to the mind of every railway administration, or at least it most certainly ought to be. In the second place, during the war and since the end of the war, there has been a very considerable development in the railway workshops, as in other workshops, in the introduction of modern machinery which reduces the number of men who have to be employed to carry out a given amount of work. When that machinery was first introduced in some of the railway workshops, the supervising staff did not clearly understand the extent to which it would enable them to reduce staff and consequently to reduce the cost of production. That was a matter, I think, which the Raven Committee drew attention to in their Report. In the last two or three years, greater attention has been paid to that matter, and the result is that there has been a distinct reduction in the staff required in a workshop where the volume of work has remained about the same. New methods have also been introduced in the execution of repairs in workshops and that also has had a similar effect. Finally, during the 4 or 5 years after the war, the work to be done in the railway workshops was swollen by the working off of the war-time arrears of repair and maintenance work. Now these generally were the causes put forward in support of the reduction in establishment. Now, the Railway Board had to examine this proposal not only in the light of what was put forward by the Agent but in the light of the information which they already possessed and their knowledge of the manner in which in an efficient railway workshop work ought to be carried out. The test which can be applied in such cases is a comparison between the results achieved in one railway workshop and the results achieved in other railway workshops. The application of all the tests the Railway Board were able to apply, indicated that the reduction in establishment proposed was fully justified, and indeed some of the tests appeared to show that an even larger reduction would have been justified. I should like to give a few figures to illustrate this point. On the North Western Railway the locomotive shop has to look after 1,361 locomotives and employs 6,336 men. On the Bengal Nagpur Railway there are 729 locomotives and the number of men employed in the locomotive shops is 5,756. If the same number of men at Khargpur did the same amount of work as those in the North Western Railway workshop it would be necessary to reduce the number of men employed to 3,353, which would be a reduction of over 2,400 men, whereas the actual reduction in the loco. shops is only 750. I quite admit that these figures have to be applied with caution. You cannot argue strictly from one railway to another and say that you can expect exactly the same outturn on all railways. Possibly in northern India, with a more bracing climate, the individual worker may be able to turn out a greater amount of work, but still the discrepancy is so great that the only possible inference that can be drawn, I think, is that a reduction in the number of men employed in the shops at Kharagpur was urgently called for unless the work was to continue to be carried on in a thoroughly uneconomical way.

Mr. C. Duraiswamy Aiyangar (Madras ceded districts and Chittoor : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Is this principle applied at the top also ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I had intended to come to that presently, but I have no objection to replying to my Honourable friend at once. I have forgotten which of the earlier speakers—my friend Mr. Joshi I think it was—complained that, whereas there was reduction at the bottom, the supervising staff was being increased. My reply to that is that one of the points which the Raven Committee criticised unfavourably in the Indian railway workshops was the inadequacy of the supervising staff, and they expressed the opinion that greater attention ought to be given to that point of adequate supervision. That answers my friend's point. I could give figures similar to those I have already given for locomotives, for carriages and wagons also, but I do not think it is necessary to enter into much detail. Approximately, on the North Western Railway standard, the number of men required for the Kharagpur workshops would be about 7,000 in all, whereas after the reductions which the Agent is actually making, the number will be 9,000. There are some other figures which illustrate the same point, but time does not permit that I should go deeply into them. The Railway Board definitely approved of the Agent's proposal, that was in July last, that the reduction of 2,000 men should actually be carried out. Then the Agent, after his consultation with the Railway Board, discussed the question also with the Government of Bengal, and thus, before he actually issued any notices to the men, he had been in consultation with both the authorities principally interested. His subsequent course of action was as follows. In the first place he offered inducements to the men to tender their resignations voluntarily by giving a bonus of a month's pay to the men who did so. After that, he proposed that the reduction of staff should be effected in the first place by reducing those who had reached the age of superannuation and then those who were approaching the age of superannuation, that is from the age of 50 to the age of 54, and it was not until these classes had been exhausted, and also until the voluntary resignations had been taken into account that he issued notices of compulsory reduction of establishment to make up the total number whom he had to get rid of. I might perhaps give the House the figures as nearly as we can get them. Since April the total number of resignations and of ordinary casualties amounts to 800, and the balance, about 1,300, is the number of notices of reduction issued and the latter figure includes some of those who were superannuated. The exact number we do not know, but in all probability it is between 200 and 300. Therefore, if these are excluded, the total number of men under compulsory reduction by these notices is about 1,000 ; that is to say, it is probably not more than 1,100 and it is probably not less than 900.

I should like now, Mr. President, to deal with the point—it is a very important point—raised by my friend Mr. Joshi. His claim amounted to this, that when from any cause the amount of work to be done in any establishment controlled by Government had fallen off and the full staff were no longer required, it was not right to make sudden reductions and the proper course was to wait till vacancies fell in and let the whole operation take place gradually. Now, I quite recognise that in some cases that is a perfectly possible way of dealing with such a situation. But I am not for a moment prepared to admit that in all circumstances that way of dealing with the difficulty is the right way or the justifiable way or the way which Government should adopt. In a Department like the Railway Department cases must occur when, if the authorities responsible are to avoid a very great waste of public money, it is necessary to make a large reduction of establishment at one time. I can see no other alternative in certain circumstances, such as have occurred at Kharagpur, where the number of men employed is obviously a great deal too large for the work to be done, and it seems to me that in such circumstances it is not possible for the authorities responsible to refrain from making a comparatively large reduction in the establishment at one time. What I am prepared to say, however, is this, that Government do recognise the necessity in such cases of examining every possible alternative before agreeing to a large simultaneous discharge of staff in such cases. They will be prepared in any similar cases that arise in future to examine proposals placed before them from that point of view. But they are not prepared to give any undertaking that it will always be possible to avoid such large reductions ; and I would like to draw the attention of the House to one aspect of the position at Kharagpur and it is this, that if we were now to adopt Mr. Joshi's proposal, namely, to ask the Railway Company to withdraw the notices which they have issued and to let the reduction take place gradually as vacancies occur, it would not be only a question, as my Honourable friend seemed to think, of one year or 18 months before things righted themselves, because the figures in possession of the Railway Board rather indicate that further economies in the establishment are possible. The clock would be put back 4 or 5 years and for 4 or 5 years to come we should be steadily every year spending more money on the execution of particular classes of work done in this railway workshop than we are really justified in spending.

I should like to allude again to another remark of my Honourable friend Mr. Joshi, when he referred to reductions in establishment of a higher grade. Whether he had my own service in mind I do not know. But he used the sacred words " proportionate pension " and he asked whether the members of these higher services would think it fair that they should be sent away without proportionate pension. I am not going to say what my view as a member of the Government of India is, but my view some 7 or 8 years ago was very strongly that for the members of the Superior Services the pensionary system ought to be abolished and the provident fund system substituted, so that it would be in the power of the Government to send them away at any time they choose. That was my view then ; I do not say it is my view now. My Honourable friend said that we should give something in the nature of a proportionate pension to these men if their discharge was absolutely necessary. But my Honourable friend has forgotten that of the 1,300 men to whom notices have been issued at Kharagpur 600 are subscribers to the provident fund, and as far as they are concerned it is not a question of the Railway Company suddenly sending them off and leaving them with no sort of means to keep themselves going until they can find work again, because some of them, it would appear, must be in a position to draw very substantial sums from the provident fund. Subscribers contribute one-twelfth of their pay every month and they get interest on that, and in case of a reduction of establishment all of them get a bonus which is an equal amount contributed by the Railway Company with interest on that. I thought it might be worth while to work out the figures of a workman who might be regarded as a typical subscriber to the fund. It is about 9 years now since the workshops staff became eligible to subscribe to the provident fund ; and therefore I took a man who had been subscribing for 9 years. I assumed that he rose from Rs. 22 a month at the beginning of the period to Rs. 40 a month at the end of it with annual increments of Rs. 2 a month. I find that, if he subscribed regularly to the provident fund, he would at the end of 9 years have Rs. 671 to his credit, and if to that is added the gratuity of half a month's pay, which is given in such cases ordinarily on reduction of establishment it would amount to a grand total of Rs. 911. I do think it is important that the House should realise that the 600 men who are subscribers to the provident fund will not be thrown on the streets without any means of support, but will have fairly large sums to help them on their way. As regards the remainder, the men who are not subscribers to the provident fund, a good many of them must be labourers on daily wages, and the majority I should think would be men with less than 4 years' service with the Bengal Nagpur Railway, and therefore, as my Honourable friend Mr. Acharya pointed out, not liable to the same hardship as men who had put in 10 or 12 or 15 years' service.

I do not think, Mr. President, that I am justified in delaying the House much longer. The Government of India have given this matter very anxious consideration, and what they feel is that this is a case in which it is not possible to put pressure on the railway administration and to ask them to withdraw their notices of reduction. They do feel, however, that if harmonious relations are to be re-established at Kharagpur between the railway administration and their workmen, the workmen must feel some sense of security and not be under constant apprehension that they may be exposed again to a similar risk of another big reduction of establishment in a few months' time. That would clearly create a position of such difficulty, that even from the purely financial point of view it seems to me that the Railway would have nothing to gain by adopting a policy of that kind. Therefore, the Government of India will be prepared to communicate with the Railway Company and to point out to them that this large reduction of establishment having been effected, the Government of India consider that if it is found necessary, as it may be found necessary to reduce the staff still further, that should be done gradually and as far as possible on the occurrence of vacancies as they fall in. I do not believe myself that if that plan is adopted, the Railway has anything to lose.

[Sir George Rainy.]

Before I sit down I should like to refer to the correspondence which my friend Mr. Acharya read. I am quite sure that my Honourable friend, when he read that correspondence, did so under a full sense of public duty and in the belief that he was entitled to do it. But I would like to point out that Government have also their own point of view in that matter. Of the document that he read, the first, I understand, purports to be a letter from the Managing Director of the Bengal Nagpur Railway to the Agent of that Railway and it was communicated, as my Honourable friend said, to the Labour Union at Kharagpur by someone whom he described as a sympathetic officer. I doubt if the word " sympathetic " would be an exhaustive description of an officer who considered it proper to make over these documents to persons for whom quite obviously they were not intended. That is not, however, my main point. My main point is that the Government of India and the Railway Board cannot take any action whatever on documents placed before them in that way. It is clearly impossible and.....

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar (Tainjore cum Trichinopoly : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Are the facts disputed ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I should like to say again that I am attributing nothing improper in any way to my Honourable friend Mr. Acharya who, if I may say so, has stated his case very fairly.

I ought to allude before I sit down to what was said about the giving out of work on contract. On the big point raised by Mr. Joshi, I will leave him to argue it out with the Bengal Chamber of Commerce who take a somewhat different view on that question.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : They are not the Government of India.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : And I shall hope that both parties will be so preoccupied with each other as to be unable to direct their artillery on me for the time being. But as regards this question of giving work on contract, I should like to point out this that, in so far as the work is given out on contract to Indian firms, there is no reduction of employment. It is merely a transfer from one place to another. I have no doubt, however, that if the Bengal Nagpur Railway Company accept the view that after this big reduction of staff has been effected it will be necessary to go slow and to let any further reduction that is necessary come on the occurrence of vacancies, they will obviously not desire to pay both the workmen in their workshops and the contracting firms for the same work. I think it may be taken for granted that they will postpone this question of giving out the work on contract until the staff has been brought down to the figure at which this can be done without loss of money. I do not think, Sir, I need add anything further. (Applause.)

Mr. B. Das (Orissa Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, we are passing through very hard times and this is not the time for the trial of strength between the Railways and the Labour Unions. Sir, the Bengal Nagpur Railway might be backed by the Railway Board, the military authorities, the Auxiliary Forces, the volunteer forces and also the Police and the Gurkha bayonets, but as I have said at the beginning we are passing through very hard times. Kharagpur is situated in an area where most of the workers come from the flood-stricken area. The districts of Midnapur, Cuttack, Balasore and Chota Nagpur supply at least half the labour of the Kharagpur area. And to-day the Bengal Nagpur Railway, backed by the Railway Board, are throwing out of employment at least 2,000 workers employed at Kharagpur, and it is no consolation to us to be assured, as we are now assured by my Honourable friend Sir George Rainy that he will see his way to gradually reduce the workers when subsequent reductions will take place in the Bengal Nagpur Railway. My Honourable friend before he came to my own province Bihar and Orissa was a member of the Bengal Civil Service. So, he knew Kharagpur and the condition of the working classes in Bengal. And when he was in my province he also knew something about the condition of the working classes and the condition of unemployment that prevails there among the skilled labourers for whom work is not available in abundance. So, I was sorry to listen to the speech of my Honourable friend which was rather unsympathetic. His sympathy went to the future reduction and nothing was promised on the present unemployment problem and the injustice that is going to be perpetrated to-day. Sir, the Honourable Sir George Rainy told us than 600 members of these 2,000 workers that are going to be reduced will get something like Rs. 900 as provident fund compensation when they are forcibly kept out from the Kharagpur workshops. My friend, Sir George Rainy, has very admirably worked out the details in the Tariff Board Reports but I do not know whether he has ever studied the economic condition and economic indebtedness of the people. Sir, the economic struggle among the working classes of India, thanks to my Honourable friend Sir Basil Blackett for his policy of exchange—the ratio policy—is becoming more acute day by day. Sir, I deplore the incident that took place at Bombay where 30 or 40 Indian working class women got so enraged and exasperated that they mobbed their employer and I believe that employer is now dead. If that employer is dead, I deplore it.

I deplore that we have come to such a pitiable condition in this country that the working class Indian women, who are usually so meek and timid, have become so distressed and exasperated because their children are going to starve and they will find no employment to feed them that they resorted to mob their employer. If that was the result when 50 women were put in the unemployment list, what will be the condition in the Bengal Nagpur Railway workshop where more than 2,000 men are to be sent out ? The Bengal Nagpur Railway is situated in that part of the country which is known for its distress caused by famine and flood, I do not want to contest the accuracy of the statement of the Honourable the Commerce Member about the employment capacity of the Bengal Nagpur Railway locomotive workshop. If reduction is to be made, I say that that reduction should be made with sympathy and in a conciliatory spirit. If only the authorities had been sympathetic, I do not think my Honourable friend Mr. Parsons would be sitting here on the Treasury Benches ! He would have run up to Kharagpur to watch the situation personally. I would not find the Chief Commissioner of Railways here in Simla but I would expect him at the workshop at Kharagpur. I would also expect the Honourable the Commerce Member to run up to Kharagpur after the Assembly adjourns so that he can study the situation on the spot. It is no use saying we cannot pay these men, and so we reduce the staff. What about the economic distress caused thereby ? What about the untold distress caused to those who are dependent on them ? I do not also agree with the point raised by the Honourable the Commerce Member that the reduction was caused by the introduction of power machinery. I think that power machinery was introduced in the Bengal Nagpur Railway workshop as well as in the workshops of other railways for a long time past. I remember when I was an engineer student I visited these workshops in 1911. I do not think they have got any further improvement in power machinery. There is a great deal in what my Honourable friend Mr. Jogiah said that the Bengal Nagpur Railway has tried to victimise the men owing to the strike that took place there a few months ago. I think the Government ought to set themselves in earnest to settle this problem and they should not allow it to be light heartedly put aside by the railway authorities. I think ways and means should be devised to solve this difficulty. As was suggested by Mr. Jogiah, the Honourable the Commerce Member may call in the aid of Honourable Members like Mr. Joshi and a few other gentlemen to form a conciliatory Board which might meet at Kharagpur and listen to the complaints of the workmen there and solve the present distress of the men.

My Honourable friend referred to the Report of the Raven Committee which brought to light a lot of mismanagement in the workshops, in the matter of management, slackness in manufacture of appliances, accumulation of stores, etc. The committee found that there was no proper costing and accounting and they suggested several improvements in every department of workshop administration. We have been told that the Government are still considering those recommendations. But nothing has come out of the Report of that Committee so far. My Honourable friend Mr. Aney just now reminds me that the Raven Committee did not go into the workshop question at Kharagpur because the Bengal Nagpur Railway is a Company-managed Railway. That Committee did not report about the reduction of the staff at Kharagpur as the case was not referred to it. It only went into the case of State-managed Railways. Therefore, there is no reason why the Bengal Nagpur Railway should take in hand the question of retrenchment. My submission is that it was merely to victimise these poor workmen that they took up the question of retrenchment. That would lead us to concede those observations of my friend Mr. Jogiah that the workmen are sacrificed because they joined the strike last February and this House will be no party to any such policy of victimisation.

The motto should be "No victimisation."

Diwan Chaman Lall : Sir, I think the issue ought to be narrowed down to the point as to whether in this motion for adjournment it is to be brought home to the Railway Board that they have been allowing the Bengal Nagpur Railway to pursue a policy which is meant for the purpose of victimisation of their workmen. The merits of this particular case can be resolved by a reference to the statements that have been made by the authorities of the Bengal Nagpur Railway themselves. I heard the Honourable the Commerce Member say that it was only last month that the Bengal Nagpur Railway people came up to Simla and brought up the matter of this reduction.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : July, Sir.

Diwan Chaman Lall : That is still better for my purpose. They came up in July. I want the Honourable Member to refer to the letter, which I dare say is in his file, which will show him that even as far back as 7th January 1927, a circular was issued, a demi-official note was issued, in which it was stated that steps should be taken to reduce these men and that no impression should be given to these men that they were being victimised. That is to say the reduction must take place in such a broad manner that there must be no impression given to them that they were being victimised. This was a note issued as far back as 7th January 1927.

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : What document ?

Diwan Chaman Lall : I am sure my Honourable friend knows exactly what the document I am referring to is.

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The Honourable Member suggested that it was on the file of the Honourable the Railway Member or on my file; I must therefore enquire what that document is.

Diwan Chaman Lall : If the Honourable Member wants me to tell him what the particular document is, it is a demi-official note from Sir T. R. Wynne.

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Then, I must at once say that that letter has never been received by the Railway Board, nor is there any such letter in the file of the Railway Board.

Diwan Chaman Lall : Will the Honourable Member take it from me that there was such a letter issued. I am pointing out the intention that was at the back of the mind of the people in charge of the retrenchment scheme. Their intention was that they wanted to reduce these men and they did not want that the impression should go abroad that these men were being victimised. If the Honourable Member would kindly refer to this document he will discover that that was the intention namely that measures should be adopted to reduce the staff in order that the railways should be " independent " of the workers. There is a sentence in one of these letters which runs as follows :

" If successful, this success will indicate another means of rendering ourselves rather more independent of local labour. But at present it is merely as an experiment ".

The intention was there : namely these people had gone on strike. The Railway wanted to become independent of these men. They wanted to get rid of these men and the Railway wanted to give the impression that these people were not being victimised on account of the strike.

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The only point I wish to make clear is that the document from which the Honourable Member is quoting has not been before us ; it is not in the possession of the Railway Board.

Diwan Chaman Lall : I do not care.

Mr. President : Is the Honourable Member prepared to lay the document on the table for the information of the House ?

Diwan Chaman Lall : With pleasure, I shall lay it on the table of the House, if the Honourable Member so desires.

The next point that I want to make is that the very fact of the existence of this document shows that the Railway Board must know.....

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett (Finance Member) : May I know your ruling Sir, whether it is not desirable to lay on the table all such documents before they are referred to.

Mr. President : The question does not arise because the Honourable Member, Diwan Chaman Lall, has agreed to lay the document on the table.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I am referring also to the document which Mr. Acharya referred to and which was not laid on the table.

Mr. President : It is too late now.

Diwan Chaman Lall : If the Railway Board does not know about this incident, I say that the Railway Board have been deceived and that they have not made proper investigations of the facts in connection with the retrenchment. That is my charge against the authorities of the Bengal Nagpur Railway. Let me refer to another document.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member might pass on the two documents to the table.

Diwan Chaman Lall : I will,* Sir. But may I use them for a minute, with your permission, before I lay them on the table ? I now refer to another document which also I shall lay on the table It bears the number 8690D and is dated 17th August 1927. In this the proposals in regard to these reductions have been detailed, and what are these reductions ? The total number of men to be reduced according to these detailed instructions comes up to 608 only. Subsequently, because they found that by placing contracts with private firms they could reduce more men and thereby, as they themselves, said, become independent of local labour, they desired to reduce further the number of men.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : Would the Honourable Member just mention again what this document is. I did not gather its nature or from whom it emanated.

Diwan Chaman Lall : May I be permitted to read out to the first portion ?

"As per the Meeting held on 1st March 1927, the proportion for the reduction of staff was, etc. Signed M. H. O. 17th August 1927."

It is one of your official documents of the Bengal Nagpur Railway ; and I say this document proves that their intention was that only 608 people should be reduced and no more ; but nevertheless they went beyond that and reduced, as Sir George Rainy said, over 2,000 men. At present what we are concerned with is not only that it was the intention to reduce these men because of the strike, not only was action taken to reduce these men because they wanted to become independent of local labour, but that they found means of doing so by placing work with private firms somewhere else. That is the method adopted. Although it has been stated that it is cheaper to get work done by outside firms, I would very much like it proved to me how it is really a business proposition for the workshops to place work on contract with private firms. If this is the policy which is being pursued by the Bengal Nagpur Railway for victimising men I could understand it, but if it is a policy which is being pursued as a business policy, I assure you I am not in a position to understand it. Now, bearing this position in mind, that this is being done with a definite object, I would request the Honourable Member in charge to take note of the fact that there are only 946 men who are at the present moment involved in regard to these reductions. Why cannot some method be found by means of an enquiry, a joint enquiry by the Railway authorities and the union people or some such means, so that these men should be kept on in employment until such time as their services can be gradually got rid of or the services of others got rid of in whose places they can be put. I see no reason why such a scheme could not be adopted by the Honourable Member in charge. If it cannot, it is because, as I suspect, the Honourable Member has not the full particulars in regard to this matter from the Bengal Nagpur Railway authorities. If it could be done it would not be a very heavy burden upon the Railway. It would cost at the outside, even if these men were kept on for a year, about a lakh of rupees. The other day we passed a grant of Rs. 75,000 for 35 women clerks in the Y. W. C. A. I was a party to the passing of that myself, and I say that it was a good thing to have done. Women workers must be housed and well housed. But here are not 35 clerks but a thousand men—nay, a thousand families that are involved ; and surely it would be only right and just to ask of the Honourable Member to do the right thing by these people and keep them on in employment until such time as he finds means to employ them in some other way.

(Several Honourable Members moved that the question be put.)

Mr. President : The question is that the question be put. Does the Honourable Pandit wish to speak ?

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya (Allahabad and Jhansi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : I wish to speak only for a few minutes, Sir, if you will permit me.

Mr. President : We must finish this debate before six.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : I shall take only a few minutes, Sir. I wish to draw the attention of the Honourable Member for Commerce to just a few facts. When the Government permits a Railway Company to establish and run a railway, it incurs certain obligations, and one of these obligations is to protect the people employed by the Company. The Honourable the Commerce Member has not controverted the fact that the Company is giving out some work to foreign manufacturers and that the Company is getting a great deal of repairs done by private contract. I submit, Sir, this fact not being controverted, there is an obligation on the Company not to dismiss men who have been in its service for so many years when there is work to be done. It is not a case of their services being no longer needed. As I understand, the Honourable Sir George Rainy has not answered the point raised by my Honourable friend Mr. Acharya, that 5,000 wagons need repairs every month and the maximum capacity at Kharagpur at present with all the establishment that there was before the reduction in question is for the repair of only 600 per month. I submit if there is work to be done it is certainly cruel that these men should be sent away and work done by outside agency, and I submit it is eminently a case in which the Railway Board might appoint a Committee of Arbitration on which the men who have been given notice should be represented either by Members of this Assembly or by some other agency, to go into the facts and to place them before the Government of India in order that justice may be done. At present the feeling is that the reduction has not been carried out merely in the interests of efficiency but that there is something else at the bottom of it, and that sense of injustice should be remedied.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru (Agra Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, may I just put one question to the Honourable the Commerce Member ? He referred to the Raven Committee. May I ask him whether it is not stated on page 76 of their report that all the elements of cost.....have necessarily a tendency to be lower in a railway workshop than in a private workshop ? ''

Mr. President : The question is that the question be now put.

The motion was adopted.

Mr. M. K. Acharya : Sir, I do not at this late hour want to make any lengthy speech; and indeed I believe it is quite unnecessary, because I am sure that the Members of the House will realise the gravity of the situation and act in a befitting manner and that, placing their hands on their hearts, and realising that one thousand poor men and their families are going to be turned out into the streets, they will give such a verdict as will be a proof of their sympathy for the working classes.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : Sir, I do not think it is necessary for me to say more than a very few sentences but I would like to say one thing which I ought to have mentioned when I spoke before, and that is, to disclaim in the most absolute manner, on behalf of the Government of India, the Railway Board and the Agent of the Bengal Nagpur Railway, any policy of victimisation. It is right that I should do so distinctly. Whatever indiscretion subordinate officers may have been guilty of, I am prepared to answer for the Agent as well as for the Railway Board and the Government of India that everything possible will be done to discountenance any policy of that kind. I think it was necessary that I should say so much.

Mr. President : The question is :

''That the House do now adjourn.''

APPENDIX A*.

No.

Kharagpur, 3rd May 1927.

Dear Carroll,

Re. Sir Trev's note on workshops.

We do not appear to get the Railway Board's Weekly summary in this office. If possible I should like to see the one for the week ending 26th February 1927.

2. As regards the possibility of getting work done outside.—

Sir Trev states the present position exactly. It has entirely changed since the war. We now have one large (and quite first class) engineering shop—Angus—almost at our doors and doubtless others will develop.

3. We are already arranging contracts for the manufacture of a substantial quantity of Loco. spares, iron and brass castings and forgings and loco. cylinders complete—which we can now buy cheaper than and fully as good as those we make ourselves. We shall probably cast as more cylinders here, and this I hope is the beginning of the end of the foundry.

4. The very favourable position of engineering firms in Bengal in relation to sources of coal and iron supplies should eventually enable us to do the same as many American Railways and dispense with our own foundry altogether. Mechanical inspections we can easily arrange for and now that we have our own chemist we are or shall soon be in a position thoroughly to check all supplies.

5. We now have specifications for practically all our regular purchases in India, and conditions of contract also have been introduced for local manufactures corresponding with those used by our Consulting Engineers at Home, modified only where necessary to fit Indian conditions.

6. Partly as an experiment and partly to make good the out-turn lost due to the strike, we are also arranging contracts with the Indian Standard Wagon Co. and Jessops for the repair of a few hundred wagons.

7. If successful this measure will indicate another means of rendering ourselves rather more independent of local labour. But at present it is merely an experiment.

8. A great deal has become possible since the war that we could not contemplate before the war, and the more outside firms become capable of dealing satisfactorily with manufactures for us the stronger will be our own position. We shall have to keep them strictly upto specification and inspection is being fully provided for.

Yours sincerely,

(Sd.) H. L. COLE.

WORKSHOPS.

The Railway Board's Weekly Summary for the week ending 26th February 1927 gives a very useful lead for reducing the number of men employed in the shops but for us to be able to do so we must give some good reasons as we are not in a position at the moment to sack men with bad records in time keeping and efficiency. If we do so at the present time we should be said to be "victimising" the men.

The work done in shops divided itself into two heads :—

(a) Repair work.

* Vide page 4396 of these proceedings.

The workshops must do repair work and because in the early days of Indian Railways there were no private workshops in India capable of doing manufacturing work railways had to embark on this work themselves. Times have changed and there are many private workshops in India that can turn out good work.

The line I think we ought to take is to reduce our manufacturing work, giving it out on contract to private firms and give this reason why we are making large reductions in our workshops. Will you go into this with Cole. Incidentally we will save in not having to spend a large amount of capital in building quarters at Khargpur for workmen if we can make a substantial reduction in the numbers.

No. 8690, dated 17th August 1927.

As per the Meeting held on 1st March 1927, the proportion for the reduction of staff was—

Loco. Shops	365
Carr. Shops	182	729
Wagon Shops	182

These numbers were based on the establishment on 31st January 1927 when the—

Loco. Shops had a total of	5,677
Carriage Shops had a total of	2,949
Wagon Shops had a total of	2,104
TOTAL ..	10,730

The figures on 31st January 1927 were—

Loco. Shops	5,509
Carr. Shops	2,873
Wagon Shops	2,225
TOTAL ..	10,607

showing a difference of—

For Loco. Shops	—168
For Carr. Sh	—76
For Wagon Shops	—121

In connection with the Wagon Shops, it should be noted that additional smiths hearths have been put into the Shops and certain additional machines. Each hearth and each machine has to be manned. It is said however that in the Wagon Shops certain machines are double manned as a result of the strike.

In addition to the men for Smiths hearths and machines a special sanction for number of coolies was given for handling material in the Wagon Shops.

These three points will have to be taken into consideration in adjusting down the number of men allowed.

Taking in round figures 10,000 to be the total staff to be employed and working on the proportion decided in the Meeting in April it shows that, of the total staff to be reduced, the Loco. Shops will take .. .. 50 per cent.

Carr. Shops will take .. .. 25 per cent.

Wagon Shops will take .. .. 25 per cent.

The Loco. Shops have now to reduce a further ..	.. 304
The Carr. Shops have now to reduce a further ..	.. 152	608
The Wagon Shops have now to reduce a further ..	.. 152

This will bring the total down to approximately 10,000.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Thursday, 15th September, 1927.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber at Eleven of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

Mr. President : A short notice question has been sent by Mr. M. K. Acharya which the President has admitted and the Department has agreed to answer. The Honourable Member does not seem to be in the House to put the question.

Mr. A. Rangaswamy Iyengar : May I put that question, Sir, as it is an important question ?

Mr. President : The Honourable Member who gave notice of the question ought to be here.

Mr. A. Rangaswamy Iyengar : It is an important question, Sir.

THE SOCIETIES REGISTRATION (AMENDMENT) BILL.

Mr. N. C. Kelkar (Bombay Central Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I rise to move the motion that stands in my name, namely, that the amendments made by the Council of State in the Bill further to amend the Societies Registration Act, 1860, for certain purposes, be taken into consideration.

Sir, the matter of this Bill is a very simple and small one, and I think I can explain it in a couple of minutes almost. This House will remember that it was pleased in February last to pass and sanction a Bill which I had introduced for the purpose of amending the Societies Registration Act for certain purposes. The point was about section 20 of that Act which defined certain objects of registration, but I found that the drafting of the section was defective or that rather it was not sufficiently enumerative, and I proposed that two additions to the objects mentioned in that section should be made. One was the addition of the words " political society ", and in order to carry this matter further and to put the matter beyond all doubt in regard to societies which had also a similar purpose, I had proposed to insert the words " any object of public utility " in section 20 of the Act. I had concentrated, however, on the words " political education " which I insisted must be included in section 20 in order that political societies should be allowed to register themselves and get all the benefits that emanate from incorporation. As I have said, this House was pleased to accept the Bill, and I need not refer to the debate which took place on that occasion. I would, however, briefly mention one or two points in order to give this House an idea as to what was the subject matter of the debate. On behalf of the Government the then Home Member tried to induce me and also to persuade the House to believe that my object could really be achieved under the Indian Companies Act. There was some debate on that point. I did not myself regard the point as debatable, and I think I succeeded in convincing him that it was not right to force political societies or bodies to register themselves under the Companies Act. I contended that a political society was not necessarily a company, because the objects of a political society were entirely different from those of a company. At the end of the debate, the Honourable the Home Member did not entirely give up his point, but I must acknowledge that he did not carry his objection too far. Ultimately he said this :

"I will not oppose the consideration at this stage, but if I am advised by competent legal authority at a further stage that registration can and ought to be effected under the Companies Act, I may take action in another place".

Eventually, however, I find that his legal advisers did not advise him accordingly, and therefore Government in the other place did not press that objection.

There was one small objection taken by my friend Mr. Srinivasa Aiyangar at the time, and the reply given to him by Sir Alexander Muddiman was this :

"I have only one observation to make, and that is, that my Honourable friend, the late Advocate General of Madras, tells us that he is against political societies being given corporate existence. I would ask him with the authority of his great experience of law to tell the House how they can hold property if they are not incorporated".

That shows, Sir, that the Honourable the Home Member accepted my position that it was impossible for political societies to hold property and function according to their objects unless they were registered. In that state of things the Bill was passed. The Government did put up some opposition to it, but it was not pressed, and the Bill as originally introduced by me passed through

Then it was taken to the other House, and there they made small drafting amendments. They dropped one of the words or expressions which I had suggested but accepted the one upon which I had insisted. As I have just said, I had insisted on the words "political education" being included in section 20. That position of mine was conceded by the House and by the Government as well. This is what the Honourable Mr. Haig said in the other place with regard to his amendment :

"The second point seeks to confine the amendment of this Act to the particular object which the Mover of the Bill had in mind. I understand, Sir, that in regard to this particular class of societies there is a sentimental feeling that they would prefer to be called 'society' rather than 'company', and in deference to that sentiment the Government of India have decided for their part to accept the amendment which will enable these societies to register themselves under the Societies Registration Act".

The words which were not recommended to be taken up were the words which also I had suggested, namely, "any other purpose of public utility". I suppose it was regarded that those words were too wide, and one specific reason which was given by the Honourable Member in the other House was that the object of those words was fully served by somewhat similar words in the Indian Companies Act. Lastly, a small drafting amendment was made, and that was, the words "political education", which were accepted and introduced into the body of the Bill, were transferred to the Preamble of the Act which, I think, was necessary. These were the only three changes that were made in the other House. Therefore, I find, after all, that I have really no room to complain with regard to the Bill as accepted and amended by the other House. My chief purpose has been served, namely, that the words " political education " have been introduced into the body of section 20 which gives practically all that I want. The drafting amendment is quite necessary and reasonable, and with regard to the third thing, I have no quarrel. Therefore, the Bill comes back in that amended form, and I entirely accept it. I therefore move, Sir, that the amendments made by the Council of State be taken into consideration.

Mr. President : The question is :

" That the amendments made by the Council of State in the Bill further to amend the Societies Registration Act, 1860, for certain purposes, be taken into consideration."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. President : The question is :

" That this House do agree to the following amendments made by the Council of State in the Bill further to amend the Societies Registration Act, 1860, for certain purposes, namely :

In clause 2 :

(1) before the words ' In section 20 ' the words ' In the Preamble to and ' be inserted ; and

(2) the letter and brackets ' (a) ', the word ' and ', and the whole of sub-clause (b) be omitted."

The motion was adopted.

THE HINDU CHILD MARRIAGE BILL.

Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda (Ajmer-Merwara : General) : Sir, I rise to move that the Bill to regulate marriages of children amongst the Hindus be taken into consideration.

The primary object of the Bill is to put a stop to child widowhood. No country in the world except this unhappy land presents the sorry spectacle of having in its population child widows who according to the customs of the country cannot remarry. Enforced widowhood is a feature peculiar to Hindu society, and when we consider that some of the victims of this pernicious—I had almost said inhuman—custom were babies 8 or 10 months old, Honourable Members will realise how urgent and imperative is the call for legislation in the matter.

Sir, the Bill before the house does not attempt to lay down the ages at which boys and girls should marry. For Hindus that was done by their law-giver, Manu, who laid down that a girl may marry 3 years after she attains puberty ; and Dhanwantri, the great Hindu authority on the subject, says that ordinarily girls attained puberty in India at 16. Social and domestic environment of the present day, and other things have perhaps slightly lowered the age of puberty in India. Yet, according to Manu, who allows marriage 3 years after puberty, even at the present day the marriageable age of a girl cannot be below 16 years.

Sir, as it stands, my Bill does not go against the spirit or the letter of any religious behest, for no Sastras, ancient or modern, enjoin that a girl must be married before she attains puberty. And it is an admitted fact that girls do not attain puberty before they are 12 years old Thus while it does not come into conflict with any Sastras, the Bill removes what is probably the most oppressive burden under which Hindu womanhood is groaning. The Bill is a very modest attempt to recognise that female children even amongst Hindus have certain inalienable rights and that the State with any pretensions to civilisation will deem it its duty to protect them, without heeding the vagaries that masquerade in the guise of social customs.

Sir, a reference to the last Census Report will show how important the matter of the Bill is. That Report says that there were in India in 1921, 612 Hindu widows who were babies not even 12 months old, 498 between 1 and 2 years, 1,280 between 2 and 3, 2,863 between 3 and 4, and 6,758 who were between 4 and 5 years of age, making a total of 12,016 widows under 5 years of age. The number of Hindu widows between 5 and 10 years of age was 85,580 and those between 10 and 15, 2,33,533. The total number of widows under 10 was 97,596, and under 15 was 3,31,793. These numbers include Jain and Arya widows, for Jains and Aryas have been separately classed probably for political purposes ; otherwise they are all Hindus and are governed by the same marriage laws. And if we include Brahmos and Sikhs, who are as much Hindus as the so-called Hindus, the total number of Hindu widows under 15 was 3,32,472 in 1921.

The gravity of the question will however be realised when we remember that out of every 1,000 Hindu married women 14 are under 5 years of age, 111 below 10, and 437 under 15 years of age. This means that a little over 11 per cent. of the Hindu women are supposed to lead a married life when they are below 10 years of age, i.e., they are mere children, and that nearly 44 per cent. of them lead married lives when they are less than 15 years of age, i.e., when they are not yet out of their teens and before they have attained true and full puberty and are physically utterly unfit to bear the strain of marital relations.

Sir, the secondary aim of the Bill is to remove the principal impediment to the physical and mental growth of the youth of both sexes and the chief cause of their premature decay and death. The measure I propose will help to remove the causes which lead to heavy mortality amongst Hindu married girls. The very high percentage of deaths among them is due to the fact that they are quite immature and are utterly unfit to begin married life when they actually do so. Speaking of the strain imposed on girls by married relations, Dr. Lancaster in his book " Tuberculosis in India ", page 47, says :

" People forget the fearful strain upon the constitution of a delicate girl of 14 years or even less, which results from the thoughtless incontinence of the newly married boy, or still more, the pitiless incontinence of the remarried man. Serious as these causes of strain are upon the health of the young married girl, they sink into insignificance in comparison with the stress of maternity which follows. It is a truism to say that the process connected with reproduction which, from one point of view, may be regarded as the most important of human functions, should be allowed to take place under the most favourable conditions possible. Surely it would seem to be of fundamental importance that these processes should be delayed until the body as a whole shall have attained their full development and be prepared for this great crisis. For in no other crisis of life does the ultimate result depend so much upon the physical condition of the body."

And he pleads :

"Let even so much as two years be conceded, and in place of 18 years which may be reckoned as the lower limiting age in ordinary cases of marriage in the west, let 16 years be the age which popular opinion shall regard as the normal one for marriage in this country. The result will be an incalculable gain in the health of the women of India as also in that of the children whom they bear."

Sir, this is the opinion of an authority on the subject. My Bill falls far short of this aim : it is only a step towards this desideratum.

Leaving aside this—and I confess that I regard this as the most important aspect of the question—I think the Bill deserves the support even of those to who nothing matters but the political emancipation of the country.

Sir, progress is unity, and if we are to make any advance, and the country is to come into line with, or nearly into line with the progressive countries of the West or to be completely free from their domination, a programme of social reform of a thorough going character, of which the abolition of child marriage will be a principal item, must be taken in hand along with the pursuit of political reform. Much of this social reform is no doubt the domestic or private concern of the people of the country and does not call for legislation. I believe, Sir, that just as the veil, with all that it connotes, has disappeared in the greater part of Turkey and is fast disappearing from the rest of it, so must the pardah, the Chouka, child marriage, enforced widowhood, the ban on inter-dining and intermarriage, caste in its present rigid and ossified form, and untouchability disappear from India, if we are to be in a position to hold our own in the international conflict of interests, the clash of colour, and the struggle for life that is raging furiously in the world. For we, must remember, Sir, that even political emancipation, freedom or Swaraj, by whatever name you call that one fact, droppeth not like sweet manna from heavens. It has to be won. It has to be wrested from unwilling hands, and so long as these evils exist in this country, we will neither have the strength of arm nor the strength of character to win freedom. Once these evils are gone, a spirit will arise in the land which no power on earth will be able to quench, a strength of arm to fight for freedom will be developed, which the might of the mightiest will not be able to resist. I am sure, Sir, that as the day follows the night, so will these evils disappear, and disappear soon. But there are certain matters of a serious nature in which considerations of humanity and the inalienable rights of a human being—and that human being, the innocent and helpless child—call for the immediate intervention of the Legislature. The present Bill, Sir, concerns one of those matters. In order to protect the inalienable rights of the innocent children and to concede to them the right to live—the life nature gives them—it is necessary that infant and child marriages must come to an end at once and that boys and girls grow up unfettered by marital ties and unburdened with family cares which have not only immensely accelerated the death rate amongst the young married people, especially girls, but have dangerously lowered the vitality of the race, stunted their growth, and barred their way to prosperity and happiness.

Sir, I will say one word more as to the utility of the measure I propose for enactment. The Bill, if passed, will give a real and effective protection to girls, which the Age of Consent Act does not do. That law is a sort of flank attack on the social and physical evil, I might say the crime, of child carriage. The law of the age of consent, so far as marital relations are concerned, is a dead letter, and has done little practical good except the slight educative effect which it has had on certain classes of people. The law regarding the age of consent has been in existence a pretty long time, but the last Census Report says :

"There is little evidence in the Census figures to suggest that the practice of infant marriage is dying out."

How long, Sir, shall we then allow this canker to eat into the vitals of our race ? Shall we stand by and see the race sink below the point when regeneration and resuscitation become impossible ?

Sir, in some quarters an objection has been taken to the provision in the Bill as to the function which the Magistrate has to perform in the working of the law The fact is that the Bill provides 12 years as the minimum age of a girl for a valid marriage. In order, however, to disarm all opposition on the part of the orthodox people, the Bill provides that a valid marriage of a girl, even in her 12th year, may be performed if there be a conscientious objection to the postponing of the marriage any longer. Some machinery has to be devised for the operation of this provision, and I consider that the Magistrate of the District is the most convenient and safe agency through whom the law may be fulfilled. The Bill gives no discretion to him to grant or refuse a license. His function is purely mechanical. When a conscientious objection in the shape of an affidavit is filed, the law enjoins him to issue a licence. I may, however, add that the provision with regard to the Magistrate is not an essential or an organic part of the measure I propose, and there will be no objection on my part to a suitable modification of the provision, if it can be devised.

I have a word to say to Government as to their attitude towards this Bill. A heavy responsibility rests on them for the continuance of this evil. Government probably know that several Indian States, for instance, Boroda, Mysore and Bharatpur, have passed laws forbidding marriages of girls below 12. Recently, the state Kotah in Rajputana promulgated a new Marriage Act with effect from 1st July, 1927, prohibiting the marriage of girls under 12 and boys under 16, as well as of girls under 18 with men above double their age and of unmarried girls over 18 with men over 45. Even China has passed a law forbidding marriages of girls below 16 and boys below 18. Sir, this shows what attitude Governments really interested in and solicitious of the welfare of their people are taking in regard to child marriage, and the duty of the Government of India lies clear before them. I was taken aback when at the introduction of my Bill, the Honourable the late Home Member declared that he would oppose its passing but that he did not desire to break the convention that Bills should not be opposed at the introduction stage. That, Sir, was a surprise to me. For, had not this very Government, through its Home Secretary, though in an apologetic tone, expressed its sympathy with the measure in 1921 ? I read from the debates of the Legislative Assembly held on the 17th February 1921 :

"Q. No. 123. Lala Girdhari Lal : Do the Government intend to undertake legislation forbidding marriages of girls before the age of 11 and that of boys before 14 ?

Answer by Mr. S. P. O'Donnell : The answer is in the negative. Government consider that under the present conditions, in a matter of this kind which intimately concerns the social customs and religious beliefs of the people, it is preferable that the initiative should be taken by non-officials rather than the Government."

Does this not show by clear implication that in 1921 the attitude of Government towards the question was one of sympathy, and by no means one of opposition ? Sir, it was a surprise to me, as it was to most people, to see that a Government which professes to work for the good of the people, a Government that is representative of a nation that certainly is one of the most advanced in the world in wisdom and in the development of Justice and freedom, and claims—and I think rightly—that it has a great respect for womanhood, should take up such an attitude, and instead of welcoming and promising to support such essentially necessary legislation for children and helpless girls, declare its intention to oppose it. Sir, if Government had said that they had in their hands unimpeachable and overwhelming evidence that the bulk of Hindu public opinion was dead against the measure, and that therefore they could not support it, we could understand their position. The attitude of the late Home Member has been condemned in the country and constructions have been put upon it which I think are unjustifiable, but which Government would do well to prove to be groundless and unjustified by taking up a helpful attitude towards this Bill. For, after all, Government, like the humblest of men, would be judged by its acts and not by its professions. Take this month's number of the Modern Review, the premier magazine in the country. In an article entitled " Indian Social Reformers, etc. " the editor, Mr. Ramananda Chatterjee, says :

" The abolition of child-marriage and child mortality and the raising of the age of consent within and outside marital relations would tend to make Indians a physically, intellectually and morally fitter nation. But British bureaucrats have all along been very unwilling to help Indian social reformers in effecting these reforms by direct and indirect legislation. They had no objection to abolish Suttee, probably because it was mainly a question of humanity ;—the abolition of Suttee was not expected to promote the building up of a stalwart nation. But the abolition of child marriage, etc., is indirectly and almost directly a political as well as a social remedy. So in these matters our British bureaucratic friends fall back upon the cant of neutrality and non-interference in religious and socio-religious matters. As if Suttee, hook swinging, etc., were not such things, which the British Government have stopped by legislation ....".

He adds :

" And this mentality continues in spite of the following admission made in the Census Report of India for 1901 A. D. (Vol. I., page 434).

' Happily there is reason to believe that the leaders of Indian society are fully alive to the disastrous consequences, both to the individual and to the race which arise from premature cohabitation and are anxious to use their influence to defer the commencement of conjugal life until the wife has attained the full measure of physical maturity requisite to fit her for child bearing '."

The editor further adds :

" Twenty six years have passed since this was written, yet the late Home Member of the Government of India declared that he would oppose Mr Harbilas Sada's very modest Hindu Child Marriage Bill. It has to be seen whether his successor will carry out the threat."

Though I, for one, do not believe that British officers in India are inspired by such unworthy motives as are ascribed to them in their attitute towards legislation such as that on the anvil, still it is my earnest hope that Government would reconsider their attitude towards this question of child widowhood—the tragedy of child widowhood as the Pioneer in its issue of the 9th of this month calls it. I would beg the Honourable the Home Member not to say or do anything which would give the social reformers and workers in the country and the public generally, any plausible ground to charge Government with hostility based on political considerations, to all measures calculated to remedy social and physical evils which are a disgrace to all concerned and which effectually bar their way to physical or social welfare.

Another danger lies before Government, which a book and a speech in England have brought to light. Let it not furnish an excuse to its simpleminded critics to suspect it of helping to perpetuate conditions which the base traducers of fallen and subject nations gladly make use of. Just as there are slimy creatures who burrow in dirt, eat dirt and throw out dirt, so are there persons like that notorious writer of "Mother India", whose attempt to revile the "mother" has earned for her the contempt of all sensible people. While she will for a time enjoy the ill repute of a defamer of a nation, to future students of Indian constitutional history she will appear as one of those contemptible characters, who lend themselves to become tools in the hands of scheming opponents of a nation's aspirations.

Sir, there are Indians who think, whether or rightly or wrongly, that Government who is the guardian of India's interests does India an injury by conniving at the continued existence of child-widowhood in the country, as it exposes their motherland to the base lies and vile calumnies of a Pilcher against a suffering class of womanhood, whose high character and sainted lives amidst suffering nobly borne, ought to put to shame those whose vile outpourings in no way enhance the dignity, the prestige, or the glory of the English race. Sir, Providence, as a just retribution for the woes and sufferings to which our passive acquiescence in the continuance of an evil custom subjects the child widows of this country, has condemned us to centuries of political servitude and national impotence, when in our utter helplessness we have silently to suffer the outrageous insults heaped on our womanhood. Sir, when an insult was offered to the Queen of France, the noble Burke in a memorable outburst of impassioned and noble eloquence, exclaimed that the age of chivalry had passed or ten thousand swords would have leapt from their scabbards to avenge that insult.

How fallen are we, and not we alone—pardon my saying so, Sir—but also some others who, having inherited the noble traditions of the English race and being custodians of the honour, the good name and the reputation of this country, allow without a protest the womanhood of India to be so basely traduced and grossly insulted—insulted in a manner which has moved at least one Englishman, a true missionary of Christ, to do public penance in Calcutta for the great crime of a countryman of his

Sir, if Government have no desire or have not the courage to initiate and carry through legislation prohibiting marriages of girls below 12 years of age, they might very well give this private measure their hearty support. But even if the Honourable the Home Member is not disposed to do this, as we think the representative of the Ma Bap Government possessing a genuine solicitude for the welfare of the people ought to do, he will at least take up an attitude of neutrality, release Government Members from the Mandate handicap and permit them to vote according to their conscience, or let the fate of the Bill be decided by the vote of the Indian Members of this House who are principally affected by it. I hope Government have noted that all the amendments so far proposed by Honourable Members not only support the Bill but are directed towards making the provisions of the Bill go much further than I have ventured to do.

Sir, with your permission, I will read the report published in the Times of India of the 24th June 1926, of a heartrending incident, the direct result of a child marriage !

"The sad story of how a young married Mahratta girl, eleven years old, named Bhingoobai, drowned herself in a well at Narayanpet Road Station, on the G. I. P. Railway between Raichur and Wadi, while being sent back by her father to her husband at Shahabad has reached here.

The driver on No. 16 passenger train stated that while examining his engine near the water tank at Narayanpet Station, he noticed a girl get down from the third class bogie carriage and running to station well to jump into it.

The father of the girl told the police that his daughter Bhingoobai had been married to one Luxmon, four years back when she was about six years old. In accordance with the custom, she was sent to her husband's house two months after marriage. After remaining there two months, she returned to her parent's house, was sent back by the latter, but returned again.

This happened several times. Her father taking advantage of one of his relations named Yedoo going to Shahabad determined to send his daughter back to her husband with this relation and himself took her to the station and saw her entrained. While he and Yedoo were engaged in conversation on the platform he was informed his daughter had fallen in a well. He ran to the well with others and a cultivator, named Samboo, jumped into the well and brought the girl out still alive but senseless. She expired soon after."

Sir, this is not a solitary incident of its kind in this country. I have personal knowledge of one or two other similar sad things. Do Government with the knowledge of such happenings still feel justified in opposing or by proposing dilatory proceedings, in postponing the fruition of the labours of people who are endeavouring to alleviate the lot of innocent, defenceless girls who are done to death by ignorant, heartless custom, or a mischievously false notion of social decorum ?

Sir, before I resume my seat, I respectfully and with all the earnestness that I can command, invite the attention of Honourable Members on both sides of the House to the touching appeal of Mahatma Gandhi made at Madras on the 7th September, 1927, for the abolition of child widowhood. He said that there was no warrant for this kind of widowhood in Hinduism, and, he exclaimed with intense grief and agony of mental pain, "I have often said in secret to God, 'If you want me to live, Oh, God, why do you make me a witness to these tragedies ?'"

Kumar Ganganand Sinha (Bhagalpur, Purnea and the Santhal Parganas : Non-Muhammadan) : I sincerely congratulate my Honourable friend from Ajmer-Merwara who has brought forward this Bill to eradicate a deep-rooted evil from the Hindu society, namely, early marriage. Before I proceed further, I must make it clear that by early marriage I mean marriage at an age at which it is contemplated to be stopped by the Bill which we are now considering. Every Hindu knows to-day that taken as a whole his race is on the downward path of physical deterioration attended by intellectual degeneration and is threatened with virtual extinction. The reasons for these are as much political, as much economic as social and my Honourable friend has attacked one of the aspects of our social system which contributes towards such a degeneration. I think he has brought this measure at a right time and in a right place. Any one who has taken care to study the growth of the Hindu society will bear testimony to the fact that taking into account the history of Hindu civilisation, comparatively speaking, the custom of early marriage is a matter of rather recent origin. But somehow it has taken a firm grip of the society, and to free ourselves from it we must struggle very hard. There are unfortunately persons amongst us who try to justify early marriages by quoting scriptures. To them I say that I have also taken care to read scriptures with a view to getting information on the point and have taken pains to discuss it with erudite pundits of our part of the country, and I have come across nothing that can justify the marriage below the age which this Bill seeks to fix as the marriageable age. I do not want, here, on the floor of this House, to enter into learned discussions and dissertions about our scriptures but I am prepared to join issue with anybody who says that what I have stated above is not a fact. There is to my mind no religious sanction behind a marriage of that kind. That is not all. If we look at the matter from other aspects also, it would appear that the reasons and arguments for stopping early marriages are much more convincing. Look at it as a source of increasing the number of young widows who cannot remarry and constantly cast a gloom on the family by reminding all elderly members of the family of the loss the family has sustained in the death of the husband ; look at it from the point of view of the death of child mothers who conceive at a tender age and bring forth sickly babies ; look at it from the point of view of child mortality of which child parentage is a potent cause, and I am sure you will say that you must root out the evil at all costs. It is sapping the vitals of our race, and to let this continue is to commit racial suicide. I would like to quote some statistics that will illustrate the evil of the custom from the various aspects I have indicated. I was looking into the statistics in the last Census Report and it is stated there that in the whole of British India the infant death-rate amounts to one-fifth of the total death-rate for all ages and about one-fifth of the children die before the age of one year. As to its cause, it is stated :

"Special causes contribute to the high mortality of infants in India. Owing to the custom of early marriage, cohabitation and child birth commonly take place before the woman is physically mature and this, combined with primitive and insanitary methods of midwifery seriously affects the health and vitality of the mother and through her of the child. Available statistics show that over 40 per cent. of the deaths of infants occur in the first week after birth and over 60 per cent. in the first month."

Another remarkable fact that is revealed in the Report is this :

"A marked feature of the statistics of the last 20 years has been the increase in proportion of female deaths since 1901."

Although the Report does not refer to it, it is a matter of common knowledge that where provisions for midwifery are not adequate many child mothers have to pay with their lives for their and their guardians' ignorance. That is often the remote cause but all the same that is an important factor in the mortality of child mothers. The doctors can bear testimony to this fact. There are in this land 216,237,797 Hindus, divided into 110,626,596 males, 105,611,201 females and out of these 20,218,780 are widowed females, and when I come to divide them according to age, the revelations are appalling. You will see that there are 597 widows of the age 1 and less. Between the ages of 1 and 2 years there are 494 widows, between 2 and 3 there are 1,257, between 3 and 4 there are 2,837, between 4 and 5, there are 6,707. The figures for higher ages are :

Age.	No. of widows.
5—10	85,037
10—15	232,147
15—20	396,172
20—25	742,820
25—30	1,163,720

Sir, it is stated in page 155 of the same Report that the large number of Indian widows is due partly to the early age of marriage, partly to the disparity in the ages of husbands and wives but chiefly to the prejudice against the remarriage of widows. The higher caste of Hindus forbid it altogether and as the custom is held to be a mark of social respectability, many of the more ambitious of the lower castes have adopted it by way of raising their social status. I ask, Sir, are these not ghastly revelations ? Are these not things which the House would like to remedy to-day ? Such a large proportion of child mortality, such a large proportion of child widows, such a large proportion of female deaths brought about sometimes directly and sometimes indirectly by early marriages ? Sir, these census reports are very valuable documents. They supply information with regard to almost everything about which we need them and here is a table that has been framed about early marriages. It is stated that in 1881, out of 1,000 males between the ages of 10 and 15, 843 were married ; in 1891, 841 ; in 1901, 860 ; in 1911, 866 ; and in 1921, 879. And between the ages of 15 and 20, in 1881 the number was 617 ; in 1891, 621 ; in 1901 650 ; in 1911, 665 ; and in 1921, 687. Now we come to the females between the ages of 5 and 10 in every 1,000 females in the year 1891 there were as many as 874 married girls ; in 1901, 893 ; in 1911, 891 ; and in 1921, 907. Again between 10 and 15 years their numbers are as follows :—In 1881, 481 ; in 1891, 491 ; in 1901, 559 ; in 1911, 555 ; and in 1921, 601. The House will note that the tendency towards early marriages is generally on the increase, though the increase has not been very large. But in spite of the efforts of social reformers who want to kill the custom of early marriage ; in spite of the abolition of early marriage being advocated in the Press and on platforms by the various social and quasi-religious organisations, we see that we have not been able to kill this evil. It has rather increased in spite of all our efforts during these decades than decreased. The practical effects of child marriage, as I have stated before, are twofold. First, it implies cohabitation at an immature age, sometimes even before puberty, and practically always on the first signs of puberty, resulting in grave physical effects upon the girl and in all the evils of premature child-birth ; and secondly, in the event of the husband dying the child wife is in the case of castes in which the remarriage of widows is prohibited, left a widow for life. I shall not take the time of the House by narrating what Hindu widowhood means. There is no Hindu who does not know it from practical experience in his household It is a life of agony, pains and suffering and austerity. It is a life which has been inflicted not so much by Providence, not so much by the Shastras, as by social customs. I repeat, Sir, it is not difficult to imagine what a childwidow in a Hindu household means. Fancy, mothers seeing the sight of widowed daughters day after day in a helpless fashion, sharing their agony ! Shall it not break the heart of everybody who experiences it ?

Mr. President : Is the Honourable Member going to move his amendment ?

Kumar Ganganand Sinha : I will refer to it later. I am going to move for a Select Committee, not for circulation, Sir, I again congratulate the Member in charge of the Bill for bringing in this timely measure, but I regret that I cannot agree with the details of the provisions of the Bill. I differ from him in regard to some of the particulars. I am going to move that it be referred to a Select Committee and I hope that the Select Committee will go into the details and make the necessary changes which will make the measure acceptable to this House. I will refer first to the question of validity which has been raised in this Bill. It is against all the canons of Hindu law, and the Hindu Shástras, that a Hindu marriage duly performed should be challenged by any temporal authority. The Hindu Shástras prescribe remarriage under certain conditions and certain conditions only ; but our society has come to a stage in which even that is not possible. It is really inconceivable that a Hindu marriage once celebrated according to the Shástras could be invalidated by any authority whatsoever. At present no one can nullify a marriage once duly celebrated, even if the temporal authorities order it, because the society will never accept it, and in case of insistence there will be a great stir in the country which I do not think the House would like to cause. I then come to the question of age. So far as the age of females is concerned, I have nothing to say. It is just as it should be when we take into consideration the present day Hindu society as a whole. But so far as the age of males is concerned, I think the Bill ought to be amended a little. As a matter of fact in his Statement of Objects and Reasons the Member in charge of the Bill has himself stated that according to the Brahmanas, the most ancient and most authoritative book on Hindu law, the minimum marriageable age of a man is 24 years and of a woman 16 years. Regarding boys, he states further that the Shástras do not enjoin marriage at a particular age. But he thinks that public opinion amongst Hindus would fix 18 years as the minimum marriageable age for a boy. Sir, my own opinion is that the minimum marriageable age of the boy should be fixed at 18 years. That is the age of majority in most cases and I do not like that a marriage should be celebrated at a time when a boy has not attained the age of discretion. Below that age physical development is at a very early stage, and I am afraid that a marriage if celebrated before that age would be detrimental to his physical growth. Now, Sir, I seriously object on the same ground on which I objected to the question of validity raised in the Bill to the provision for granting licenses. I do not like that executive authorities should have anything material to do with our social or religious matters. This piece of legislation is designed, I think, to help society and to help the formation of public opinion and it should not provide for anything which may give the power of interference to the Government. With some such imperfections removed, I think, the Bill will be acceptable to the House.

Sir, I move my amendment which is No. 3 on the agenda, namely, that the Bill be referred to a Select Committee.

Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas (Indian Merchants' Chamber : Indian Commerce) : Sir, I rise to give my whole-hearted support to the motion before the House. As a rule, Sir, I am opposed to measures of social reform by legislation. Whilst we have had a number of figures put before the House, giving details and statistics regarding the number of child widows under the age of 10 and so on, my Honourable friend the Rai Sahib from Ajmer-Merwara will admit that this evil has been steadily decreasing during the last say 30 years, even in his part of the country, Rajputana, where I am afraid it can be said even amongst the middle and upper castes and classes child marriage is most prevalent at present.

12 NOON.

The Honourable Member will admit however that the age at which girls are offered in marriage has a decided tendency to increase. What I think the Hindu conscience clearly revolts against now— and when I say Hindu conscience I mean, Sir, the consciences of all those who can think for themselves— is that any of those cases which occur at present should at all occur in the year of grace 1927. We feel that it is high time that this should be put a stop to, and I agree with the Honourable the Mover of the Bill that it is necessary to bring legislation in in order effectively to put a stop to child marriage or marriage of girls under 12. I do not wish to go into the details of how this custom of child marriage came to be and has continued all these years, it may be a very interesting subject, but I am afraid it is quite unnecessary to take the House through the various stages through which we have gone down to offering almost babies in marriage. I do not believe there can be a single Member in this House, or I venture to say a single thinking man in the Hindu society outside who deserves any consideration who would stand up and defend the marriage of a girl of four, five or even of ten years. But even the Honourable mover will realize that, owing to superstition, somehow or other a certain section of the Hindu community—and it does not go by caste but it goes by the extent to which education may have reached that section or not—a certain section of the Hindu community do unfortunately mix this up with their religion. It is therefore necessary if the Honourable Mover's very laudable effort is to meet with success, that the House should act firmly, as I admit they must and as I hope they eventually will ; but let us move with cautious steps. I, Sir, yield to none in my efforts to have child marriage stamped out from Hindu society. I am one of those who feel a humiliation, which I look upon as a great humiliation, when I am reminded that people who profess my creed and my religion have the heart to mar the happiness of their girls, knowing the dangers of child marriage. Bearing in mind the extent to which India is liable to plague, cholera and all the other diseases, none but an unthinking Hindu father alone, or none but a fanatic Hindu father alone can with a quiet conscience offer his girl in marriage at an age which is an age of babyhood and of childhood. We must however recognize facts as they are. I therefore would very much suggest to the Honourable Member to have a little patience and to agree to comparatively slow and cautious steps being taken. All that I would ask him to insist upon is that whenever the step is taken, it should be a firm one. The Honourable Mover has said that several Indian States have introduced measures similar to the one which he has put before the House. I think it would be useful to this House, constituted as it is not only of Hindus but also of Muhammadans, Europeans and Parsis, who are all intent upon saving Hindus from this severe drawback, if it is realised that these various communities and their representatives in this House require to be satisfied that the real and correct religious feelings of the Hindu community are not in any way injured. (Hear, hear.) I am inclined to feel, Sir, that when the Bill comes to the stage of consideration clause by clause, it would be possible to prove on the floor of this House that anybody who mixes up the correct Hindu religion in its purity with child marriage is either a person fit to be locked up in a lunatic asylum or one who has some vested interests connected with the continuance of child marriage ; but that stage, Sir, must be reached by the regular process. I therefore hope that whilst I am anxious to give my fullest support to the Bill at the stage at which it has now reached, the Honourable the Mover will not insist upon pushing it through this House to-day but will have patience and will see that when the House does eventually act, it will act firmly and without any fear. I hope, Sir, that the Government, if they carry the motion which I see on the agenda paper, will also take every possible step to see that as little delay as possible takes place in getting the opinions of all whose opinions we should have, and let us hope that at the next winter Session in Delhi this Bill will emerge from this House as a measure satisfactory both to the House and to the thinking section of the Hindu public. Sir, I have great pleasure in supporting the motion.

Mr. President : Is the Honourable the Home Member going to move his amendment ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar (Home Member) : I move, Sir, that the Bill be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinions thereon.

Mr. President, the zeal, the earnestness and the sincerity with which the Honourable the Mover has moved his motion have I think, been greatly appreciated by, and have left a deep impression upon, the House, and the impression is felt as much on this side of the House as among the Honourable gentlemen opposite. (Cheers.) No one can deny, no one could be disposed to deny, that the evils and the many ramifications of the evils to which the Honourable gentleman referred constitute in themselves a great problem and one which demands a solution. So far as the Honourable Member's Bill expresses the principle that one of the various means of approaching this problem should be by legislation of a civil character, that is a principle with which I myself have a very large measure of sympathy. Everyone, I think, will agree that our best hopes for progress and for a remedy must lie in the progress of enlightenment, in the support of enlightened and educated public opinion in these matters, and in the establishment of practices based upon public opinion.

(Cheers.) But I do not deny that a great responsibility rests upon the Legislature and upon the Government to do all they can to promote the rapid development of public opinion on those lines. We have as a matter of fact undertaken penal legislation in the matter. A measure of penal legislation, which at any rate is to a certain extent germane to the question, will probably be before the House at a later stage to-day. The Honourable mover of this Bill has confined his attention to civil legislation, and I agree that the extent to which progress can be stimulated and to a certain extent aided by means of civil legislation is a question which merits very careful and very serious consideration. The Honourable Member stated that the Government of India have a great responsibility in this matter. I entirely concur. But one of the responsibilities and a very heavy one on the Government of India is to ensure that where measures undoubtedly impinge very deeply upon the religious ideas and the social customs of very considerable sections of the population, all legitimate interests and all legitimate opinion should be carefully, fully and fairly ascertain. Another part of the responsibility which rests upon the Government of India is to see as far as in them lies that such measures as are proposed are really conducive to the ends to which they are directed. Now, Sir, I do not intend to go into the particular merits of this Bill. Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas in a powerful speech has just urged upon the House and upon Government to exercise caution in the matter. I confess that note of caution seemed to me to be a wise counsel. I think that before the House proceeds to consider this Bill in greater detail it ought to pass the motion which I move for further eliciting opinion thereon. Legislation, however well-intentioned, if it is hasty, is not likely in the end to promote the purpose for which it is intended. Legislation which is passed without due consideration may have consequences very remote from those which were intended. I am not opposed to the main principle of the Honourable Member's Bill on its merits, but I do appeal to the House to show that spirit of caution which is enjoined by Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas. I ask the House to agree that this motion for the purpose of further eliciting opinion upon the Bill be passed.

Lala Lajpat Rai (Jullundur Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, I really have no patience with those people who always want to proceed slowly and cautiously in matters of such vital importance for the well being of the community as the measure under consideration is. The voice against child marriages was raised in this country by a Hindu of very great pre-eminence whose name is honoured all over the country, by all sections of the Hindu community, I mean Raja Ram Mohan Roy, as early as 1830. He and his co-workers thought that the spread of education in this country would be so rapid and the conscience and intelligence of the community would be roused in such a short time that he and his colleagues would live to see the actual carrying out of this reform. But a foreign government has retarded the intellectual and social progress of this country by its very dilatory methods and by its slow and cautious measures—political, economic and social. If you study the Shastras and the Smritis, you will find, that the Hindus have always been changing their social laws according to the needs of the times, having had the power to do it by enacting legislation. Social reform is no easy task in any country ; it has not been easy in any age. Even in western countries, where education has filtered down to the masses and where bombastic claims are being made of enlightenment and purity of life, social reform is not an easy task. But social reform in a country like India which is governed by a foreign nation, a foreign power and a foreign race, is much more difficult ; and even the recognition of a primary thing like this, takes so much time, and is always opposed by dilatory methods proceeding either from the Government or from those who bring in religion in every measure, conceivable or inconceivable. Sir, I do pretend to have some knowledge of the Hindu religion. In my opinion such customs and manners have their origin, not in religion, but in certain political and economic causes, which bring about a change in the minds of the people who observe these customs and manners. Religion has nothing to do with it, and I emphatically repudiate the idea that the Hindu religion enjoins on anybody marriages of infants and children as have been going on in the immediate past and as are even now being celebrated in the name of religion. I beg to point out, Sir, that public opinion on this question has been sufficiently educated. At no time and at no stage will there be a lack of people who will oppose a measure of this kind in the name of religion. As long as legislative effect is not given to the desires of those who want this reform the opposition will go on. The question is simply this : Is the measure a right one or not ? If it is a right one, it ought to be accepted by the Legislature : if it is a wrong one, it ought to be rejected. So far as the Government's attitude is concerned, they say that we should proceed cautiously and that the opinions of the people concerned should be obtained, so that there might be no infringement of their religious susceptibilities. I might point out that Government have not kept that principle invariably in view. The Government at least should not have the face to say that they care very much for public opinion in this country. Do they care for it in other matters ? Certainly not. Public opinion has very often been expressed very strongly and clearly ; but the Government have simply trodden over it, disregarded it and followed their own inclinations. The easiest method of ascertaining public opinion in this matter is that this measure which affects the Hindu community should be left to the Hindu Members of this Assembly ; let them decide among themselves as to what should be done. The Government should not interfere. There are representatives of orthodox Hindu opinion here who have come from different parts of the country and there are representatives of those classes also who may be called heretics and who are reformers ; there are representatives of all classes. It is for them to decide upon legislation in this matter. The easiest way to ascertain public opinion and to find out whether the community is in favour of or against the measure is to leave it entirely to their representatives here. But when the Government interferes, I submit, it takes a great responsibility and it lays itself open to those charges of mixed motives which have been levelled against it by such clear-headed people as the editor of the Modern Review ; he is not given to bluffing ; he is not given to exaggerating and he always expresses very balanced opinions on questions social, political, and economic. (An Honourable Member : "Moderate.") The feeling is very strong on this side of the House against the suggestion of the Home Member that more time is required for eliciting information in regard to this matter. But, even assuming that there is need for it ; the motion of my friend, Kumar Ganganand Sinha, gives that opportunity. If you simply circulate this Bill for opinion now, it will not come up for consideration soon because eliciting public opinion is a huge task. Some people will express and some will not express any opinion and the Government may not feel satisfied. I do not think my friend, Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas is quite justified in saying that if this Bill were circulated for eliciting public opinion we would have an opportunity of finishing this legislation in the next winter Session. I do not think that is possible. But even if there are some people who are very anxious that the measure should not be proceeded with at once and that it requires closer examination in certain details their desire will be fulfilled by a reference to a Select Committee. It will give ample time to people who desire to express their opinion to do so. The measure has been before the House for several months now ; it has been discussed and commented on in the papers already and people have expressed their opinion in the public Press. It is not as if it is sprung as a surprise to-day or on a few days' notice ; it has been practically on the anvil for several months now ; therefore there has been sufficient opportunity for public opinion to express itself ; and if any further opportunity is required, the proposal of my Honourable friend, Kumar Ganganand Sinha, affords that opportunity. Reference to a Select Committee means that the Select Committee will meet, it will discuss and consider all the opinions submitted to it in a definite time and make its Report. The Report cannot be submitted in this Session, but it may be submitted in the beginning of the next Session. It will thus give us an opportunity to accept or reject this measure as may be decided upon by the majority of votes within a definite time. But, Sir, the acceptance of the proposal made by the Honourable the Home Member that the Bill should be circulated for public opinion will mean practically shelving the measure. I therefore strongly oppose the motion, and would ask the Hindu Members and other Members also who claim to be enlightened and broad-minded, not to vote for this amendment, but to accept the amendment proposed by Kumar Ganganand Sinha. At this stage I do not want to make any very lengthy comments on this measure, but I want to say one thing. If I had my way, I would raise the marriageable age of girls to at least 16 years. I would not be content with 11 or 12 years. I know that even in the most advanced countries of the world, the marriageable age of girls is not fixed, and I also know that even in India the early marriages are confined mostly to what are known in the Hindu community as the " higher castes ". It is not such a widespread evil as some people think ; but even for those limited classes and for the general political progress of the country, the question is of the most vital importance and should be taken in hand as soon as possible. The Honourable Member has been very cautious, in fixing the marriageable age at 12. I am very sorry to say that even such a cautious measure is not acceptable to certain Members of the House and they still want to proceed slowly and cautiously. After eliciting public opinion, the Bill may or may not come up within any measurable distance of time. Sir, this measure being a very moderate one, the Government ought not to shelve it by insisting on their amendment to circulate the Bill for eliciting public opinion. I would ask the independent Members of the House to vote for the motion that it be referred to a Select Committee.

I will only add one word, and it is this. When I am supporting this motion, I should not be considered to admit that in India we have an extra dose of sin in our men and women in social matters. I do not want to go into details. Sir, all communities in the world are victims of social abuses. We have certain classes of bad customs, while others have got certain others.

[Lala Lajpat Rai.]

This is not the occasion for me to go into them, but I do not think that anybody can point his finger and say that we in India have got the greatest dose of sin in the world in the matter of bad social customs, social manners or morality. I do not defend the practice of child marriage, Sir, in any way or in any shape or by any explanation. It is simply indefensible. It cannot possibly be defended on any grounds, but at the same time I do not want it to be understood that we are, as I have already said, for that reason immoral people or even an unmoral people. I say, Sir, that we are victims of our social customs, as some other people are victims of their own social customs. We want to progress, and I am perfectly certain that this evil custom would have been simply stamped out of India if we had the legislative powers in our hands, earlier. In all these matters of social reform, a certain amount of coercion has to be used, success can be achieved only when the leaders of the community sit together in a Legislature and decide to exercise a certain amount of coercion in bringing about the necessary reform. But, Sir, we have been powerless in the past ; we are powerless even now. Even if this measure is passed, some people will memorialise the Viceroy to veto it. Therefore, I would appeal to the Government Members not to throw in their weight in favour of shelving this measure, because it is of very great importance to the people of India. I am glad that in spite of this debate being misinterpreted in various ways by the enemies of political progress and of our political aspirations, in India or outside, we are staunch in the matter of pushing forward social reform, whatever may be the interpretation that may be put upon our speeches, methods or measures. We are determined, Sir, that the evil customs prevailing in our country, which are eating into the vitals of the nation and which stand in the way of our general and political progress, should be entirely stamped out. Sir, I am confidently able to say that the Hindu community as a whole has begun to realise the evils of child marriage and they want to get rid of it. But, there are always some people who are opposed to change and who are conservative to an extraordinary degree. They may be actuated by the best of motives, but they are the enemies of progress and their voice is not entitled to much weight. It is enough to follow the enlightened public opinion of the country. Therefore, I commend the motion made by my friend Kumar Ganganand Sinha for the acceptance of this House and not the one made by the Honourable the Home Member.

Mr. W. A. Cosgrave (Assam : Nominated Official) : Sir, I rise to support the amendment moved by the Honourable the Home Member, that the Bill be circulated for eliciting public opinion thereon. I have just listened with great interest to the speech delivered by my Honourable friend Lala Lajpat Rai, and I must say that I have hardly ever heard a more convincing speech in favour of the amendment that the Bill be circulated for eliciting public opinion thereon.

The first point I would mention is that my Honourable friend Lala Lajpat Rai said that he would like to raise the age of marriage to 16, while under clause 3 of this Bill, the proposed age is 12. If Honourable Members will read the amendments tabled on this list, they will see that there are many different proposals as to what the age should be under clauses 3 and 4. Personally speaking, I think that many of us are of the opinion that, as far as possible, the age of marriage ought to coincide with the age of consent. But in view of the fact that my Honourable friend Lala Lajpat Rai thinks that the age should be raised to 16, and that other Honourable gentlemen have tabled amendments proposing other ages, I think that it is a very cogent argument in support of the fact that this Bill should be circulated for eliciting public opinion. I really owe an apology to the House for speaking on this Bill, because I agree in many ways for once at any rate at least with my Honourable friend Lala Lajpat Rai when he says that this is primarily a matter for Hindus to decide. And I think there is also another reason why the Bill should be circulated. How many Hindus are there in India ? This is a Bill which will affect more than two hundred millions of people.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt (Burdwan Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Is not this House representative of the Hindus ?

An Honourable Member : Not entirely.

Mr. W. A. Cosgrave : There are very good representatives of the Hindus on the other side, I quite admit, but I think that a Bill which affects the social and religious, if I may say so, customs of more than two hundred millions of people should be circulated for opinion. I am speaking as a private Member, and I think that it might be possible that, if this Bill is circulated, some sort of undertaking might be given that it would come up for consideration again at a definite period. It is not for me but it is for the Honourable the Home Member to say as to whether this Bill will come up again at the Delhi Session or at the next Simla Session. But speaking as a Government officer who has spent 24 years in this country and who is very keen on every sort of social reform, I personally am entirely in favour of having some sort of law on the subject. I agree with my Honourable friend, Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas, that social reform should as a rule be accomplished without legislation. But in these cases we seem to be able to do very little without some sort of legislation. Judging by the numerous Bills and Acts introduced by my friend, Sir Hari Singh Gour, it is almost impossible to get social reform without some form of legislation.

Another great defect, as far as I can see, in the present Bill—and in this matter I am speaking as a Government officer who is keen on social reform—is that there is no penalty provided in the Bill and that the only action left to the District Magistrate, who is supposed to be a sort of maid of all works in these social matters and other things, is to accept the affidavit which may be true or may be untrue. Well, Sir, I do not agree with my Honourable friend Kumar Ganganand Sinha that the Bill should be referred to a Select Committee at the present time. I hope it will come to a Select Committee later on, because personally I have the greatest sympathy with my Honourable friend Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda in the motives which have led him to introduce his Bill. I notice that my Honourable friend Kumar Ganganand Sinha has as much dislike as I have for clause 6 of the Bill. And personally I think one objection to clause 6 of the Bill as it stands at present is that it is a loophole for all sorts of evasions of the Bill. I think, Sir, I have shown that there are many points in this Bill which require consideration by the country at large before the Bill goes to a Select Committee. I personally would have great sympathy with the Honourable gentlemen on the other side if they said that they did not want to have a District Magistrate interfering with Hindu marriages, and personally I think clause 6 will be practically either a dead letter or else it will give a convenient loophole for the evasion of the spirit of the Bill moved by my Honourable friend Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda. And, Sir, I personally, as an apostle, if I may say so, of laissez faire, like to interfere with people's social customs as little as possible ; I like to see people happy and contented, I don't like interference with my social customs and don't like to interfere with other people's social customs, and I think, Sir, this clause 6 is open, as the Honourable Kumar Ganganand said, to very serious objections. I think that this is a question that I can quite understand public bodies and other people who are consulted saying that they would rather have this clause omitted. And, Sir, I can also imagine that there are certain people who might possibly object to the definition of " Hindu " in clause 2. There are of course all sorts of Hindus but there are some people who might say that the term Hindus cannot include Brahmos as well as Buddhists. For all these reasons, Sir, the reasons that I have given that there is a great division of opinion as to what the age should be in this Bill, that there is a division of opinion as to what interference there should be by the district authorities as regards granting licenses on the basis of an affidavit or as to whether there should be a penalty in this Bill for disobedience to its clauses, for all these reasons, I consider that there is a very strong case for referring this Bill for the elicitation of opinion. I hope speaking again as an officer keen on social reform, I personally hope that the Bill in some form or other becomes law within a very short time. I do not want it to be considered that in any way I am unsympathetic to this great cause of social reform of which I think my Honourable friend Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda is a very worthy champion.

Mr. M. R. Jayakar (Bombay City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Sir, I rise to support the motion made by my Honourable friend Kumar Ganganand Sinha and to oppose the one made by the Honourable the Home Member. I have listened very carefully to the speech of the Honourable the Home Member and I must say, in absolute frankness, that occasions like these in my opinion are the only test which show whether our Government is national in temper. We are often told, Sir, that the justification for a foreign government to be in this country and to be at the helm of affairs is that, although for political reasons it is for a time foreign in personnel, it is growing increasingly national in temperament. Often that claim is made before us as a justification for the anomaly of a preponderence of Englishmen on the Government Benches. But, when occasions like these come, Sir, the real weakness of the British Government as in sole control of this country, becomes apparent. I want the Englishmen on the opposite Benches to take up a proper attitude on such questions. I can quite understand, Sir, that dealing with questions of this complexity, as they must appear to Englishmen, their attitude would be as follows :—" I will not apply my own mind to this question to see whether the remedy wanted is right or wrong : I am told by certain sections of Hindus that it concerns their religion : that gives me a fright : I will not touch the matter ; let it go ". That attitude, Sir, is the attitude of ignorance and timidity. A more natural attitude, if I may presume to speak for the benefit of my English friends opposite, would be this. Let them judge this question from their inherent notions of right and wrong. Having judged all such questions as enlightened individuals and come to a determination that the matter is inherently right, then as forming the Government they are entitled to look for a certain measure of support from the enlightened sections of the community. We can never get, on any question of social reform, the whole of the country to agree. The Government are entitled to ask themselves after having decided that a Bill is a right measure, whether the enlightened sections of the community give their support to it. In every community there are enlightened and unenlightened sections and the enlightened section ex hypothesi is always a minority. I say the Government are entitled to seek for this measure of support for any social legislation. I am prepared to concede their claim that the enlightened section of the community should be with them. This is the only question to which the Government in such matters have to address themselves. This is the " Caution " of which the Honourable the Home Member has talked so much. He requires the ascertainment of public opinion. For what, may I ask ? Is it for the elicitation of the obvious truth that the proper place for a child below 12 is the nursery and not the marriage bed ? Is he going to ascertain public opinion on this important question—that such a child should, for its proper up-bringing be in the nursery or the play ground and not in the marital chamber ? Does he want to ascertain public opinion on this obvious question ? The Honourable the Home Member has a daughter, I suppose. I hope she is less than 12. If so, he can understand the force of my remarks. I am surprised at this frequent reteration of caution, Sir, caution, yes. Caution that the right measure is before the House. Caution, that the advanced and enlightened section of India supports it. But caution, in this that we want on such a plain question to ascertain Hindu opinion, representatives of which opinion are gathered on this side except for a few ! When the social fabric is on fire, we are asked to have " caution ", to find out whether public opinion demands that the fire should be put out. Caution for what ? That a child below 12 should play and grow instead of being married. Surely, he is an Englishman and he understands. I therefore think, Sir, that this advice of caution is absolutely misplaced in this case. Did Government consult public opinion when Mr. Macworth Young stated to this House the other day that after 12 years of service they would give young English I. M. S. men a gratuity of Rs. 37,000 ? Was public opinion consulted on that question ? Did Government consult public opinion when such temporary English officers brought to this country, after six years of service, were given a gratuity of Rs. 12,000 ?

Mr. G. M. Young (Army Secretary) : The gratuity in question is given to Indians as well as Englishmen.

Mr. M. R. Jayakar : My point is did Government consult public opinion ? " Caution " comes only where questions of India's national welfare are concerned. I do not want to be misunderstood. I understand the difficulties of a foreign Government. I am prepared to sympathise with them up to a certain point. But when they take their shelter under the advice of " caution " on questions which are only too obvious to the mind of any sensible man, I lose patience. The difficulty is, as I said before, the Englishman refuses to apply his mind to this question as he would in his own country. He is simply frightened by the attitude of the orthodox, which in every country must be opposed to social reform It is here that my complaint against the British Government comes in ; not against their caution, but against the overdose of such caution. I agree, Sir, with the view of my Honourable friend Lala Lajpat Rai, that public opinion has long been agitated over this question. Since what time ? Long before some of us were born, and perhaps long before the parents of some of us were born. Since 1831 or thereabouts this question has been agitated, nearly 80 or 90 years ago, and yet the Honourable the Home Member gets up and says, " We want to ascertain public opinion ", after 80 years, to find out what is the proper environment for a child below 12 years. I can assure my Honourable friends opposite that when Swaraj comes—which seems to be doubtful under the present clouds—we would pass measures of this description in the very first sitting of our Legislature. I can assure my Honourable friends it would not take 10 minutes to pass such a measure if we were sitting on the Benches opposite under our own Government. (Laughter.) All the three readings will be gone through in the course of one day, perhaps in the course of a morning (Mr. D. V. Belvi : " Question ".) There may be some Belvis even then. They are bound to be in any generation, but they will be in a most solitary minority. They may have a significance here before a timid Government. They will have no significance before a national Government that knows its own mind as to what the country needs. Their importance is heightened by the timidity of a foreign Government, if I may say so.

Mr. B. Das (Orissa Division : Non-Muhammadan) : They are Pandits and Gurus.

Mr. M. R. Jayakar : My Honourable friend Mr. Das says, " They are Pandits and Gurus ". But unfortunately Mr. Belvi is in neither of these categories. My Honourable friend Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas also took the contagion and spoke of caution. I was surprised to hear that gospel preached by a person who always showed the courage of writing dissenting minutes and minority reports on Commissions. (Laughter.) Caution in social matters up to a certain point is good. Caution beyond that point is really misplaced caution. (Lala Lajpat Rai : " A crime ".)

Another thing which I should like to ask the Honourable Benches opposite is, do they really think that social reform could ever be had without some coercion ? If so, they are mistaken. A certain amount of coercion is absolutely necessary. All Governments exercise this coercion. The British have done it in India. Their Government was less timid years ago when its conscience was touched—in 1872, 1864, 1863 and 1859—and important messages of social advancement were preached to this country through British Indian legislation. I am surprised how those Governments could be more courageous than the present Government. They had not then the benefit of so many representatives of the people on the other side to advise them. May I ask the Englishmen opposite when you suppressed suttee, when you did away with all the disqualifications due to change of religion, when you dealt with crimes which were practised in the name of religion, when you dealt with all the disabilities which were regarded as of the essence of the Hindu religion—that glorious renaissance of British legislation which went on for 25 or 30 years, but which unfortunately absolutely ended with the Morley-Minto reforms, did you not take your courage into your hands : Governments were not so timid in those days. Look at the speeches which were made by Government Members on those occasions—names which have stood as beacon lights in the annals of British social legislation. I have no time to go into those speeches. We think that this measure is right and we supported it in that belief by the enlightened opinion in this country. That is enough for our purpose. We proceed on, taking the consequences. This is the right attitude for my friends opposite. Unless the Government show courage, no progress can be made. They show this courage in other pieces of legislation which affect the political affairs of the country. Take for example, the Reserve Bank of India Bill. How did Sir Basil Blackett take his courage into his hand and defy the Legislature ? He did not say, " Let us circulate for ascertaining public opinion whether I am right in my view." That is because in such measures the Englishman applies his mind to the rights and the merits of the particular case. In questions like the present he refuses to do that. He is simply frightened by the orthodox in this country. I submit, Sir, that that is not the proper attitude. The Bill is a very cautious Bill. If I had my own way, I would do away with clause 6 entirely, and I do hope when the Bill goes to the Select Committee, it will be done away with. Government have the further assurance that in places like Baroda, Mysore, etc., where Swaraj obtains within certain limits, or pseudo-Swaraj obtains, whichever way one might take it, such measures have been passed. I may mention for the edification of my friends opposite that in Baroda this measure was passed long ago, and a section like section 6 stood in the Act providing loopholes. The State found that these loopholes nearly overran the provisions of the Bill, and a Commission has been appointed—I am stating my impression—a Commission has been appointed for the purpose of finding out ways and means by which these exceptions may be done away with. This is in backward Baroda and yet we are told in 1927, on the 15th of September, that the civilized British Government must want further elucidation of public opinion, further proof that public opinion wants such a measure. When more backward States have gone further and have progressed upon such a measure in a more drastic manner, this Government stands by in doubt and caution, I want the Government Members to consider this question very carefully. In the minds of people like myself, their present attitude will determine very largely the esteem and trust in which we regard this Government and its personnel. As I said in the beginning of my speech, these occasions are the test, whether this foreign Government can ever become national even in temper. The only safety of this foreign Government is to make itself more and more representative of enlightened national sentiment when questions like this come before the House. Personally speaking, I agree with Lala Lajpat Rai that the age should be raised to 18 (An Honourable Member : " 16 ") to 16, and 18 in the case of boys. The amendment is there. I read the other day somewhere—unfortunately I have lost the cutting—that the average height of the English girl during the last few yaers has grown from five to six feet. My Honourable friends opposite must have read this. I may admit that we do not see many specimens of that description up here in Simla. What I am stating appeared in public print, and I am surprised that the height of the English girl should have gone up so much during a few years, I think it is 6 feet, I am merely quoting from memory. (An Honourabel Member : " 6 feet "). If that is so, surely the Englishman is aware that here the average height of Indian girls is about 4½ feet. We are here making a feeble attempt to raise it to 6 feet. Does he want to consider whether it is necessary for the benefit of the Indian girl that she should rise to that height by proper training and environment ? Is that what he wants to ascertain public opinion on ? And is he going to be frightened because certain men, certain orthodox men like my Honourable friend, Mr. Belvi, are opposed to this healthy measure ? Will he be frightened by such men in his own country ? (An Honourable Member : " No.") No, because there he will judge the measure on its merits and tell his friends, like my Honourable friend, Mr. Belvi, " You are out of date, four generations behind time."

Mr. C. Duraiswamy Aiyangar (Madras ceded districts and Chittoor : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Would you like to imprison girls who are under 5 feet ?

Mr. M. R. Jayakar : I do not know what my Honourable friend wants to know.

Mr. C. Duraiswamy Aiyangar : If a girl does not grow above 5 feet, will you put her in prison ?

Mr. M. R. Jayakar : My Honourable friend has not followed the trend of my argument at all. I say the measure is ultimately calculated to give the Indian girl greater strength and better health than she has now. If my Honourable friend was not able to follow my argument, I am very sorry for him. I am sure the Government Benches see the point and agree with me. Let Government on a matter of this description not issue any mandate at all. Let it leave every Englishman free to vote as he thinks. I am sure that in questions of this character the Englishman has a conscience. Don't warp it by any mandate. Let every Englishman be free to vote and I have no doubt that when he knows the real significance of this measure, he will not be opposed to a measure by which we are making an attempt that our girls should rise to the same height and strength as the girls in his own country.

(Some Honourable Members moved that the question be put.)

Mr. D. V. Belvi (Bombay Southern Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I am very thankful to you for giving me an opportunity to reply in my feeble way to the arguments advanced by such stalwarts as my esteemed friends, Lala Lajpat Rai and Mr. Jayakar.

Mr. K. Ahmed (Rajshahi Division : Muhammadan Rural) : Put high heels on your shoes.

Mr. D. V. Belvi : Before I advance my arguments, I have to make a request through you, Sir, to my Honourable friend, Mr. Ahmed, who has no locus standi in the consideration of this question, who is not a Hindu in the first place, and who is.....

An Honourable Member : He is an Indian.

(At this stage there were several interruptions.)

Mr. D. V. Belvi : Interruptions like these only show the unfitness of my Honourable friends to consider questions of this importance. I beg to state that I yield to none in my zeal for social reform. I am a social reformer myself in my own way, and I beg to tell my Honourable friends who are posing here as social reformers, that I have got more daughters than one, and three of them were married after they had completed their 14th year. I am a believer in social reform, but I do not want to promote social reform through the medium of the Legislature.

Mr. B. Das : Why not ?

Mr. D. V. Belvi : My Honourable friend, Mr. Das, says that I should give him a reply as to why it should not be done. For the simple reason that we are a nation at different stages of civilisation. There are people of different castes, different creeds, who occupy different strata of education. That is one reason. Another reason is that this Bill strikes at the very root of the family law of the Hindus. Does the House understand the implications which are to be found in the bosom of this tiny Bill ? What is the notion of a Hindu as regards marriage ? Is marriage a sacrament, or is it only a contract among Hindus ? Is it a thing which can be set aside at pleasure ? Is that the notion of Hindus ? I do not care for those Hindus who have gone to England, and who have eaten beef and meat. No doubt I have great respect for them, and for my Honourable friends, Lala Lajpat Rai and Mr. Jayakar, who are highly educated and who have travelled much. But we have to realise that the large bulk of the people of this country are orthodox. We have to legislate for those people. Some of my Honourable friends are making a good deal of noise here. It reminds me of what I read in my college days from one of the books of Edmund Burke. He says :

"Because half a dozen grasshoppers under a fern make the field ring with their importunate chink, whilst thousands of great cattle, reposed beneath the shadow of the British oak, chew the cud and are silent, pray do not imagine that those who make the noise are the only inhabitants of the field ; that of course they are many in number ; or that, after all, they are other than the little, shrivelled, meagre, hopping, though loud and troublesome insects of the hour."

My Honourable friend, Lala Lajpat Rai has told us that the Hindu law, rightly read, nowhere lays down the principle of early marriages. It is quite possible to find, after making a long research into our antiquities, authorities for the position which he has advanced here. If I were a member of the Arya Samaj as my Honourable friend is, or a member of the Brahmo Samaj of which the founder was Raja Ram Mohun Roy, I would have very willingly agreed with my Honourable friend, Lala Lajpat Rai ; but unfortunately for me and the large mass of the people who happen to be still orthodox Hindus, it is not the laws that are laid down in the Vedas that we are following. We must be taken as we are. We have got a certain set of tenets, a certain set of beliefs and customs. These must be respected, and the laws which you frame here must be suited to those customs and beliefs. Those customs may be wrong in their origin, but after all, you cannot put them down in a moment. If you take only the pristine purity of the Vedic religion, all that is advocated by my Honourable friends, Lala Lajpat Rai, and Mr. Jayakar, may be true, but we have to take the large bulk of the Hindu population as it now stands. You cannot afford to wound their feelings. Their feelings may be wrong, their customs may be bad, but you cannot root them out all of a sudden. My Honourable friend, Mr. Jayakar waxed eloquent and said that if he and his friends were on the opposite benches, a piece of legislation like this would have been passed in ten minutes. I may assure him that if he were to make a public declaration like that, he and his friends would be the last to be returned to the Legislative Assembly. (Some Honourable Members : "Oh!") I challenge you. If you go back to the country and contest the elections on this issue and get returned to the Assembly, I shall be the first to favour a piece of legislation like this. (An Honourable Member : "We will all come back.") You are always on the top note, talking in hyperbolic language, and you do not want to consider the feelings of the millions of people who are outside this House. We are told that the house is on fire. It is not on fire, but if you were to pass a piece of legislation like this, you would be setting the house on fire. Do you know that there is a large magazine of gunpowder outside this Legislative Assembly, and do you mean to throw into it a lighted match? You cannot do it with impunity. My Honourable friend says that enlightened public opinion is with Government. Are we to suppose that this enlightenment is confined to the four walls of this Legislative Assembly? (An Honourable Member : "Question.") Are we to suppose that there are no people outside who can lay claim to enlightenment and whose opinions should be heeded? Are we to suppose that there is a monopoly of enlightenment and intelligence centred in this Assembly? I refuse to yield to any proposition of that kind.

Mr. M. K. Acharya (South Arcot cum Chingleput : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : It is the monopoly only of the front benches.

Mr. D. V. Belvi : My Honourable friend, Mr. Jayakar, has twitted the Government with saying that it always does not choose to consult public opinion. That charge is not infrequently true, but there are things and things. When you interfere with the customs and the religious beliefs of a community, you are bound to be much more cautious than when you are dealing with a question of taxation or matters of that kind.

1 P.M.

So far as the British Government is concerned, it is bound by a solemn document the Proclamation of 1858, and here for the benefit of my friends I will quote one passage from it. You know it but you very often forget it and it is better that your memories are refreshed. It reads thus :

"We do strictly charge and enjoin all those who may be in authority under us that they abstain from all interference with the religious beliefs or worship of our subjects on pain of our highest displeasure."

That is the charter that was granted to us by Her Gracious Majesty Queen Victoria in 1858. You are now here trying to legislate upon questions of social reform and you wish to make our marriages merely contracts. Make it a contract if you like which can endure only for a certain number of years. Let a man be married to a woman only for three months and let the marriage be dissolved. That is not the idea of a Hindu marriage. I know personally that in my part of the country social reform is going ahead by leaps and bounds. I can give you the instance of a Brahman chief in my part of the country who married an educated lady of the age of 18. He married her openly and publicly. There are many of us who have celebrated the marriages of our daughters and our sisters after they completed their 16th year. My friends here have no right to say that orthodox people should be coerced into accepting your view of social reform.

Sir Hari Singh Gour (Central Provinces Hindi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan) : Why should you coerce the woman ?

Mr. D. V. Belvi : If any woman is not willing to be married, she should not be coerced, but I do not want to have in India a good many maiden aunts.

Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : But you have thousands of child widows.

Mr. D. V. Belvi : I do not want to have a good many maiden aunts like Betsy Frotwood, a loveable character of whom we read in Dickens' David Copperfield. Our idea is that every Hindu girl must be married. That is a sacrament. My Honourable friends must appreciate the general belief in the country. It is better for them to go out of India or to occupy a particular part of India exclusively and then legislate for them in any way they like on social matters.

I have very great pleasure in supporting the motion made by the Honourable the Home Member. It is very rarely that I find myself in agreement with Members on the opposite benches, but there are occasions and occasions. (An Honourable Member : "You are a Swarajist.") Yes, I am a Swarajist in my own way. If Swaraj is granted, I shall be the last man to force on the people any measure against their will. Then, much was said about the abolition of sati. I really wonder why infanticide was not brought in. But those matters are on a different footing altogether from the question which is on the legislative anvil. Marriage is not the same thing among Hindus as consummation. They are two different things. Our idea of marriage is a religious sacrament. Marriage may take place but consummation may not take place for a number of years. Our idea is that when a boy is married to a girl or when a young man is married to a young woman the tie is indissoluble. It is only death that can part the couple. Much was said about so many Hindu widows of a certain age. Mr. President, I decline to go into this forest of figures which can be made to prove anything. It is very easy to enter into a maze of figures but it is not so easy to emerge from those figures. What are the two or three lakhs of young widows in a population of 330 millions and what guarantee is there that a girl who is married on the completion of the 12th year will not be a widow the very next day ? If there are widows, it is perfectly open to them to remarry a second time. Remarriage is allowed by custom and it is recognised by law. I am for remarriage but not for remarriage to be enforced by the Legislature. My Honourable friends may as well make a law that every widow must be remarried. It is said that Hindu widows are suffering a good deal. I do admit that there is a small number of Hindu widows who are extremely unfortunate and who suffer a great deal. But there are Hindu castes and castes. Remarriage is allowed in 99 cases out of a 100. There is no appreciable grievance. Suppose a Hindu girl's husband dies unfortunately within a month of her marriage. It is perfectly open to her parents to give her again in marriage to a suitable bridegroom any time they like. That is the usual custom. It is only among Brahmins who are considered to be at the head of the Hindu castes that the idea of remarriage is not very willingly tolerated.

Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : It applies to Vaisyas and others also, not to Brahmins only.

Mr. D. V. Belvi : My friend has corrected me and I accept his correction. If that is the position, even then it is only a drop in the bucket. (Honourable Members : " No.") I do assert it is. You have no right to say that, simply because you are overzealous to associate your name with this Bill which you desire to see translated to the Statute-book. I tell you this is not the way to promote social reform. How many of you have addressed meetings publicly on social questions ? From how many platforms have you tried to enlighten the public ? It is all very well to come here and introduce a Bill. I know my friend Lala Lajpat Rai stands on a different footing. He is a reformer of the first water. He is a member of the Arya Samaj. I hold him in great respect. If there were more men like Lala Lajpat Rai and Bhai Parmanand all over India, there would be no difficulty whatever, but unfortunately we cannot bring ourselves to be members of the Arya Samaj. Of course their principles are very salutary, very good, but the people cannot be persuaded to accept them and, so long as the people remain ignorant, so long as they are unwilling, you have to put up with them. Education in India is in a very backward condition. That is a trite proposition. There are not even ten people out of a hundred who can sign their names even in the vernacular. It is better to advance education than to force social reform on an unwilling public through legislation of this kind. You will be doing better service if you promote education in the country. Sir, I believe it is only right that this measure should be sent down for circulation among the people. Let them know it. Let them study it. Let them discuss it.. Let them hold thousands of meetings to consider this measure and if you find that there is a considerable bulk of opinion in favour of this measure I shall be the first to say with my friend, Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda, that this measure should be passed into law. I am speaking in the name of the people. I am not personally opposed to the Bill, but I am only voicing the sentiments of the Hindu people who are very many in number and who are unfortunately not within the walls of this Legislative Assembly. I associate myself fully and heartily with the amendment which has been moved so eloquently by the Honourable the Home Member.

U. Hla Tun Pru (Burma : Non-European) : Sir, while I congratulate the leaders of the Hindu community on bringing forward this Bill, I must support the Honourable the Home Member in his motion for referring it to the country for more opinions. In the first place, this Bill is not sufficiently known in Burma, and secondly the term Hindu should not include all Buddhists. I find that Muhammadans have been left out of this Hindu Bill, and the Burmese Buddhists are likewise not governed by the Hindu law of India at all ; they are governed by the Burmese Buddhist law. That law has its origin in the institutes of Manu, but centuries have made it entirely different in spirit and they will strongly resent a set of laws which apply to Hindus being made applicable to Burmese Buddhists. Also there is a large community of Chinese Buddhists in Burma who are certainly not governed by the Hindu law. As a matter of fact also the Burman boy marries at the age of 24 and the

* Speech not corrected by the Honourable Member.

Burman girl at 16 years, and the law to a certain extent will be superfluous. The conditions which obtain in Burma do not hold in India and vice versa. I must therefore strongly urge that even if this Bill is referred to a Select Committee, neither the Burmese Buddhists nor the Chinese Buddhists should be included under the term " Buddhists ".

Mr. M. S. Aney (Berar Representative) : Sir, it pains me to rise on this occasion to express views which are somewhat at variance with those expressed by my friends Lala Lajpat Rai and Mr. Jayakar. I am at one with my friend the Honourable Mr. Sarda in wishing an early death to the pernicious custom, child marriage, which has undoubtedly been eating into the vitals of the Hindu society. The principal question which I want this House to consider is not one of a religious nature. Whether the religious significance of the question should be made much of or not is a point on which I do not want to enlarge at this stage. I want you to consider the question arising out of the Bill like practical politicians, like men whose vote is going to turn the Bill into a law and will consequently affect the destinies of those very people whose interests you are here to further and promote. What I find in this Bill is this. I say without hesitation that the Bill is entirely ill-conceived. The Bill is avowedly intended to render certain marriages invalid. Now you must certainly understand what that means. Marriages under certain ages are going to be declared invalid. Now what is a marriage ? If certain ceremonies prescribed by the Shastras are duly gone through, then those ceremonies confer the status of married life on the persons who have undergone those ceremonies. If by any law you are going to declare that status as null and void, are you not interfering with the religious beliefs and religious understanding of the people ? Are you going to tell them that the ceremony which has been sanctioned in the Shastras as calculated to confer a particular status upon the persons of a certain society has not got any religious significance ? Are we to accept your word as the word of persons who understand the Shastras and the scriptures ? My friends here have quoted this and quoted that. I do not want to fight over the question of the age. That is a different question. But when you here want to legislate that even when the ceremony under the Shastras has been gone through and that status which it is bound to confer has been conferred, it should be declared null and void by virtue of a Statute which you have passed here, it virtually means, Sir, that you are interfering with what has been considered by us as a sacred belief of religion. But leaving aside that question altogether, I am not going to take the Smritis and Srutis from those persons whose knowledge of religious works is no more than a mere smattering, and whose knowledge of those books is probably obtained through translations and commentaries in foreign languages. Those that have read those books in the original form themselves are in a position to understand and say what the position is. Notwithstanding the eloquent plea put forward by my friend Mr. Jayakar, I beg to join issue with him and say that the essense of a particular socio-religious status consists in going through a particular ceremony prescribed by the Shastras. That is the meaning of the ceremony. As regards the age you are clearly on a different plane. But if the ceremony is gone through, although you can punish the man who is responsible for it, you cannot take away the status which it confers without interfering with the essential features of the religious ceremony which is undoubtedly a part of the time-honoured religion. Leaving aside that question, I want to take a practical view of this matter. The practical question is this. Suppose you have married a girl under a particular age, and by virtue of this law the marriage is declared invalid. What is the position of that girl if this Bill is passed ? Under the law she is legally unmarried. Are you prepared to say that the entire Hindu community outside is prepared to accept that status and give their boys in marriage to that girl ? If public opinion on that point is not ready what is going to be the fate of that girl ? Out of sympathy with so many child-widows, whose fate everybody in this House and elsewhere is bound to bemoan, you think that a measure of this nature is necessary. Unless you are satisfied that there is a strong public opinion which will regard the marriages of girls declared under this law to be invalid as really invalid, and with whom the other members of the Hindu community are prepared to enter into relations of marriage and so on—unless you are satisfied that that is the state of public opinion, I am afraid, it will be dangerous to make a law of this nature. Probably you will unconsciously be creating a new kind of evil in the form of widowhood de jure in addition to the widowhood de facto which is already in existence. There will be husbands who under the law will not be married men. There will be wives who under the law will be un-married virgins. Other people in the society or castes will however refuse to accept and treat these women as unmarried, and what will be their position, legal and moral ? Is it not best for you seriously to consider whether you should not first consult public opinion in the country, to see whether it is ready and ripe to accept legislation of this nature ? I believe that the Honourable the Home Member has properly realized the grave responsibility that lies upon him, as the representative of the Government of India in a matter of this nature and he is therefore perfectly justified in insisting on circulating this Bill. It is of no use to him or even the society concerned that the champions of the cause of social reform in this House, who ignore these obvious issues, to call upon the Government to rush through each and every measure which savours of the progressive principles of social reform. That is unfortunately the doctrine for which my leader has stood. He has expressed great impatience at the spirit of caution advocated by some Honourable Members along with the Government in this matter. But what I strongly desire to protest against is the indecent haste with which he urges this House to pass such measures, simply because the music of social reform rings in his ears and he seems to hear some faint echo of it in the Bill in question. He is too impatient to obtain the opinion of the multitude of his countrymen who are going to be affected by this measure. For these reasons, Sir, with great reluctance I have to oppose the motion for a Select Committee and support the motion of my Honourable friend Mr. J. Crerar, with whom it is my good fortune to agree for once.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Half Past Two of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

Mr. S. Srinivasa Iyengar (Madras City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Mr. President, I wish to oppose the motion of the Honourable the Home

Member for circulation. I appreciate entirely the point of view of my Honourable friends, Mr. Belvi and Mr. Aney, in this matter, but I take a view intermediate between the purely rationalistic view and the orthodox view, for I hold that Hindu religion compels such a measure of legislation as this to be enacted. If I really felt that Hinduism was in danger if this Bill was enacted into law, undoubtedly I would join my friends. But on the other hand we know perfectly well—and I have had the good fortune not to be subject to the criticism of Mr. Aney, having some little acquaintance with the Smritis myself—that the criticism is not at all deserved that religion is in danger. That is a very ordinary cry, and Members of this House with all their responsibility must realize that the time has come for them to appreciate that there has been a very considerable change in Hindu opinion during the last two decades. Time was when as a budding social reformer I had to face a storm of opposition in my own province in connection with some varieties of social legislation ; but I find to-day, moving amidst people—and I claim to have as much acquaintance with the people of my own province as anyone else—and moving on the most intimate terms with orthodox members of the community, and with the masses of the population, I say with a full sense of responsibility that Indian opinion has very considerably changed in this matter. But there is opinion and opinion. If opinion is left to express itself then it expresses itself soundly, but there is such a thing as interference with opinion, and if you do propaganda, you can easily manufacture any opinion for one view or another. Except in political matters, where public opinion is crystallizing itself and hardening itself against the Government, in all matters which are purely economic, educational or social, opinion is in a fluid state. However, there is no doubt of the fact that the Bill is in many respects defective. While I congratulate the Honourable the Mover of the Bill on the courage and the public spirit with which he has moved this Bill and on the fervent appeal which he has made to this House, I cannot agree with him as to the two ages which he has fixed for boys and girls, myself being of opinion that no marriage of a girl should take place unless she was really of a marriageable age, and I cannot understand the distinction sought to be made between boys and girls. I think that the average age for puberty being thirteen in this country, one year after that is the proper minimum age for marriage ; and if I had my own way, I would certainly fix it at fourteen. That is caution—not the caution of Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas, who wants the circulation of this Bill and whose caution of course deserts him in other fields of life—but my caution undoubtedly is that fourteen is the proper minimum age for marriage. I know, for instance that in many cases the assumption is made that in India child marriage is the rule. They do not realize that child marriage is the exception. All the speakers with the exception of Lala Lajpat Rai made that assumption, and he was the only one who pointed out that the great majority of marriages are not child marriages, and therefore it is absurd to suppose that the Hindu religion is against what is known as post-puberty marriages. The majority of orthodox people, the high-caste people, the Sellala Mudaliars and Pikais, the high-caste Naidus and even the high-caste Brahmins on the Canara side and in various other parts of India, without the least fear of excommunication, of social or other ostracism, marry their girls after they attain their puberty and marriages do take place in other cases after fourteen or fifteen. We know perfectly well that Indian society is accommodating itself to the changing conditions, and to say that this little Bill which will only affect, of the huge millions of India, comparatively a minor section of the population, should be opposed in the name of orthodoxy is, I submit, a belated protest. Sir, I yield to none in my admiration for Hinduism. I am not an Arya Samajist but a Sanatanist, we must differentiate between a Vedic rule and a Smriti rule. We all know that Smritis contain really a mixture of morality, of religion, of legal rules, and they contain descriptions of states of society and of customs and practices at the time when they were made. That is really the case with all the Smritis, and it is not right to say that what is laid down in the Smritis is really part of the Hindu religion. If they were part of the Hindu religion, then no Smriti rule can be abrogated by man-made custom, but as every lawyer knows as my Honourable friend Mr. Belvi knows, my Honourable friend Mr. Aney knows and the orthodox men and the lawyers in all the courts know perfectly well, custom can be pleaded in favour of inter-marriages, in favour of post-puberty marriages, in favour of many other things which are prima facie prohibited in certain particular Smritis. Therefore, man-made custom can be abrogated by man-made legislation. That is why the Mimansa rule says clearly that it is only Vedic vidhi that is not capable of alteration by custom. When a rule is laid down in the Vedas, that is not capable of alteration by custom, and no amount of immemorial custom could abrogate that rule. But a Smriti rule is easily set aside, and therefore it is that I contend that it is not a question of religion at all, it is a question merely of usage and practice which has been in existence in certain communities, and this has not been observed by the whole of the Hindu society. Therefore, the fact that the majority of the orthodox Hindu society does not follow this custom of child marriage shows that the reform which my Honourable friend Mr. Harbilas Sarda seeks to effect to-day is a reform which is consistent with the genius of the purest and the highest type of Hinduism I submit equally that the reform which he advocates is one which is enjoined in the most ancient Grihya Sutras and you will find there that the girl must be of a marriageable age, because they show that she must be one fit to enter into marital relations with a husband. Therefore it is not a question of Arya Samajists and Sanatanists, it is not purely from the point of view of rational social reform, but I say, speaking purely from the point of view of Sanatan Hinduism and what is the true Hindu religion, that this reform is a very much needed reform, and it does nothing but merely set aside a man-made custom, which, as Lala Lajpat Rai has so graphically described, is really due to political or economic causes. I myself have made some researches, and I consider that it is due to economic causes and causes due to disturbed states of society that this practice came into existence in mediæval and post-mediæval times. You go back to the Svayambara period, where there was no such practice. You turn to the Vedic period, where do you find this custom observed, or in the Puranic period ? These are later customs, and we know perfectly well that in the Smritis, which are like acts of a Legislature, there have been any number of amendments, and it appears as if we, reading to-day all these texts, think them to be of contemporaneous and equal validity, whereas those who have had any experience know that these were just like amendments introduced by subsequent legislation, and we cannot say now even the date of these amendments in many of these Smritis. The Smritis do not enjoin child marriage either except Parasara Smriti. To regard these law books as having religious value is to deny the capacity of this Legislature to amend Hindu law. We have allowed, for instance, in many matters of Hindu law our rights of inheritance to be seriously affected by legislation. When you have given to the Legislature, foreign made and mixed as it is, the power to make laws, national or otherwise, when you have given the Legislature the power to abrogate the rules of the Hindu law of succession, the law relating to a son's liability for his father's debts and great varieties of laws which are of equal validity with the texts which deal with this question of reform, surely it cannot be said that these laws cannot be abrogated by this Legislature. Therefore I deprecate this idea that there is anything at the back of the minds of social reformers of these days—that they want to put down orthodoxy and somehow get this thing done. On the other hand the nationalist of these days is one who wants to reconcile the changing conditions of society with Hinduism as far as possible and wants to take them both together ; and taking that view I contend this Bill does not require any circulation for opinion. What is the opinion of the country ? We are all men who have been returned as representatives of thousands and tens of thousands of people in various parts of the country.

[Mr. S. Srinivasa Iyengar.]

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh (Muzaffarpur cum Champaran : Non-Muhammadan) : But not on this issue.

Mr. S. Srinivasa Iyengar : We have not been returned on any issue. As a matter of fact I do not know on what issue we have been returned. I say this that the idea that the opinion of our countrymen differs from ours in this matter is really a mistaken idea. The times do require that sometimes Members of this Legislature must create an opinion ; and in matters of this description the opinion must go down from the Legislature to the populace rather than from the populace to this Legislature. There are matters on which undoubtedly the opinion of the community at large must be consulted before legislation is undertaken ; but this is not a matter for opinion because admittedly the custom is against you and you want to change the custom ; and if you ask the people, you will get wildly discordant opinions. One set of people will say one thing and another set of people will say another thing ; and what will be the assistance that the circulation for opinion will give to the Members of this Legislature I hardly know. We will be no wiser after reading the volumes of opinions that may be gathered than we were before reading them. Therefore, I think it is our duty to understand whether really we are hurting Hindu religon, whether we are really hurting Hindu society. I am not speaking merely of political interests. I know perfectly well that the Hindu society has survived the shocks of centuries and numbers of innovations and numbers of religious and other conflicts ; and I know the physical and moral and mental basis of Hindu society is sound ; but I do believe in race improvement and I do believe in arresting any deterioration and I do say that eugenics and heredity require that, in the minority of cases in which the child marriage institution is still in existence, it is necessary that we should set aside that custom and that we should boldly without flinching undertake this piece of legislation. Only, I would deprecate laying down the minimum age at 12 for the girls—but that is a matter which should be gone into in Select Committee if the House agrees to that course. I also associate myself with Lala Lajpat Rai and Mr. Jayakar in thinking that reference to the Select Committee will be a good compromise because it will give sufficient time ; and as the Bill must necessarily come up to be discussed only at the Delhi Session of the Assembly it wil give sufficient time for those of our friends in the Assembly who feel that public opinion must be consulted. But, as I said, in this matter there are those social reformers who think it is a principle with them that they must go in for this legislation ; there are others who think that orthodoxy and religion are in danger. I take an intermediate view ; I do not think Hinduism is in danger if this Bill is passed any more than the Bill which enabled widows to remarry. It does not in the least interfere with the Hindu religion. As I said the Hindu religion has survived five hundred changes and this little Bill of Mr. Har Bilas Sarda is not going to affect the Upanishadic interpretation of the universe ; it is not going to affect the Gita interpretation of Hinduism ; it is not going to affect the Karma and Samsara doctrine ; and coming to the popular type of Hinduism, I cannot understand how it is going to affect temples and other rituals. Therefore, Sir, this Bill seeks to affect nothing but a little custom which exists, a coustom which I think is quite out of date, which was forced on a former state of society when owing to war and disturbed conditions, owing to the love of the pater familias to dispose of his girl in marriage and to prevent her from giving herself in marriage, owing to a variety of other causes, this post-mediæval custom sprang into existence ; and that is all that this humble little Bill seeks to remove. Therefore, Sir, I give my heartiest support to the general principle of the Bill, though I do not certainly agree with the age mentioned in it.

I would appeal, if I can appeal at all, to the Honourable the Home Member and to the Leader of the House, who is not here, that the official bloc should remain neutral. That is the least they can do. They should give freedom to vote for their Members in this matter ; but if they do not give freedom to vote, at least they should remain neutral. There is a great deal of force in the admirable speech my friend from Bombay, Mr. Jayakar, made. I have often said that the Government stands in the way of social legislation ; but I have grown wiser. Time was when I was a reckless social reformer. Now I have come to the conclusion that we must take the people with us and that it will not do by hasty legislation to force very much the pace of social reform. But this particular matter is one upon which we all feel most strongly and I consider that the majority of the community is in full sympathy with it So there will not be any rebellion, there will not be any revolution ; there will be no communal riots and you will not have to call in the police or military ; and I can assure the Honourable the Home Member that no question of law and disorder will arise and no question of putting the Criminal Law Amendment Act into force or anything of that kind. I say therefore to this Government " Hands off. Why do you interfere ? " When the non-official Members of this Assembly say that this is the only way in which it is possible for them to discuss this small Bill dealing with a very much needed reform in Hindu society, when they want to improve their race, they want to put down this tragedy of child marriage and to minimise the evil of child widowhood, when they want also to prevent the greater tragedy of child motherhood, when they want to prevent all this, why do you, who claim to be very humanitarian, very rational in outlook and very up-to-date and progressive in ideas, why do you claim yourselves to be the custodians of Hinduism and the custodians of the sacrosanct usages of the dumb millions of India ? Why do you claim that ? We are there to take upon ourselves the full responsibility. If the Government does not want to take the responsibility it can remain neutral ; it need not give freedom to vote, but it can remain neutral. By remaining neutral they can acquit themselves of any responsibility ; but by opposing this measure by this dilatory motion of circulation for opinion— for it is nothing but a dilatory motion I consider—they are certainly trying to interfere with the freedom which ought to exist among members of the Hindu society by their own majority to enact their own laws. I would also appeal to other Members of the House. I am not putting it as if it concerns Hindus only. Situated as this Assembly is, every one of us is entitled to vote and speak on all these matters ; and I certainly think that matters touching Hindu society are matters which touch, if not to that extent, at least to a lesser extent, my Muslim friends and other European friends also. I do contend that it is not their duty at all to say that in the name of preserving the present customs and in the name of moving with that wondrous caution—a word which I have seen nowhere at all except in the transactions of this body—I say that the fact that we are told that the Government would oppose this Bill or support a dilatory motion of this character, tells me that Mr. Jayakar is perfectly right in saying that time and again this Government stands in the way of progress in Hindu society ; and I would appeal to my orthodox friends in this House that even if I am mistaken there is no harm done. What after all do you do ? What is it you do if you allow a girl to be married only after she is 12 years of age ? Personally I would prefer 14 ; and I shall remain neutral if it is less than 14. It does not mean that the Bill proceeds on a wrong basis. What is the great danger ? Let us realise that we who stand up for Hinduism have also a duty to see that Hinduism promotes the growth of a virile race of men and efficient race of girls who will become the mothers of a greater India. I do believe, Sir, that the time has come for race improvement, and I honestly feel that this Bill does not interfere with the Hindu religion. With all the diffidence that I have got from the knowledge that able and conscientious men think otherwise, I have still the right to make to them the appeal to reconsider the position and not to think that religion is in danger by this Bill. On the other hand, religion will be strengthened by a race of grown up men and women and by allowing them a little freedom in the matter of marriage. It was the Svayambara period when religion was certainly not in danger. Are we to say that in the Vedic period religion was in danger ? Sir, we all contend that the Vedas are the only revelation to us, and those who do not believe in them are Nastikas, and I would appeal to them on Vedic authority to support the Bill and not to rely on the Smriti texts which modern lawyers imagine are to be regarded as really part of religion. Smriti texts are no more important than Acharans or customs which can be set aside. Manu Smriti says that the texts can be set aside when Parishads and learned persons find that the times do require a change, and Hinduism and Hindu society have progressed very considerably and have made deliberate changes in those customs which are not the framework of the Hindu society and which do not touch the fundamental tenets of Hinduism which are enshrined in the Upanishads, in the Gita and in other works. I would therefore most cordially support the Bill and oppose the motion that it be circulated for eliciting public opinion. I would once more beg my Honourable friend the Home Member, if he cannot accept the motion for taking this Bill into consideration, he should at least allow this motion to go to a Select Committee, where we can discuss this matter and come to a proper conclusion.

(Several Honourable Members moved that the question be put.)

Mr. M. Ruthnaswamy (Nominated : Indian Christians) : Sir, if I venture to take part in this debate, it is to repudiate the suggestion made by my Honourable friend Mr. Belvi in answer to an interruption of my esteemed friend Mr. Kabeer-ud-Din Ahmed. When he said that Muhammadans have no locus standi in this discussion, I suppose he included all who were not Hindus in that suggestion. Sir, I want to repudiate that suggestion, because, as Members of the Legislative Assembly, whether we are Hindus, Muhammadans or Christians, officials or non-officials, we are bound to take an interest in whatever question is brought before this Assembly. Apart from that, Sir, whatever hurts a Hindu hurts a Muhammadan, hurts a Christian and hurts the country all along the line. The logical conclusion of Mr. Belvi's suggestion would be a sort of varient of the dog in the manger policy. Because my home is beautiful ; I hope that the homes of other people are ugly. Sir, no Indian who has an interest in the progress of this country can accept the suggestion of Mr. Belvi which, to say the last, is suicidal

Then, Sir, the suggestion that this Bill should be circulated for eliciting public opinion seems to rest on a misunderstanding that we are concerned with the promotion of social reform. Certainly when social reform is somewhat in advance of public opinion it may be necessary to consult public opinion so that we may have public opinion with us. But to me, Sir, this Bill of my Honourable friend Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda is not a Bill which aims at the promotion of social reform so much as at the obliteration of the ghastly social deformity which, as so many Hindu speakers who have preceded me have acknowledged, defaces the social system of this country. In order to penalise a crime, we do not suggest that opinions should be elicited, and I think it is a social crime that is sought to be removed by the Bill advocated by Mr. Harbilas Sarda. (An Honourable Member : " Exactly so. ")

Now, Sir, the suggestion of the Honourable the Home Member that this Bill be circulated for eliciting public opinion thereon, if he will allow me to say so, is a mere dilatory proceeding. (Several Honourable Members on the Government Benches : " No, no.") It reminds me, Sir, of a character in one of George Lloyd's novels—I think it was Middlemarch—who was a boy credited with a comprehensive knowledge of Latin. But when it came to translating any particular Latin passage into English, it dwindled into nothing. We have heard of philanthropists who pose as friends of the human race, but when it came to helping their neighbour, it was quite a different story. Now, the argument that this Bill should be referred to elicit public opinion smacks something of that character. Here is an opportunity for Government for improving the social system of a vast majority of the population of this country. There is an enlightened demand for it, and it seems to me, Sir, that Government, instead of delaying the response to that demand, should encourage and meet that demand, because, Sir, as every one will acknowledge, whatever political reform we may be aiming at will be thwarted and delayed by these social abuses which are a blot on the social system of this country.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya (Allahabad and Jhansi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : I am sorry, Sir, I was not here this morning when some of my friends spoke on this subject. (Several Honourable Members : " Louder please ".) A public duty had taken me to another place, and so I lost the advantage of hearing their speeches. But I have heard some speeches this afternoon, and I am struck with amazement by some of the opinions which my esteemed friend, Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar, has given expression to. If there was a proposal not to consult public opinion on a matter of political importance which affected the people of this country, if there was a proposal to enact any law which affected the political opinions of the people without consulting public opinion, my friend, Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar, would have lashed his tongue much more vigorously than he has done to-day. But in dealing with a matter which affects the socio-religious ideas of a vast majority of the people of this country he holds that the Bill should not be sent out for eliciting public opinion thereon, and that legislation should be proceeded with straight off, regardless of the feelings of the people who will be affected by it. I submit, Sir, that the blame which has been laid upon the Honourable the Home Member that he had the temerity to propose that this Bill which affects vast numbers of His Majesty's subjects on a very tender point should be sent out, for eliciting public opinion, is most unjustified. Sir, I have great pleasure in supporting the motion made by the Honourable the Home Member. (Cheers from the Government Benches.) (Mr. Belvi at this stage whispered something to the Honourable the Pandit and some non-official members gave some decisive cheers.) This is not the first time I have been cheered by my friends. (Some Honourable Members : " The cheers are for Mr. Belvi.") I am grateful to Mr. Belvi for trying to help me when there is so much need for help because the volume of opinion that has been expressed against the proposal of the Honourable the Home Member seems to be so overwhelming, so desperately overwhelming that I do need the support of every Member of this House in trying to bring the House to a sensible consideration of the task that lies before them. Sir, what is the matter that we are dealing with ? My friends who are anxious to promote the physical well-being of the Hindu community are entitled to respect. They have not merely my sympathy, but my respect. Whether they are Hindus, Mussalmans, Christians or any others, their wishes for the physical well-being of their fellow-countrymen are deserving of respect. But let not zeal carry us beyond what is right and proper. We desire social reform. We desire a reform of the marriage law. Let us proceed about it in the manner in which we should proceed in bringing forward a piece of legislation which will affect the lives and the happiness and the future existence of a large number of our fellow subjects. I submit, Sir, that the object of the Bill which my friend Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda has introduced here has my fullest sympathy. I have myself given notice of a Bill to effect somewhat the same object. But I do submit, Sir, that the Bill of such an important character, it seeks to effect such a revolution in Hindu society—(An Honourable Member : " Does it seek to effect a revolution ? ") Yes, it does, it will give such a shock to Hindu sentiment to a large extent in the country that I am surprised so many of my Honourable friends, sitting on this side, should, speaking as responsible men, urge that the Bill should not be circulated for opinion and that it should be sent straight off to a Select Committee. I am surprised at it. I wish, Sir, to point out that the object which my friend has in view will have the support of a large number of people. But the problem is of greater importance and delicacy than my friend has, in his laudable desire to prevent child marriages, thought. What does he propose ? He proposes that marriages of Hindu girls below the age of 12 years shall be invalid, subject to the qualification he has put in one of the clauses of his Bill. Does my friend imagine that the mere passing of a law in this Assembly will effect such a change in the ideas of vast masses of the people of this country that they will avoid such marriages all at once ? (An Honourable Member : "Yes.") I submit, no. I claim to know the country at least to the same extent as my friend does, and I think it is wrong to think that the mere passing of a law like this seeking to promote a reform in marriages will go down to the masses all at once and will be accepted by them all at once so as to avoid the evil results of the legislation which is proposed.

3 P.M.

[Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya.]

Mr. M. Ruthnaswamy : What about political reform ?

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : I am not here, Sir, to instruct my friend on the question of political reform. He must await some other opportunity for it. But I submit the question that is now before us is—whose fault will it be if parents marry two children of tender ages at 9 or 10 ? What fault is it of the boy or of the girl who has been married that their marriages which are indissoluble should be held to be invalid ? What consolation will it be to them that such a legislation as is proposed has been passed ? I submit that the proposal does require more serious consideration. It does require that it should go out to the public for opinion, and that those persons and bodies should consider this question who are entitled to speak and that those who are in a position to take an impartial view of it should be requested to help the Legislature by an expression of their opinion. It has been said, Sir, that the Government has often stood in the way of social legislation. I am sorry I cannot endorse that view. What is the social legislation that we are responsible for ? What is the measure of social reform that we ourselves have brought about ? Put on one side the reform that has been brought about by our earnest day to day work, and put on the other side the many pieces of social legislation which have been passed by the Government and which have affected or helped social reform. And secondly, it has been said, Sir, that the Members of the House on the other side, the Government Members, should abstain from voting to-day on the motion if they cannot support the measure. I hope they will not accept the advice easily. I hope they will weigh the responsibility which rests upon every member of the House, European, Mussalman, Christian, Hindu, every Member of the House, to think of how this legislation is going to affect our humble uneducated or largely uneducated masses of fellow subjects in the country. If they feel that such a legislation should be passed without any reference to the country at large, if they feel that without asking for opinions, such opinions as are asked for on all legislation which is undertaken by this Assembly as a rule, that this is a special measure on which no opinions should be elicited, that the opinions of those present here should be held to be sufficient to decide the matter, well they are at liberty of course to vote according to their judgment. But I do hope they will consider that this is a matter which does affect a very large number of our fellow subjects and that they will not yield to the appeal that has been made to them to abstain from voting on this motion as they think right.

Now, Sir, I wish to make it clear, I have said it already, but I wish to emphasise the fact that I am not less keen than my Honourable friend Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda to see some legislation through which will put an end to the evils of marriages at very tender ages. These evils are well known and have been widely deplored. Though the age of marriage has been steadily though slowly rising in the higher classes of the community, the extent to which marriages still take place at too early ages is alarming, and I wish the House to consider the question not as affecting merely Hindus but also as affecting Mussalmans and Christians and Sikhs and Aryas and other sections of the population of this country. It is a question on which the legislation should be general and not confined to the Hindus, as I hope Honourable Members of this House will very soon be satisfied, when I have drawn their attention to a few facts. A statement prepared from the Census Report of 1921 shows that in that year there were 1,10,684 males and 2,18,463 females of ages up to five years, and 7,57,405 males and 20,16,687 females of ages between 5 and 10 years who were married ; that there were 23,44,006 males and 63,30,207 females of the ages of 10 to 15 years who were married ; that there were 40,77,400 males and 96,35,340 females of the ages of 15 to 20 years who were married.

Mr. President : Order, order. The Honourable Pandit was not here this morning. These figures have been repeatedly quoted in this House by the previous speakers.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : Thank you, Sir. These figures do not include widows. They show that the largest number of marriages take place between the years 15 and 20 and after that between the years 10 and 15. But it is clear from the figures that 8,68,089 males and 22,35,150 females, that is 31,03,239 children had been married at the ages of 10 years or earlier. The number of children who were married before they commenced their 12th year is not separately given. But the total number of children who were married between the ages of 10 and 15 years was 86,24,273 of whom 63,30,207 were females, and it may safely be assumed that at least one-fifth of these, that is more than 17,34,854, were children who had not entered upon their twelfth year, that is to say, roughly about 48 lakhs of children were married before they entered upon their twelfth year.

Now, Sir, that shows the great need of a Bill effectively to discourage marriages at such tender ages. And to support the point that it is not merely Hindu children who suffer but that children of all classes suffer, I wish to draw the attention of the House to the number of married males and females in India below the age of 15 in the different communities and classes, as the Census Report of 1921 gives it. The total number of children, who were married, of all religions, below the age of one year was 15,625. Among these, Sir, there were Hindus, 5,995 males and 7,938 females ; Arya, 4 males and 5 females ; Sikh, 1 male and 10 females ; Jain, 35 males and 51 females ; Buddhist, 1 male ; total Hindus, 13,940 ; Christians, 55 males and 53 females, (i.e., those married under one year), total 108 ; Mussalmans 639 males, 935 females, total 1,574 ; between the age of 1 and 2 years, Hindus 5,665 males and 9,863 females ; Arya 19 males, and 2 females ; Sikh 2 males and 1 female ; Jain 40 males and 65 females ; total Hindus 15,675 ; Christians 43 males and 55 females, (i.e., 98 in all) ; Mussalmans 767 males and 1,386 females. Between the ages of 2 and 3 years, Hindus 13,827 males and 26,726 females ; Arya 2 males and 16 females ; Sikh 26 males, 12 females ; Jain 74 males and 156 females ; Buddhist 5 males and 5 females ; total Hindus 40,849 ; Christians 78 males and 167 females, total 245 ; Mussalmans 1,892 males and 4,410 females, total 6,302. Between the ages of 3 and 4 years—and so on. Sir, I will put in the statement with your permission, because I want to save time. The total number of children, who are married, under the age of one year, is 15,625 ; between the ages of 1 and 2, 17,909 ; between 2 and 3, 47,400 ; between 3 and 4, 87,799 ; between 4 and 5, 1,53,950 ; between 5 to 10, 27,41,647. I submit, Sir, that this shows the great need of introducing a piece of legislation which will save children, not merely Hindu children but children of all classes of the Indian community from the evils of marriages at such tender ages. One of these evils is the large number of child widows we have in this country. I have got a statement before me giving the number of widows below the age of 15. It is distressing to find that there were widows under the age of one year, not merely among Hindus but also in other communities. There were 612 widows among the Hindus under the age of one year, 127 among Mussalmans, 5 among Christians.....

Mr. President : Order, order. We are not concerned now with Mussalmans and Christians. The Bill before us exclusively applies to Hindus.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : Yes, Sir. That is one of my objections to the Bill, that the Bill should not apply exclusively to Hindus ; that while there is need for a measure which will protect the children of all communities, of all religions, the Bill seeks to protect children of Hindus only. That is one of my objections to the Bill. (An Honourable Member : "You are not concerned with them.") I thought only a while ago an appeal was made to every Member to take an interest in the Bill, and that every Member was asked to feel a concern in the interest of our children. I am as much concerned to protect my Mussalman sisters and daughters as my Hindu sisters and daughters. (Applause.)

Mr. K. Ahmed : Speak on your Bill when it comes on.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : I have reminded you that you have widows under one year—612 Hindus, 127 Mussalmans and 5 Christians ; bewteen 1 and 2 years, 498 Hindus, 84 Mussalmans and 7 Christians ; between 2 and 3 years.....

Mr. President : The Honourable the Pandit persists in quoting figures about other communities. I have already pointed out that this Bill applies exclusively to Hindus.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : With great respect, Sir, I submit that I am perfectly entitled to put the facts and arguments, which I am putting forward, before the House in order to ask the House not to accept the motion that the Bill be referred to a Select Committee but decide that it should be circulated for opinion so that the opinions I am expressing might find expression elsewhere too. That is the reason why I am putting these facts before the House, Sir, and I submit that it is essential for my part of the argument to show that it is not only Hindu children who are affected, but that children of the Mussalman community, the Christian community and the Sikh community are also affected, and that therefore.....

Mr. President : Does the Honourable Pandit realise that nothing he can do or say could extend the scope of this Bill ?

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : I submit, Sir, I am more hopeful than you seem to think I should be, that when I have brought these facts to the notice of my Mussalman friends and my Christian friends, and through them of the country, they will ask for a Bill which will protect children of all communities. That is my object.

Mr. President : We are not concerned with any other Bill that might in future come up. We are concerned at present with the Bill that we have before the House.

Lala Lajpat Rai : There is no use circulating then. Reject it if you please.

Mr. M. R. Jayakar : How will circulation cure this defect ?

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : I have said enough, Sir, to show that this Bill needs amplification and an extension of its scope in order to meet the situation in the country. What I wish to point out now is the objection to the Bill being sent to the Select Committee without eliciting opinions. I have already drawn attention to the fact that it seeks to make marriages invalid. I submit, Sir, this is a very strong measure to adopt when the Government and the educated people of this country have allowed early marriage to take place as they have taken place for generations, when they have not up to this time taken sufficient steps to educate public opinion on the evils of early marriages. (An Honourable Member. "We have done enough.") You have not done enough. I say it deliberately.

Lala Lajpat Rai : We have been doing that for over 100 years.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : I know what we have done, Sir. It is no good telling me that I do not know what we have done. We have delivered speeches, we have published pamphlets ; we have passed resolutions, but we have not gone from house to house to bring the evils of early marriages home to the people at large. We have not carried on such an agitation. We have not carried on even such an agitation as the temperance people are carrying on in some places against drink. We have not carried on an agitation commensurate with the enormity of this evil, and we are not entitled to claim that we have done all that we could. What I submit is that it is wrong to the community at large, when the Government of the country and the educated men of the country have allowed the custom of early marriages to go to the extent they have allowed it to go, that they should, all of a sudden, decide to introduce a law which makes early marriages among Hindus invalid. I entirely endorse the view which my friend Mr. Aney has expressed on this question. It is not a small matter, it is not a matter of small consequence to the Hindus that a marriage should be declared invalid. The consequences have been so well described by Mr. Aney that I do not wish to take up the time of the House by dwelling on them again. But I say that if my friends in their zeal for the good of the Hindu community are carried away to-day to urge that the Bill should be referred to the Select Committee without being circulated for opinion, if they go and meet popular audiences, they would find their position untenable. (Mr. M. R. Jayakar : "Question.") Until the matter is put to the test, you can well question what I say. But I speak not with disrespect. I do not mean any disrespect to any of my friends. But I submit that the proposal that marriages among Hindus should be made invalid by a piece of legislation without its being referred to the public for an expression of their opinion, would not find support on any platform on which the Hindus are properly represented. I therefore submit that the motion of the Honourable the Home Member should be accepted by this House. No harm will be done by a little delay that must be necessarily involved in doing so. We want to put on the Statute-book a piece of legislation which will commend itself to the general body of thoughtful people in this country. I feel that if the Bill is circulated for opinion there will be some opposition undoubtedly to the age that has been proposed. Some will ask that the age should be lowered by a year, and others may ask that the age should be increased by a year or even two. But I submit it is likely that, when the facts are put before the public properly, there will be a general agreement that in view of the calamitous state of things which exists at present, under which lakhs of our children are subjected to the disadvantages and evils of marriage, at too tender an age—when these facts are properly presented to the people, I expect that there will be a very large measure of general support to the object of the Bill. I submit that the great point to be considered is whether at this stage the right thing is to make marriages below a certain age invalid, or whether we should proceed in a less drastic fashion. I recognise that we have to introduce some penalty in order to prevent marriages below a certain age. There have been different suggestions put forward. In the Mysore State there is a law under which imprisonment is inflicted upon those who take part in marriages below the age which has been prescribed in it. My friend Mr. Ranglal Jajodia sought to carry a Bill in this House in which he also urged that a violation of the law should be punished with imprisonment. The provision he suggested was that no Hindu boy should marry until the age of 16 years and the male guardian of a Hindu boy marrying below the age of 16 or who may arrange or take part in such marriage shall, on conviction by a court of competent jurisdiction, be punished with simple imprisonment which may extend to 12 months or with fine not exceeding Rs. 1,000 or both ; but he had the good sense to provide that :

"Nothing herein contained shall invalidate any marriage which is otherwise valid under the law by which the boy is governed."

That was Mr. Ranglal Jajodia's Bill who was a Member of the last Assembly.

There is another proposal, and that is, whether our object should be at this stage more to educate public opinion on the subject than to severely punish those who carry out or celebrate marriages below a certain age. In view of the fact, which is indisputable, that the Government and the educated prominent men of the Hindu community and other communities have not yet put in their proper share of work to educate the general public on the evils of early marriages, I submit.....

Lala Lajpat Rai : I deny that charge.

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya : But I am sorry I have to make it—I ask whether in view of the fact that the Government and the men of light and leading in this country have not either separately or together made an effort commensurate with the enormity of the evil of early marriages, we should not proceed by adopting less drastic methods, whether in the first instance not only should marriages not be declared invalid, but whether in the first instance even imprisonment should not be avoided, and whether we should not be content for some years at least with inflicting merely a fine where a marriage takes place below the age which is prescribed by law. If this proposal should commend itself to the public and to this House, I would suggest the substitution of one simple clause in place of clauses 4 to 6, like this :

" Any one who may bring about or take part in the marriage of a girl who has not completed the age of 11 years or of a boy who has not completed the age of 18 years, shall, on conviction by a Magistrate within whose jurisdiction the marriage takes place, or either party to the marriage resides, be liable to punishment with a fine which may extend from Rs. 50 to Rs. 1,000 ".

Now, Sir, I am fully aware that this will be regarded by some of my friends here as a very mild measure, but I have been taught to believe that the mild dose is sometimes the strongest in its effect. I submit that a piece of legislation like this will be of very great educative value. It provides for a fine of Rs. 50 in the case of the humble man, and I wish to inform the House that our humblest fellow-subjects or the so-called depressed classes are the largest victims to this evil of early marriages. I wish to provide for their case. It will take some time to educate them about the law, and every effort should be made to educate them and the general public and to enlist the support of the various communal societies to affect the reform as early as practicable. There should be a propaganda throughout the country to proclaim the new law in order that people may support it, and I venture to think that if they know that cases of the violation of the law shall be punished with fine, they are likely to accept it and support it. Such a law will be of great educative value and it will not upset the people very much and it will largely effect its object. I suggest this for the consideration of Members of this House. I know that my Honourable friends who are oppressed by a thought of the evils resulting from early marriages will perhaps think that my proposal is of too mild a character. I ask them to consider it in the light of the arguments which I have presented and to consider it from the point of view of moving forward one step and a large step. I am most anxious—no words can express the anxiety that I feel—to prevent marriages of girls who have not yet completed even their eleventh year. I suggest eleven years not because I like the girls to be married at that age. The Hindu law does not enjoin that marriages should take place at a very tender age. Manu, the greatest of our law-givers, laid it down that a man of 30 years ought to marry a girl of 12 years, and I want that the marriageable age should be raised to 12 years, not as the latest age of the marriage of a girl, but as a great advance, an enormous advance upon the position that exists to-day. But I wish that that advance should be attained in such a manner that it will be acceptable to the people. In the medical works of Hindus it is laid down that until a young man has attained the age of 25 and a girl of 16... .. (An Honourable Member : "You are not correct.") I am absolutely correct—they should not live together as husband and wife. What I have quoted from Manu is also unquestionable. What Manu laid down with reference to the marriages of girls of 12 years, was not that they must be married at the age of 12, but that they should not be married until they attained the age of 12. And Sushruta, our great medical writer, prescribed that the age at which a young man and a young woman should begin to live as husband and wife should be 25 for a young man and 16 for a girl. Bagbhatta, who is another great medical authority among us, laid it down that until a girl has completed the age of 16 years and a young man the age of 20 years, they should not begin to live as husband and wife. I wish that the age of consummation of marriage should be raised even when marriages take place at an earlier age. I submit therefore that it will be a great gain to humanity, and a great piece of good service to the whole of India, if we can prevent marriages by law until the girl has completed the age of 11 years and until a young man has completed the age of 18 years.

For these reasons, Sir, in order that the matter should be fully investigated and examined in all its aspects and in order that we should be able to think calmly and dispassionately as to what will be acceptable to the community as a whole and what will make for the good of the community as a whole, I strongly support the motion that the Bill be circulated for opinion.

Munshi Iswar Saran (Lucknow Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, it is only a strong sense of duty that makes me differ from one whom, in all truth and sincerity, I hold in the greatest veneration, one whose life is worthy of all respect and admiration. The speech of the last Honourable speaker has not come to me as a surprise. I know his views on the subject. He wishes that when you introduce any social reform, the reform should be such as to be acceptable to the vast majority of your countrymen and countrywomen. I say with great respect that when you come across a case like this, where according to the figures which have been quoted children under one year of age are being married, it does not matter at all whether the reform proposed is acceptable or not. It becomes the positive duty of those who call themselves their leaders—the leaders are really the servants of the people—and the Government to tell the people, if they oppose "You are talking nonsense. We will not allow you to ruin yourselves." Sir, I submit that the Hindu race is dying and one of the causes responsible for our slow decay is early marriage. (Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : "You are quite right") Sir, it will be the sheerest impertinence on my part to offer any observations on Shastric rules in opposition to Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya, but I shall say one thing quite clearly. I do not care at all what the Shastras say ; if the Shastras come into conflict with the natural laws of God, the Shastras must go.

I do not wish to say one word on this subject which may hurt anybody, in spite of the fact that I have committed the sin of having gone to Europe twice. Here is Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya, one of the most orthodox men in the country. He approves of the principle of the Bill and here we have two excited friends, one the Secretary of my Party and the other, a prominent member of the Swaraj Party. They have got terribly excited. They abused right and left. They brandish their hands and I felt secure here because I was at a distance from them. Here is Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya who deplores the present condition. (Here Mr. Aney made a remark which was inaudible.) He said, "Educate public opinion". Suppose you accept the motion of the Honourable the Home Member, how will you educate public opinion? Will the Honourable the Home Member undertake to go from house to house as Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya said and speak to men and women? Will he exhort the people and say "Please see the dangers, please see what harm you are doing to your own children, please become sensible and accept this Bill." What will happen? In a few months you will have the views of the various Local Governments and the various public bodies. Where, I ask Panditji in all humility, is the question of educating public opinion? The question of educating public opinion will come if this Bill is passed. Let the Bill be passed and let all of us under the inspiring leadership of Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya go about and explain to the people and tell them that it is in their interest and it is for their good that this measure has been adopted. You can then tell them, "Please accept it and follow the lead that has been given by the Legislative Assembly."

Then there is another point I want to make. Let me say quite frankly that there will be very great opposition to this measure and it is inevitable. Now, if every party was convinced that a girl under 12 or 14 should not be married, there would be no such marriage and there would be no necessity for legislation to prevent it. I submit with all respect that unfortunately in this country you will find a large number of people who will be up in arms, as indeed they are up in arms against any measure of social reform. Certain societies even to-day are passing resolutions against widow marriage. The Act legalising widow marriage is on the Statute-book. I submit that we shall have to take our courage in both hands. We shall have to go into Select Committee and discuss all the various provisions that are incorporated in this Bill. It may be that we may have to make very drastic changes. Let us make those changes, but, when the case has been proved to the hilt that the present practice is ruinous, is making our condition hopelessly and desperately pitiable, I submit it is time that we proceed with this legislation. I submit there are no points involved which require elucidation. Sir, in the year 1927, to ask public opinion whether a girl of 12 or 13 should be married or a boy of 14 or 15 should be married! You might as well ask whether a girl of 12 or 14 should have a drop of water to drink or a crump of bread to eat. We know the harm that the practice has done. We know the havoc it has created. What are we to-day? We are feeble and weak, not morally but certainly physically, because of this early marriage. You have to grapple with this problem in right earnest. There is one word more which I want to say. (Here an Honourable Member made an interruption.) If you interrupt me, please do so in the proper fashion. I submit that the motion moved by the

[Munshi Iswar Saran.]

Kumar Sahib can be made to serve both ends. Surely the Committee will not meet to-morrow and finish its labours before this Session is over. It will meet in the Delhi Session. In the meantime all discussions can take place. It will be open to the various representative bodies to submit their opinions, either to the Legislative Department or to the Home Department. I do not know the technicalities, but in the meantime it is open to the Home Member to write to various organizations and various Governments inviting their opinion and fixing a date by which those opinions should be submitted to Government. Let all those opinions be collected and in the meantime let all those that are inclined to carry on propaganda carry it on ; then let us get together and be done with this question once for all. There is one thing I shall say—and I have already submitted that I shall say nothing in anger—I shall beg my Honourable friends not to use expressions which they do not really believe in. Marriage is a sacrament. May I pause here, Sir, and say—I hope the House will forgive this personal reference—I do not yield to anybody in this House in my love and attachment to Hinduism. But my Hinduism does not represent a system which is an obstacle to progress. My Hinduism instead of being a hindrance is an inspiration for me to get along. I do myself feel that the marriage tie according to the Hindu religion is a sacrament. I should be very sorry if it was looked upon as a contract. A sacrament, yes. But I ask you to remember that a child of one is brought forward and is married to another child of two, and you say that is a sacrament. Do they understand what they are going through ? I know that sometimes the child is asleep ; it cannot be kept awake because it is brought along and married at 2 o'clock in the morning. And you call it a sacrament. You do not really believe that. Hindu society is living to-day because it has been undergoing changes with the changing times. Hindu society would have been dead long ago if it were so narrow, so hidebound, so illiberal as some of my Honourable friends represent it to be. Take all the old original rules of Hindu society. I should feel very happy if all the Brahmins would get out of my profession. All the Kshattriyas and Vaisyas would be very happy because there would be no competition with Brahmins and others who now invade their professions. Let us look facts in the face.

It is a most terrible question which we are considering to-day. I beg you most earnestly, to realise its gravity. I beg you not to make it a sort of party question. Even if I knew that I might not be elected next time for this speech of mine, still I should every time make this speech and not come back to this Assembly. One Honourable Member has said that if Mr. Jayakar had made a declaration to this effect, he would never have been returned May I say that Lala Lajpat Rai is notorious throughout India for being a social reformer, and still at the last general election he carried an amount of influence which I know to my own advantage, for he helped me and I got in. Please let me assure the House that our people are not so narrow as we imagine them to be. I have gone about and talked on this question. Many a man has come to me and said, " What you say is right, but the difficulty is about ex-communication " ; or " I quite see it, but if I do it, my uncle will get very angry." No one trots out the theory of a sacrament unless it be some educated man with a felt cap and with glasses. He has not the courage to accept the reform, and he says, " You forget that Herbert Spencer has said somewhere that reform should not be violent. It should be in keeping with the general feeling of the people ". And I have told him, " Please let Herbert Spencer alone. Let us get into grips with live issues."

Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya very rightly said, if I may be permitted to say so, that in this question, not only Hindus, but Muhammadans, Christians and Europeans are all interested. I was surprised to hear it said that a Muhammadan has no locus standi in this matter. What I said jokingly, I hope, will be true one day. Suppose we had a Swaraj Government with Mr. Jinnah as our Prime Minister. And if this question came up, would my friends go up and say, " Now, Mr. Jinnah, you are Prime Minister, but being a Muhammadan you have nothing to do with it." I hope my friends will notice that Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya has said that it is the duty of everybody here to take up this question and see that we come to a right solution. May I say a word to Government Members ? Many of you say, " Oh, you are educated people, the intelligentsia. We move in the districts, we go about camping ; we are in touch with the masses ",—whom you are pleased to call the dumb millions—" we are their friends ; we look after them and their interests ; it is we who can be expected to do something for them ". Then here is the chance. Do it now. The educated people have already given up the practice. I can assure you I am not going to marry my girl at the age of 12. It is the ignorant man in the villages who sticks to this practice, who is one of the dumb millions, dumb millions being in inverted commas. Will you help him now ? If you are his friend, help him now. This measure will benefit those people more than it will benefit the hated intelligentsia.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi (Dacca Division : Muhammadan Rural) : I will not detain the House more than one or two minutes, but my two minutes will be unlike my Honourable friend, Munshi Iswar Saran's " one word " which ended in a speech extending over nearly half an hour. Sir, I want to associate myself entirely with my Honourable friend Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya. He has given us a graphic description of the whole position, and I support the Honourable the Home Member in the motion for circulating this Bill. I do so on principle. I believe that no Bill should be introduced without its being circulated, and a Select Committee should not rush on with a Bill without eliciting public opinion. It is not fair that any Bill should be so rushed through. There is a considerable feeling amongst the Hindu community—I am told by my friend Mr. Ahmed that a Mussalman has no right to say anything about this Bill—I say that there is a considerable feeling amongst the orthodox Hindus, particularly in Bengal, and the Pandits of Navadwips there should have their say in this matter. After all, what does circulation mean ? The Select Committee cannot sit before the next Session at Delhi, that is 5 months hence. Why cannot you circulate the Bill now and elicit all views throughout India and get them ready for the Committee to consider ? In asking for that I do not think the Honourable the Home Member has asked for anything more than what the House ought reasonably to agree to. With these words, I beg to support the Honourable the Home Member's motion.

Mr. M. K. Acharya (South Arcot cum Chingleput : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I thank you and I thank my colleagues here for their cheering. I take it they do recognize, that humble as I am, yet on this question where the orthodox man has been so much maligned I have probably got something to say which they may with advantage hear. Sir, I wish to be very brief. (Hear, hear.) I am aware that I do not possess and cannot emulate the rhetorical flourishes of either Mr. Jayakar or Munshi Iswar Saran or the vehement indignation of Mr. Belvi ; and yet some of the sweeping assertions made by them call for a reply. Sir, when I hear words like these, " can the laws of God be over-ridden by man-made law " and so on, I am puzzled, Sir. I doubt if there is any one here who claims to have seen God or to have heard from Him His Laws ; if so, I should certainly throw away all my sacred texts including the Vedas and sit at the feet of any Lala or Munshi who has seen God and learn humbly from him God's law. Therefore such empty platitudes will not do in a case like this. And yet, Sir, to-day my soul also is among the prophets, and my humble orthodox self proposes to be for a little while among—I am afraid to use the word—among the reformers, to a little extent at any rate, because, Sir—and I wish to speak in a very matter of fact way—I recognize that the measure before us is one which is of very great national importance. I am not going to admit, because I do not believe, that the marriage system obtaining among Hindus has been the most baneful, the most pernicious system. Sir, I claim to have studied the Hindu system, to have read the history of other systems also, as far as was possible to my limited intelligence; and comparing other ideals with the marriage ideals of the Hindu, I am here bold enough to assert that no other community either in the past or at present has or can put forth an ideal which recognizes and teaches the girl the highest ideal of womanhood, and trains her from her childhood to suck it along with her mother's milk almost ; that teaches the girl to think and say : " Rajâ vâ rajya hînô vâ yê mê bharthâ sa mê prabhuh "—" Prince or beggar, he, that is my wedded lord, is my god ". Nowhere else has any such ideal been taught as part of a girl's every day religion. Indeed, Sir, with all the defects mentioned, it has been possible for India to this day to produce so many—, I believe they are not one, two or three thousands but as many millions—of my sisters and my daughters, living to this day up to the highest ideal of womanhood ! (Inaudible interruptions), Yes. Here marriage is not a matter that is to be settled after the ecstasies of the ball-room or the ethics of the divorce court, but has to be settled as a sacred function. (Mr. T. C. Goswami : " In the marriage market.") I am very sorry that here is a brother of mine claiming to be born a Hindu who thinks like that; I fear within his Hindu body lives a European soul ; I am sorry for him, but I am not going to be offended. He is doing an injustice to his own sisters and mothers. Sir, the marriage market exists everywhere; where does it not exist ? This world everywhere is very very imperfect; and therefore, comparatively speaking, where is the society, where is the community where marriage does not take place with a pecuniary element in the background, nay in the foreground ? But there is much less profiteering here, very much less; because our girls may not later on say as those married under a contract : " I was given a false notion of his wealth and position and was misled into marrying him, and therefore now want a divorce". There is no such thing here. However, we are dealing now with child marriages and not with marriage markets. Sir, the whole point is this. It has been very well admitted even by my esteemed friend, Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya, that unfortunately child-marriage is too often the case.

Although in my own part of the country I do not believe that a child of over two years is married—I am not aware of that—yet it has come to our notice; and these things are very sad records. I agree with the last speaker, that these early marriages ought to be prohibited, and I do not believe that orthodox Hindu opinion, that regards marriage as a sacrament, that regards the bond of wedlock not only as of the bodies of the two together but as of the two souls, will seriously object or will at all object to any law that says that marriage before a certain minimum age will be regarded as null and void.

Mr. T. Prakasam (East Godavari and West Godavari cum Kistna : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Is it a marriage before the age of one ?

Mr. M. K. Acharya : I say Hindu orthodox opinion will not object to our legislating that marriages before a certain minimum age—my own opinion is that it must be ten at the present day—is against the Shastras, and so null and void. Therefore I think that, though Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya is very right in the view he has advanced, that we must take our people with us, nevertheless this question has been agitating the minds of many men, and I believe our women have been talking about it also more than ourselves. I have had, Sir, many a talk with my good old woman at home (Loud Laughter) ; and I do believe that the opinion of my sisters is quite in favour, as far as I have enquired, of such a kind of legislation, and that is why I have ventured on this occasion to go so far as to support this Bill warmly. Some of my proposed amendments indeed to this Bill go in one respect farther than Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda's draft ; I think that marriage should not be, generally speaking, among the bulk of the Hindus, celebrated before fourteen ; provided however that a Hindu girl of not less than ten years should be allowed to be betrothed according to the tenets of her religion or sect. Sir, the whole trouble is a trouble of words ; because as soon as the word " marriage " is uttered, to a non-Hindu the impression is conveyed that the boy and girl would be living together as man and wife ; it is not so in Hindu society. Among us, this betrothal is the real sacrament....

Mr. M. A. Jinnah (Bombay City : Muhammadan Urban) : May I ask the Honourable Member if marriage is sacred to the wife or to the husband ? I am only seeking information.

(An Honourable Member : " To the husband.")

Mr. M. K. Acharya : The truly ignorant can certainly be educated, but the seemingly wise cannot be. If however my friend really wants the information, he can have it : the Hindu ideal is that the man and wife become one indissoluble unity and there is no husband apart from the wife, nor wife apart from the husband. (Some inaudible interruptions). I refuse to give way to these interruptions; they are not the points before the House. Now, to the best of my knowledge, orthodox Hindu opinion is against the unorthodox and irreligious manner in which baby girls are given away in marriage; and therefore legislation for making marriages below a certain age invalid will, I think, be acceptable to my orthodox community. There will be some difficulty, I recognize, in the case of certain sections in Northern India, particularly where it has become a bad custom to celebrate very early marriages. There may be some difficulty in these people adjusting themselves to the new law; but that cannot be helped. There will always be some little trouble in enforcing a new law; but I hope that they will soon

4 P.M.

[Mr. M. K. Acharya.]

come into line with the legislation we are making. That, Sir, is the whole purpose of the legislation before the House, as I understand it. For the rest, I think we ought to leave out all these comparisons of ideals and customs as beside the point. The tears of the widow certainly are very tragic; but they are not more tragic than the sighs of the unmarried; and if in India there are so many widows resigned to their lot, in other countries there are so many restless maids running, panting, hankering after husbands and not succeeding in catching any. Which is the greater social evil? We are not here to set the world aright. As Swami Vivekananda well said, if you drive rheumatism from the head, it goes to the neck; if you drive it from the neck, it goes to the loins; and if you drive it from the loins it goes to the foot, likewise in this world some amount of evil there is and there will always be; we cannot help it; we are not God. God himself has created this world as a mixture of good and evil; and it is impossible to eliminate all the evils in society, no matter what amount of rhetoric my friends over there may indulge in. We can only correct some of our own mistakes. Therefore, I am supporting the general principle of this Bill. Of course the Bill is not very satisfactory as it is drawn; and my difficulty in agreeing to send it for circulation is this: that I fear people would not approve of the Bill as it is. I do not, in the first place, like the magistrate being brought in here; and I do not think that the age of 12 is a proper one to be applied to all communities. The Bill, as it is, is not likely to elicit a very favourable public opinion—that is my fear. Probably with some of the amendments which have been suggested the Bill may receive very much more favourable comment from many people than the Bill as it is drawn. Therefore, Sir, as somebody has suggested, I would like to know if the Government will not kindly undertake to circulate the Bill for opinion, while the Select Committee is being appointed. The Committee is not going to meet for the next five months. Government have obliged Sir Hari Singh Gour and circulated his very objectionable Bill for opinion even before the Bill came up here. I may say that this is a Bill on which we are all much keener than on Sir Hari Singh Gour's Bill. So, if the Government will kindly meet the wishes of the House, and circulate the Bill for opinion, and if meantime the Select Committee is also appointed, we may be able to put our heads together, and in the next five months I hope we shall be able to obtain the intelligent co-operation of all sections of the Hindu community, so that we may be able to pass this measure as early as possible. I have been here these four years, and Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya knows probably more than I do, that it is very difficult to get a non-official Bill passed and put on the Statute-book. It has to pass through our House and then to go through the other House, and then there are the gods above! And all these stages cannot be got through within the life-time of this Assembly unless we hurry up. Therefore let this be said to the credit of Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya, that before he becomes too old to come into this House again—that this measure has been placed on the Statute-book with his co-operation and with the co-operation of all the others who feel like him. As an orthodox Hindu, I do say that there is nothing in this Bill which can be said to be against the Shastras, which can be said to be against the orthodox opinion rightly interpreted. I do not wish to go into all those questions about the Vedic texts and the Upanishadic and the Smritic texts and all that. If I do, you, Sir, will come down upon me for having taken up so much time. Even if I had seven days given to me I could go on lecturing about the subject if my friends had the patience to listen ; but I shall not do so because it will not be relevant, that is the unfortunate thing about it. For the reasons I have advanced, Sir, I support my friend, Kumar Ganganand Sinha's motion that the Bill be referred to a Select Committee ; and I would ask the Government to help us by circulating this and getting the opinion of those who are qualified to give an opinion ; and I would lastly earnestly appeal to my friends, the reformers, not to be so very sure that they alone or always are sane.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub (Rohilkund and Kumaon Divisions : Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I do not agree with the remarks which have fallen from the lips of one Honourable Member of this House that because this Bill relates only to Hindus, therefore Muslims have no locus standi in the matter. Sir, I believe that a measure which relates to the well-being of the bulk of the population of this country relates to the Muslims as well as to the Hindus. The late Sir Syed Ahmed always used to say that India was a beautiful bride and that Hindus and Muslims were her two eyes and if one eye of the bride was disfigured her face would be spoiled and disfigured. So the measure which relates to the well-being of the bulk of the masses of this country is one in which both the communities are interested equally.

Now, Sir, as regards the motion before the House I submit that none of the Honourable Members who have spoken in favour of sending the motion for eliciting public opinion have said that a measure like this is not urgently required. My Honourable and esteemed friend, Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya, has himself quoted such appalling figures which show the very necessity and urgency of such a measure as the present one. Now, Sir, they say that because this is a very important Bill, therefore let it go for circulation for obtaining public opinion. Now may I ask him, what does he mean by public opinion ? Does he mean the opinion of the educated classes in India or of the uneducated masses in the villages who are altogether ignorant of the ways and manners of social reforms ? If he means by public opinion the opinions of the Judges of High Courts, members of Bar Libraries and other institutions in the country (An Honourable Member : " Chambers of Commerce."), I submit, he is not right when he says that their opinion has not been obtained on the subject. Is there anybody who will say that the educated classes in this country are against the principle of the Bill before the House ? Now, Sir, Honourable gentlemen have said that we have not yet obtained the opinion of the public on the subject. There too, I respectfully submit that the statement is not correct. Have you not been holding social conferences along with the Indian National Congress for many years—at least for the last twenty years—and have you not discussed this question very thoroughly and elaborately in those conferences and passed resolutions in favour of such a measure ? Was that eliciting public opinion or not ? Was the opinion expressed in those conferences public opinion or not ? If you have got a volume of public opinion expressed for the last twenty years, I do not understand what good it will be if this Bill is again sent out for circulation to get the view of a few High Court Judges and a few Judicial Secretaries to Local Governments and Bar

[Maulvi Muhammad Yakub.]

Libraries. They cannot say anything more than what is on the record already. If, on the other hand, by public opinion you mean the opinion of the ignorant masses in the villages, then I submit that you will never get an opinion in your favour from them and you will find that they are against this measure and if, in spite of the urgency and necessity of this measure which you yourself claim for, you rely upon such opinions, you will have to drop the measure. Will you drop it because the ignorant masses are against it ? (An Honourable Member : " It will have to be dropped." (Another Honourable Member : " They are not against it.") I submit not. Therefore, I say it is no use to delay a measure like this ; it is no use sending it out for eliciting public opinion. Measures about which public opinion has not been ascertained are sent out for eliciting public opinion. But here we are already in possession of full public opinion on a question like this, and therefore I say that it is impossible to add anything more to the knowledge which you have already got on this question. Why do you want to attempt an impossibility and say " Send this Bill for eliciting public opinion ? " As my Honourable friend, Mr. Acharya has said, it is very difficult to get a non-official measure through the Legislature. Do we not know that Bills, of which notice was given three years and even four years ago, have not yet reached the Select Committee stage ?

I do not think that if you delay the passage of this Bill, if you send it out for the purpose of eliciting public opinion, you will be able to pass this Bill during the life time of this Assembly. Now, tell us once for all whether you want this measure or you do not want it. If really the Hindus do not want it, if they are really against the raising of the marriageable age, then let them drop the matter altogether. It is not for me to say that you should either accept or reject this measure, but if you really think that it would be a beneficial measure and that it must be put on the Statute-book, then, Sir, it would be futile to say that the Bill should be sent out for eliciting public opinion. Let us hurry it up, and let us pass this Bill as soon as we can. With these words, I support the motion.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Sir, I had no intention of wasting the time of this House by speaking on this Bill and expressing my views whether it should be circulated for eliciting public opinion or whether it should be committed to a Select Committee, firstly, because I get so little an opportunity of speaking here that I thought I had better not open my lips ; secondly, because I have already earned an unenviable reputation in Trans-Atlantic countries for my views upon legislation of this type ; and, thirdly, because there were so many important Bills to come after this, that I was naturally anxious that this Bill should be disposed of quickly in order that we may have some amount of non-official legislation at least in the present Assembly. As my friend, Maulvi Muhammad Yakub, has pointed out, it is not possible for any non-official Bill to be enacted into law in this House if the Government chooses to oppose it. In fact, I do not know if up till now after the reformed constitution has been at work during the last seven years, any non-official Bill has become law, firstly because it is very difficult to get it passed here, and, secondly.

if we can at all pass it here, there is the House of our Elders where the members of the bureaucracy are in a majority and so it is impossible to have it passed there ; and even if we succeed in getting it passed there, there is the certifying power of His Excellency the Governor General. Therefore, Sir, I do not think that either my friend Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda or those friends who are so eager to have such legislation would at all regret that it is proposed that this Bill should be circulated for public opinion. I can well understand the reason of the Government for making such a proposal, and it is this. In measures of this character, the Government does not want to irritate—if I may use that expression—a certain section of our community whom my friend Mr. Jayakar has characterised as the unenlightened portion of our community ; and evidently my friend Mr. Jayakar thinks that people of enlightened views like ourselves, should thrust our views upon the unenlightened masses. That is not exactly my view, Sir. I have said this more than once in this House, that social matters should not be made the subject of legislation. That is my view, and it was unfortunate that my friend Mr. Harbilas Sarda, a life-long official, should have taken pains to draft a Bill of this character, because he cannot forget that he has ceased to be an official now and that he is sitting here as a representative of the people. Clauses 5 and 6 of the Bill would require me, Amar Nath Dutt, to go with folded hands to the Magistrate, (Laughter), to my friend over there, Mr. Donovan, and take his permission to allow me to marry my daughter—of course I have no daughter now to be married as I have already married her (Laughter)—but I have a grand-daughter, and I shall have to take his permission. (Laughter.) That is the thing ; that is the official mind. Sir, I object that any such legislation should at all be considered in this House. (An Honourable Member : "Quite so".) The Bill should be thrown out. But when I find that at least a dilatory motion has been brought forward which in due course of time will kill this Bill, I should like to side with the members of the bureaucracy and support the motion that has been brought forward by the Honourable the Home Member, because, as you know, Sir, adversity makes strange bed fellows. Sir, I regret that the House has wasted a whole day on such a simple question like this, namely, whether this Bill should be circulated for public opinion or whether it should go to a Select Committee, because as Honourable Members are aware, we had only two non-official days for Bills. As my friend has pointed out, we all know what sort of public opinion the Government elicits in matters of this kind. But when I found that elders whom we have been hearing from our childhood have with the advance of age become more garrulous and taken up the time of the House, I thought that I should also make myself bold to submit my own views before this House, risking my reputation of being a very orthodox Hindu, though I am not one. I do not know whether there is any one in the galleries or elsewhere who may have materials for another book a year or two later and who will do me the honour of quoting me. Be that as it may, Sir, I oppose the motion that the Bill be taken into consideration, and failing that, I support the motion made by the Honourable the Home Member

Mr. Vidya Sagar Pandya (Madras : Indian Commerce) : I move, Sir, that the question be now put.

Mr. President : The question is that the question be now put.

The motion was adopted.

Mr. President : The original question was :

"That the Bill to regulate the marriages of children amongst the Hindus be taken into consideration."

Since which two amendments have been moved :

(1) "That the Bill be referred to a Select Committee and

(2) "That the Bill be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinions thereon."

The question I have to put is :

"That the last amendment be made, namely, that the Bill be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinions thereon."

The Assembly divided.

SHORT NOTICE QUESTION AND ANSWER.

RESUMPTION OF THROUGH RUNNING IN THE EAST COAST SECTION OF THE BENGAL NAGPUR RAILWAY.

Mr. M. K. Acharya : With your permission, Sir, I wish to ask a short notice question. Can Government say when through running is likely to be possible on the East Coast section of the Bengal Nagpur Railway ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : We have heard from the Agent that further damage has been caused to the line by recent heavy rains, and September the 24th is now the earliest date on which the line is expected to be opened to through running.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : You cannot say for certain ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am afraid not. It won't be open before the 24th and I cannot be certain that it will be then

MESSAGE FROM THE COUNCIL OF STATE.

Secretary of the Assembly : The following Message has been received from the Secretary, Council of State :

"I am directed to inform you that the Council of State have, at their meeting held on the 15th September, 1927, agreed without any amendments to the following Bills which were passed by the Legislative Assembly on the 8th September, 1927:

A Bill to amend the law relating to the fostering and development of the bamboo paper industry in British India.

A Bill to amend the Indian Securities Act, 1920, for certain purposes."

BILL PASSED BY THE COUNCIL OF STATE LAID ON THE TABLE.

In accordance with Rule 25 of the Indian Legislative Rules I lay on the table the Bill further to amend the Aden Civil and Criminal Justice Act, 1865, in order to make further provision for the jurisdiction thereunder of the High Court of Judicature at Bombay, which was passed by the Council of State at its meeting of the 15th September, 1927.

THE CRIMINAL LAW AMENDMENT BILL.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar (Home Member) : Sir I move that the Bill further to amend the Indian Penal Code and the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, for a certain purpose, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration.

[Mr. J. Crerar.]

In moving that motion I do not think that I need detain the House at any length. The general principles and intentions of the Bill were fully discussed in this House at an earlier stage. The Bill, as Honourable Members will see, has undergone very thorough examination before a very large and representative Select Committee and, as it now returns to the House, is in a form considerably restricted. The criticisms which were passed in the House were carefully taken into consideration, more especially those relating to bona fide discussion, and, in particular, discussions of religious matters by persons who in good faith desire religious reform. Keeping these considerations carefully in mind, the Committee have redrafted the Bill and introduced restrictions which I think will satisfy those who had apprehensions on that point.

Sir, I move.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar (Tanjore cum Trichinopoly : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, it is with a good deal of reluctance and hesitation that I consider it my duty to oppose the motion of the Honourable the Home Member on principle. In doing so, Sir, I fully realise the fact that the leaders of the principal parties in the House have conceded the need for some measure of this sort at the present juncture. I also realise, Sir, that the Select Committee on which I had the honour to serve have removed from the Bill many of its objectionable features.

Mr. President : Is not the Honourable Member's voice a voice in the wilderness !

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar (raising his voice) : I also realise, Sir, that in the state of atmosphere in which this Bill is being discussed and passed in this House, my voice will be a voice in the wilderness. But, Sir, my voice is raised on behalf of the elementary right of freedom of speech and writing which ought to exist in this country. And I think although to-day the House may not be in a mood to accept what I say, the House will no doubt soon regret that there was any necessity to pass a measure of this kind. I think, Sir, in so far as this Bill is concerned, it is one more addition to the large catalogue of repressive measures in this country. We have been complaining that the law of sedition, that the law under section 153-A in regard to communal hatred, is so wide and so sweeping that the exercise of the rights of legitimate criticism, of freedom of speech and writing in the Press and on the platform, has been very severely restricted ; and that many of the greatest patriots of this country have been sent to jail under the sweeping provisions of the existing law, i.e., sections 124-A and 153-A. Sir, the question is whether in this country, thinking calmly, not under excitement or under the influence of communal or other feeling, we can really seriously afford to add to this catalogue of repressive laws. The whole position, Sir, is this. I do not for a moment desire to be taken as in any sense asking for immunity for scurrilous or defamatory or libellious or even seditious writings. I am as keen as anybody in this House for summary and proper punishment of such offences. But, Sir, to punish scurrilous writings by the ordinary law of the land is one thing ; but to add to the catalogue of repressive laws in this country is quite another thing ; and it is because this constitutes a definite addition to the repressive laws of this land that I, Sir, having to do with this matter—having to have my being, my bread, my profession, my public duties, having to discharge my public services through newspapers and speeches and writings—that I consider that the perils of the newspaper-man, of the public speaker, are already huge enough in all conscience for the Government now to try to add to them. There may have been occasions when, owing to some accident or owing to a bona fide interpretation of laws, the views of particular Judges may or may not have commended themselves to the common sense of the community affected by the judgment. There may have been also a necessity—I do not want to discuss it here—when a particular judgment may have placed the law in such doubt that it may be necessary to make clear the interpretation of the law as it stands. But, Sir, to interpret the law or make clear doubts that may exist on the law is one thing ; to try to create a new offence, to try to add to the repressive laws under which pressmen and publicists may be brought is quite another thing, and so far as I can see the existing law—even if it may require to be properly interpreted by any particular measure of this House—the existing law is, as I say, more than sufficient to deal with transgressions from the ordinary law of libel or the ordinary law by which communal good will may be promoted.

I desire in the next place to point out that so far as this offence is concerned, we in this House can view it from two aspects. Either because of the scurrilous or libellious nature of a particular pamphlet or writing, that pamphlet injures a particular man or a particular group of men, and in that case it is a damage or injury to that man or group. Then that should be taken on the basis of the ordinary law of libel or defamation, because it is injuring the particular rights of a particular man or a particular group of persons. We are not now concerned with this, because the proper course then will be for the Government to come up with the addition of another clause to the law of defamation of the country. I take it the raison d'etre of the Bill before the House is the fact that these scurrilous writings have a tendency, a definite tendency, to disturb the public peace and tranquillity, to incite to violence or to other crimes. If that is so, that ought to be made perfectly clear in the section itself. As I have always held, both the law of sedition and the law about incitement to communal hatred can only be justified in this country, not only by the tendency which they may have in producing mere feelings of enmity, hatred or contempt, but the fact that they have a definite tendency to incite to violence or the commission of any crime or the disturbance of public tranquillity or order. That is the basis upon which the law of sedition is administered in England. That is the basis on which the law of sedition has not been administered in India, and that is the reason why the greatest patriots of the land have been sent to jail on the law of sedition of this country. If that is the case in regard to the law of sedition in regard to patriots who have been discharging their public duty, this law which deals with religious feelings and religious prejudices, will lead to the creation of such a sweeping class of offences that it will be very difficult to say what may or may not constitute an offence under this category of offences. I quite agree that the Select Committee have done their best to circumscribe the offence and also to provide safeguards for the manner in which its provisions have to be administered. But I say on principle there is no ground whatever for placing this law on the Statute-book. I speak with all deference to the leaders who have said that this law ought to be enacted at the present time ; but I think that the real way of putting down these scurrilous writings and these inflammatory pamphlets is to educate public opinion in the country properly. After all, Government must really rely upon public opinion to see that law and order are preserved and that there is no breach of the public peace ; and so long as they cannot get public opinion on their side, it does mean that there is something wrong in the methods which they adopt ; they do not prove on the other hand that there is any necessity for adding to the list of crimes in this country. I therefore say, Sir, that, in so far as this law imposes obligations of a most onerous character on the Press and public of this country, it is a law which is totally uncalled for. It is all right for those who do not have directly to deal with the duties of publication to say what they like ; but we who are eternally concerned with the printing and publishing of news, views and what not—it is for us who have actually to do with it to find out whether this particular law is safe enough to protect us in the discharge of duties which we in our profession have to discharge ; and I say, that however much leaders of public opinion in this country, however much leaders of parties and leaders of communities and leaders in political life might think that these communal disturbances have been going on so long that we ought to take some steps to prevent them, it is not they who can fully realise where the shoe pinches. We, Sir, know where the shoe pinches. It is all right to say that a particular pamphlet is inflammatory and that somebody should be locked up at once for it ; but before that somebody is locked up for it there are innumerable press agencies and innumerable newspapers who would be caught in the net before that single man—who may be a very insignificant individual and may or may not be affected by the proceedings taken against him—is locked up. He will not be affected to the extent that the publisher is affected by this Bill. The whole question is whether there is sufficient protection for the honest publisher and the honest printer who may in the course of his duties have to print and publish these pamphlets. I concede, that so far as the section itself is concerned, the words " maliciously and deliberately " have been introduced, and to that extent it is a safeguard. But, Sir, it is not always that these concessions are made to pressmen ; the pressmen have been put to a great deal of trouble in having to prove their bona fides in courts ; and therefore whatever may be the protection that we may get under this Bill—and, as I say, I concede fully that the Bill has gone as far as possible, once it is conceded that a Bill of this kind is necessary—I do not see that there is any necessity for this Bill at all. I cannot see that it is necessary to add to the provisions of the existing Penal Code in this behalf and if the interpretation of particular provisions of the Penal Code has been rendered doubtful by reason of conflicting judgments, all that is necessary to do is to clear that doubt. Beyond that, Sir, I say we cannot go, and no case can be made out for interfering with our fundamental liberties of free speech and writing.

Sir, I oppose the motion.

Mr. N. C. Kelkar (Bombay Central Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I rise to support the motion that the Bill be taken into consideration, but only in the hope that it will be considerably improved before it is passed. I have got to make my position clear as I was a member of the Select Committee and have also written one or two dissenting minutes, and therefore I will state my position before the House clearly, though not perhaps very briefly.

In the first place, I must say this—that my mind instinctively rebels against the creation of a new offence. But even conceding that some measure of this nature is necessary to put a restraint upon scurrilous writings, we must at the same time see that this new offence, this new penal legislation, is hedged round with necessary and wholesome qualifications. For after all it stands to reason that the remedy in the case of any disease must not be worse than the disease itself. Now, with regard to the kind of people with whom we have got to deal in a matter like this, I think we can easily put them under three categories. The first category is of those who are willing to wound but afraid to strike ; the second is of those who are willing to wound and also not afraid to strike ; and the third is of those who are willing to strike but unwilling to wound. I think that is a comprehensive list of categories and that will help us clearly to see how we should deal with each category in its order.

Now, with regard to the first category, namely, those who are willing to wound but afraid to strike, I think the law may leave them alone ; the law can not touch them ; after all they are guilty merely of criminal intentions, and they need not be penalised for that. They are impotent malevolents and they may be left safely to stew in their own juice ; and we all know, as Emerson has said, that the best furnace is that which consumes its own smoke, let this smoking chimney consume its own smoke and not come into the public with it. We will leave the impotent malevolent there.

Then I come to the second category—men who are willing to wound and also not afraid to strike malevolently. Here is a clear case in which the law must intervene and punish this class of persons. But the real difficulty in a measure like this is about the third category of people, namely, people who are willing to strike, who honestly think they must strike, but yet are unwilling to wound ; and in my opinion, what the Select Committee has failed to do is to put sufficient hedging round this new penal legislation so that adequate protection may be given to this third category of people.

Now, among these three categories of people you will see, Sir, how easily they can all be disposed of. The malicious coward is his own sentinel ; he keeps guard on his own mind and does not come out with action ; therefore we need not trouble about him. The malicious man of action is his own accuser and he cannot get any protection. But it is the honest and benevolent but frank critic that requires the greatest protection, and we must see in this House that we give it to him. We are all aware that criticism has played a very great part in reform and progress of civilisation in this world ; and even when we sit down to legislate in a panic we must take a very wide view of things and allow this useful agency of criticism to go on doing its work. Law, in comparison with criticism, has a strictly limited purpose. It can and also must tell people in exact and precise terms as to what they may not do. The educative operation of law is after all more negative than positive. The law tells people that certain things may not be done—not that certain things should be or must be done. It leaves man to his own degree of education and refinement and benevolence. I have often fancifully compared in my own mind the law to a toll bar on the road, for it lays down a limit beyond which you shall not go without paying a toll of punishment or penalty. But at the same time, a law, like that toll bar on the road, never undertakes to see what the speed of your car has been until after you approach or pass that turnpike or toll bar. There is a limit to action definitely and inexorably fixed, and the law insists that, if you want to transgress or go beyond that line, you must pay the penalty.

Then, Sir, I have absolutely no doubt in my own mind, and I do hope that this House also will have absolutely no doubt in its own mind, as to the classes of people who require protection ; and therefore we must insist that they shall get that protection. I will put before this House the categories I have got in my own mind, and that list of categories is almost in a gradually descending order of merit. First, I think the law must give protection to the sly sceptic—the doughty doubter. The service he renders to mankind is that he spreads a very wholesome contagion of doubt and unbelief and you often feel that by his magic touch the sands of belief and settled opinion slide and shift away from under your feet as when you stand in a swift current of a river.

Then I claim protection, Sir, also for the diligent sociologist. He has obvious zeal for accurately noting down facts which may serve as data for generalization, and in that task he often has got to note down and expose sometimes even vulgar facts, because without the exposure of such vulgar details of religious or public life no useful generalizations can be drawn.

Then, Sir, I claim protection for the cold rationalist before the blast of whose trumpet of reason the walls of dogma and authority fall like the walls of Jericho.

Then again, I claim protection, Sir, for the absent-minded philosopher whose very wide range of generalisation is in itself a guarantee that he only looks at the wood of society and simply forgets the trees of personalities. For this philosopher I claim protection.

Then I would claim protection even for the mischievous but kindly humourist. We all know that he contributes greatly to the enjoyment of pleasantry in the social world, and yet we know that he sweeps the cobwebs of egotism and superstition from the inner corners of men's minds by the gentle breeze of ridicule.

And lastly, I will go further and claim protection even for the apparently merciless satirist who uses the knife but only in the spirit of a surgeon when performing what may be a necessary operation for the good of society.

For all these classes of people, Sir, I do claim protection from the law and against the law. Sir, it will be remembered that this is not the first time in the history of the world when we are grappling with great controversial issues—social and religious issues. Every age had its own critics, though of course they were endowed with a wide variety of temperaments and a varying degree of culture and refinement, but who succeeded by their criticism in the common purpose of reform and regeneration of society. We all know, Sir, that the crude and blunt Luther actually used the hammer and nailed the interrogatories to the door of the established Church, but we also know that there was Erasmus before him.

who served the same good purpose by taking his readers on an imaginary tour to Heaven and revealed to them the miserable plight in which the saints and the so-called religious men were living there. We know Roussean who was blunt and even vulgar, but there was side by side with him also Voltaire who was sly and mischievous ; but both accomplished the same purpose, each in his own way, and that purpose was the bringing of the body politic and society to a higher level.

Now, even in our own time, what do we see ? We have seen great issues very reasonably discussed from various points of view. And from the religious aspect I may name issues whose greatness will be appreciated by my simply mentioning them. Now, have not people in our own time dealt with the question of the historicity of Christ ? The love affairs of Lord Krishna have also been made the subject of plentiful speculation and argument. The home life of Mahomad, as we have all seen, has been a subject of criticism, and the gluttony of Buddha has been criticised, because we know that some people accuse Lord Buddha of dying on account of over-eating of mutton. Now, touching the social aspect of controversy, I may mention subjects which are quite familiar in our own society and times. For instance, we have in India child marriage, birth control, widowhood. Certainly these questions are not very easy of treatment, and yet we see critics who are endowed with a wider vision and who are animated at heart by real benevolence to society—we have seen these great problems discussed and controverted without harming anybody. But all this of course is done in good faith, and the generation of men who do these things is not yet gone and spent.

My real difficulty, therefore, about the Select Committee's Report is that it does not give adequate protection to people in our own generation who are actuated by benevolence to society and offer criticism instead of facts in pure good faith and honesty of purpose. It is for the purpose of pointing this out prominently to this House that I have stood up to support the motion that the Bill be taken into consideration, but I do hope also that the Bill will be greatly modified.

Sir Zulfiqar Ali Khan (East Central Punjab : Muhammadan) : Sir, I congratulate the Government on their wisdom in introducing this measure in this House to meet the situation which has unfortunately been created outside this Chamber in the wide world of India. Sir, I have listened to the philosophic speech of the Honourable Mr. Kelkar which, I must confess, is not quite comprehensible to an ordinary person like myself but is quite worthy of the ancient philosophers. Sir, I am sorry to see that Honourable Members sitting in the serene atmosphere of this Chamber either forget or do not realise the tragedies which are enacted outside this Chamber. I cannot understand that the responsible representatives of the people should show such utter indifference to what is happening outside.

Now, Sir, speaking about my own province where a great trouble recently happened, I may say that three communities, rather virile communities, exist side by side—Hindus, Muhammadans and Sikhs—and two at any rate of these communities are considered to belong to the martial races. They are very inflammable and I think that all three of them are liable to religious excitement. The atmosphere not only in the Punjab but all over India is surcharged with great excitement and with great religious differences and on the top of this, a man suddenly comes out, rather insignificant and obscure perhaps, not known to many, and he launches a speech or he issues a pamphlet grossly insulting the religion of others and maliciously attributing motives or conduct to the founders of religions which others follow. Now, Sir, this obscure man is the cause of very great unhappiness to the people. He inflames passions which are not easy to control. He excites people to a pitch which inevitably leads to strife and trouble. I know that Honourable Members are aware that the feeling of animosity existing between the different communities has reached that unhappy stage which certainly cannot lead to the peaceful progress of this country. The economic, social and political life of this country is suffering a grievous set-back and I cannot understand how under these circumstances any patriotic individual can condone or allow a man of this type to enjoy any liberty of speech or writing. A man who is guilty of such acts must find the whole nation anxious to suppress him. (An Honourable Member : "He becomes a hero.") But unfortunately I see that not only the ordinary man but even the representatives of communities and intellectual lights of this country desire that this man should enjoy the opportunity of speech and freedom. (An Honourable Member : "Not this man : deport him.") Describe the man who should enjoy such freedom of speech. (An Honourable Member : "The honest citizen.") Now, Sir, the more this man enjoys the freedom, the greater becomes the work of mutual slaughter. Every day in the country reports come from one quarter or another that rioting has taken place there or incendiarism has taken place in another place. Can we ignore all these things ? Can we go on tolerating these acts and can the Government afford to shut their eyes to what is happening in the country ? Are they not responsible to the world outside ? Are they not responsible to the civilised people of this country ? And is it not their duty, as an enlightened and civilised people themselves, to put a stop to this kind of tragedies which are daily on the increase ? Sir, if this thing goes on, I may tell the Honourable Members that the catastrophe which may happen will be appalling and the Honourable Members, indeed all of us, will be responsible to posterity for sowing discord and perpetuating a situation for which we shall be responsible not only to them but also to the world outside, which will surely blame us for showing this apathy and indifference to the tragedies.

Now, Sir, it seems to me from the list of amendments which have appeared on the agenda, and I have a strong impression that a section of the Members of this Honourable Chamber think that this measure which is designed to meet the situation is for the purpose of protecting a certain community, and this impression is very unfortunate. I speak as an Indian—not as a Muhammadan. And I say that, if a Muhammadan insults the religion of others or the founder of the religion of others, I should be the first, if I were a magistrate, to give him the maximum amount of penalty that the law allows and I hope the Hindus or the Sikhs will allow me to say that, if a Hindu or a Sikh grossly or wantonly insults the religion of Islam, they will confess that that man should not be spared if there is to be any progress or any economic life to be allowed in this country. Sir, this Bill I think leans too much on the side of leniency. It gives only two years to the offender, and that is the maximum. I do not think that, so far, any judge has given the maximum penalty. Sometimes it is six months or even less, on an appeal to the High Court it is frequently reduced very much. Now, Sir, what we want in the interests of the country is that the penalty may be deterrent in its nature, so that the tranquil progress of the country and the peaceful life of the country may not be seriously and gravely disturbed. I think also that Honourable Members will avoid the danger which lurks in the proposal that the offender should enjoy the right of appeal. It is a very serious matter and I think that if his opportunity of movement is not restricted he will become a positive danger to the peace of the country.

Sir, I appeal to my Honourable colleagues, in the name of progress, in the name of civilisation, in the name of enlightenment, not to treat this measure in a spirit of levity and controversy, which ought to be foreign to all patriotic people, but to treat it as a necessary measure for the progress of the country and for repressing that ebullition of feeling which is doing so much harm to the country.

Mr. K. C. Roy (Bengal : Nominated Non-Official) : Sir, I feel it my painful duty to oppose the motion moved by my Honourable friend (Mr. Crerar). I agree with Nawab Sir Zulfiqar Ali Khan when he said that circumstances had arisen in this country, for which I believe our communities are primarily responsible and the Government secondarily responsible, which demanded drastic treatment.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Government are primarily responsible.

Mr. K. C. Roy : I repeat the communities are primarily responsible and Government secondarily responsible—which demanded drastic treatment. But, Sir, what is the Bill before us ? The Bill only proposes to add a new offence to our Indian Penal Code. We have already provided for hatred against class and hatred against Government. We are now going to provide for hatred against religion. This is the exact purpose of the measure. This is neither a Hindu nor a Mussalman Bill. My friend Sir Zulfiqar Ali Khan is absolutely wrong when he assumes that we are passing this Bill because it is a Moslem measure. It is nothing of the kind. We are adding a piece of repressive legislation to our Statute-book. And for what purpose ? It will serve no useful purpose whatever.

I oppose this Bill on four principal grounds, namely, that the Bill is most inopportune, that the Bill will not serve the purpose which Government have in view, that the Bill is inconsistent with the spirit of toleration for which generations of Englishmen and Indians have worked in this country, and lastly, Sir, that this Bill is a stigma on the Indian Press. We are considerably handicapped in the discussion of this Bill by the encomiums which were passed upon this measure by the Party Leaders in this House. (Mr. D. Belvi : " Hear, hear ".) I am sorry that I shall have to single out Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar first. He it is who said that the Bill was overdue. He is a great lawyer and an eminent jurist. I grant all that. I am a layman. But I am content to rely upon the judgment of three successive High Courts, the High Court of Calcutta, the High Court of Allahabad and lastly the High Court of Lahore, and also upon the other existing laws. We have not needed this Bill for the last 250 years. Why do we need it now ? My friend Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar did not look deeper into the problem. Perhaps he was thinking in terms of the Unity Conference. Now, I come to my Honourable friend Mr. Jayakar. He said that there has been a demand from the country. Might I know where the demand came from ? I claim, Sir, that I am in constant touch with the flow of political events in India. The demand came from whom ? A handful of men in the Punjab, thoughtful perhaps, patriotic perhaps, but really, the inner working came from a set of men who are responsible for the communal disturbances in North India.

Mr. K. Ahmed (Rajshahi Division : Muhammadan Rural) : How do you know ?

Mr. K. C. Roy : The proper treatment for that is not this Bill but action under the Deportation Act and the Criminal Law Amendment Act. If these two Acts had been primarily resorted to in the provinces of the Punjab, Delhi and the United Provinces, we should have heard very much less of these communal troubles. (An Honourable Member : " Why exclude Bengal ? ") Then, Sir, I come to my Honourable friend Lala Lajpat Rai. Only the other day, speaking on the Volunteer Police Force Bill, he asked whether we were to accept a Bill of this sort from an alien bureaucracy. But he has no hesitation in accepting a far more drastic measure from that bureaucracy. I shall ask him to reconcile his own opinions.

Lala Lajpat Rai (Jullundur Division : Non-Muhammadan) : I will.

Mr. K. C. Roy : And lastly, Sir, I come to my revered friend, Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya. He is not here just now. He gave us a dissertation on religion. I say this Bill does not deal with religion. It deals with a concrete offence, and that an offence which can literally be dealt with under the existing Acts.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Is there no religion in it ?

Mr. K. C. Roy : No, Sir.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Concrete fact ?

Mr. K. C. Roy : Yes, concrete facts. I say that the Bill is inopportune, and I am very anxious to emphasise this fact. It was only the other day that His Excellency the Viceroy gave us a message that if response was forthcoming, he would convene an All-India Conference to examine the communal troubles. I know what His Excellency meant. His Excellency does not want to treat merely the symptoms of the disease with which this Bill deals. He wants to treat the whole question in its political, in its economic and in its religious and social aspects. (Hear, hear.) We are prejudicing his chance by passing this Bill to-day. Let us examine this case fully : let us examine the religious disabilities of Hindus and Muhammadans : let us examine the economic value of this question, and we can take measures after that. What is the good of having a trumpery legislation which will yield no results ?

Mr. K. Ahmed : Will you fetch a bucket of water after the house is burnt ?

Mr. K. C. Roy : Well, we shall see about it a few minutes later. (An Honourable Member : " When it happens ".) Yes, when it happens. There is the deportation law for the time being. Many Members of this House will undoubtedly recollect that there was a discussion of this question in the Punjab Legislative Council. Only the other day I asked my Honourable friend Mr. Crerar whether he would be good enough to lay the opinion of the Punjab Government on the table and he was unable to oblige us. What was the discussion about in the Punjab Legislative Council ? I shall read an extract from the speech of the Honourable Mr. Craik, Chief Secretary to the Local Government. He said :

" More than half the newspapers in the Punjab had dummy editors. In one case the editor was one who had confessed that he had forged currency notes and escaped only by giving away his companions.".....(Laughter.)

(An Honourable Member : " Under what provision ? ")

" Another editor had in turn been a barber, a syce, a deserter from the Indian Infantry and an ex-convict."

Do I understand that Mr. Crerar will deal with them under these Acts ? I can tell you, " No, he won't ". But if he brings any proper Bill to deal with this sort of people, he will have the fullest support from every newspaper man in this House. But this Bill will serve no useful purpose. It was only this morning that I was talking to a very distinguished official of the Punjab who had much to do with these troubles. He told me that the Bill as originally drafted provided very little and, after it had come from the Select Committee it is nothing. I shall ask Mr. Crerar to convince me on this point.

Sir, the last point on which I wish to say a few words is that this Bill is not in keeping with the spirit of the British administration in this country. I know generations of British statesmen and Indian reformers, distinguished men of public thought, such as the founder of the Aligarh College, had worked for religions and social reform. But this Bill puts a premium on intolerance and bigotry. I am sorry, Sir, that Lord Irwin's Government should be associated with a measure of this kind. Have a Bill by all means, have a comprehensive Bill after a proper inquiry, to deal with communal questions, but not this Bill which really is not a progressive measure, but which will only hamper the good work done by reformers in this country—European, Hindu and Mussalman.

Mr. D. V. Belvi (Bombay Southern Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I rise with a twofold object. I wish to say a few words as regards the principle of the Bill inasmuch as I did not say anything on the Bill the other day. My second object is to move the amendment which stands in my name. I believe, Sir, we shall economise our time if I move the amendment for circulation at an early stage of the discussion.

Now, as to the principle of the Bill. It seems to me after careful consideration that this is a Bill which is fraught with very great danger. It appears to be an innocuous measure at the first blush, but it seems to me that though it wears the garb of innocence, it will not only muzzle the Press of the country to a certain extent, but it will also hamper the free expression of opinion on the part of scholars, historians and men of that kind. It is my firm opinion that the law as it stands is sufficient for all practical purposes. Government has slept over its duties for a number of years. My firm conviction is that, if the Government had taken measures earlier to repress mischievous writings, mischievous speeches at the proper time, we would not have been in the predicament in which we now stand. Did Government do anything ? Did it lift its little finger to take any repressive measures to put down, the inflammatory speeches that were delivered by members of both communities at Aligarh, in the Punjab, in Bengal and other places ? Are we not aware of the kind of speeches that were delivered at Aligarh about two years ago ? Has the Government done anything in the matter hitherto ? It has done nothing whatever. Now that it sees that there is a great deal of hubbub in the country, it wants to cover its own sins by passing this measure. The law as it stands is enough to vindicate the reasonable liberty of every man in the land. We know that though the accused in the Rangila Rasul case was not convicted by the Lahore High Court on some technical ground, the law was fully vindicated in a subsequent case, the Vartman case. What does this show ? It shows that there is sufficient safeguard in the existing law, but that the law was not set in motion by the executive for its own purpose, either because the executive was not alive to its duties, or because it had some sinister motive. There is no other explanation possible. It is very unsafe to add to the armoury of the executive another dangerous weapon.

Let us see how the present Bill is framed. It is provided in the Bill that the authority to institute a criminal prosecution is to vest in the Government. It is stated that no prosecution should be instituted without the sanction of the Local Government. I submit that this is not a salutary provision at all. If you really wish that a person who is aggrieved should have his redress, then it should be permissible to him to go to a court of law to vindicate his rights. It is said that if such liberty is given false complaints may be brought before courts. There are provisions in the existing law which provide against complaints of that kind. If A prosecutes B falsely, in the first place, the magistrate has got powers in his hands to award compensation to the accused at the expense of the complainant. That is remedy No. 1. Then there is a second remedy open to the aggrieved person if there be a false prosecution. He can ask the magistrate to grant sanction for the prosecution of the complainant under section 211 or under section 182 of the Indian Penal Code. The complainant will be hauled up for making a false complaint and he will be tried, and if found guilty, he will be convicted and sentenced. There is a third remedy open to the accused. He can bring a suit for damages for false prosecution in a civil court. When there are so many remedies open to the aggrieved person, why should the authority to institute a criminal prosecution under the proposed new law be vested in the Government ? The explanation is that the Government wants perhaps to play off one community against another, sometimes showing partiality to members of one community and sometimes showing partiality to members of another community. My humble opinion is that if you are inclined to pass this measure into law, leave it to the aggrieved parties—let them have the satisfaction of going to the court and vindicating their rights. If you wish to pass this law, then leave the people full liberty to take the course that they may be advised to take.

I submit that freedom of opinion will be much suppressed and I shall give you a concrete instance of what I mean. The instance is very recent. A small pamphlet came to my notice only the other day. You know that there is a community of Muhammadans in this country known as the Khojas. His Highness the Aga Khan is the religious head of that sect. The sect numbers, I believe, in its fold several millions of people—I do not know the exact number, but I know that the followers of His Highness the Aga Khan are both in India and in Africa (An Honourable Member : " And Persia "), and, in Persia also. There is an association in the city of Karachi of the Khojas and the Secretary of the Association there has issued a small pamphlet. I have received a copy of the pamphlet by post, but unfortunately I forgot to bring it here, and I do not know if any other Members of this House have received copies of that pamphlet. You will find there that the writer of the pamphlet says that he is himself a member of the Khoja community, and yet he disputes in the body of that pamphlet the very title of His Highness the Aga Khan to the position of the religious head of the sect. He says that he does not admit the alleged correctness of the pedigree of His Highness and his family. He denies that His Highness the Aga Khan is a descendant of the Holy Prophet of the Mussalmans. He also says that His Highness is altogether wrong in telling people that they should not offer their homage to Allah but to himself. The pamphlet also says that His Highness has openly preached the doctrine that homage should be paid to him personally as Allah. Are we to suppose that an expression of opinion of this kind should be punished ? The man is a member of the Khoja community, and I have no doubt that many Khojas will feel insulted or their religious feelings will be severely wounded by the publication of such a pamphlet. But it seems to me that the writer of the pamphlet is speaking out frankly. Is it right that things of that kind should not be discussed in the public ? What will be the inevitable effect of the law you are making now ? You have not considered the full implications of the Bill that you are passing. It is all very well to say that there are breaches of the peace here, there are houses burning there and murders elsewhere. All that is true, but do you think that all these will be stopped simply because you pass this measure here ? Unfortunately for us, some of the leaders of the two communities went on talking recklessly. They sowed the wind and they are now reaping the whirlwind. It is very easy to set fire, but it is not so easy to control the fire when it is flaming and raging. I do not believe that the mere passing of this measure will allay public feeling in the country. There are other remedies which should be tried. There is one idea which is lurking in our minds and I think I shall not be doing justice to myself if I do not give expression to it. It seems to me that some of my Muhammadan friends believe that the proposed law will do them greater good and they are so anxious as to plead for enhancement of the punishment, and they desire that the law should be made more Draconian. I request them to take my assurance that, if this law be passed, it will be as hard on Mussalmans as it will be on Hindus, and I do not think that if you make this offence non-bailable the Hindus only will suffer. For aught I know, more Muhammadans may suffer than Hindus. It is no use making the law very Draconian. If you wish to pass a law, let it be a reasonable law. There is a punishment of two years provided in the Bill. That is quite enough. It will depend upon the kind of offence that is committed, it will depend upon the kind of magistracy or the Sessions Judges that you get for the trial of the cases. It is no use making the new offence you are creating a non-bailable offence, or increasing the punishment to 7 years.

[Mr. D. V. Belvi.]

It is not only the Prophet of the Mussalmans that will be sometimes attacked, but there will be the prophets, the saints and other holy persons of the other communities that may be insulted. So, it is no use saying, in my humble opinion, that the law should be made more stringent.

12 Noon.

It is very unfortunate that such a law should be passed in the first instance and then it will be still more unfortunate to make the law so very stringent. We know that in ancient times if a man committed a small theft his hands were cut off. Sometimes his ears were chopped off, but it was found in course of time by experience that a severe sentence did not necessarily mean repression of crime. Then, Sir, I do not think that I need say anything more as to the dangerous principle of the Bill. I fully associate myself with all that has been said by my Honourable friend Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar. You will find by referring to the Report of the Select Committee that such sane and sober men as my friends Mr. K. C. Roy, Mr. Arthur Moore, Mr. Kelkar, Mr. N. C. Chunder and Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar say that the present law is adequate and that they are dead against the Bill that is now proposed to be passed into an Act. All these Honourable gentlemen are connected directly, with the exception perhaps of Mr. Nirmal Chunder, with the Press of the country. (Honourable Members : " He is also connected with the Press.") Very well, then, I find that five gentlemen who are connected with the Press in India are positive in their opinion and they all say that this measure is superfluous and that it is not wanted by the country. Are we to set aside the opinions of these men ? I have no doubt that if there had been a representative of the Muhammadan Press on the Select Committee, he would probably have concurred in the opinion of these five gentlemen, but unfortunately I do not find in the names of the members of the Select Committee that there is any Muhammadan publicist (Mr. K. Ahmed : " Are you an editor.") If you wish to say anything kindly speak up. I am not an editor myself. I have nothing to do with any newspaper. I was never one and I do not hope to be one in the future. I have never published any pamphlet hitherto and I do not desire to publish any hereafter. I am quite safe. I always keep myself within the bounds of law.

Then, Sir, I come to my amendment. I shall first of all read my amendment. My amendment is that the Bill, as reported by the Select Committee, be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinion thereon by the 15th January 1928. Honourable Members may perhaps think that I have again moved a dilatory motion. I assure them that my object is not to delay the measure but I repeat that it is necessary to send this Bill to the various provinces for its circulation. The Bill has not yet been translated into the various vernaculars. You are legislating for many crores of people residing in this country. Let them know at least what we the legislators are about to do. Let us not ignore their presence. It is for their benefit that you are legislating. Do not think that simply because you happen to be clad in brief authority and have the privilege to sit within the walls of this Chamber for some time that you can legislate despite the people that have sent you here. (Mr. K. Ahmed : " Question ! ") It is very wrong of my friend Mr. Kabirud Din Ahmed to say " Question ". I ask him not to forget his constituency. Next time he may not be sent up. Very often we harp on the slogan that good government cannot be a substitute for government of the people, by the people, and for the people. That is the slogan that we not infrequently advance. At any rate we on this side call ourselves democrats and we always say that the real political power should be with the masses. That is our shibboleth but how do we behave ? Yesterday we ignored the people of the country altogether. I warn you not to do so again. Do you know what people will think about you if you ignore their presence ? Sir, I wish to read to this House one sentence which has struck me most and which I think is very relevant to this point. I am quoting from my favourite political philosopher, Burke. He says. (Laughter.) My friends here will considerably benefit themselves if they will read Burke, especially his Reflections on the French Revolution. We are on the eve of a revolution in this country and it is necessary to study every sentence of that immortal book. I will read only one sentence. It reads :

"You will smile here at the consistency of those democratists, who, when they are not on their guard, treat the humbler part of the community with the greatest contempt, whilst, at the same time, they pretend to make them the deposiories of all power."

That applies exactly to the conduct of this House yesterday.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member is not in order in criticising the decision of this House.

Mr. D. V. Belvi : I bow to your ruling, Sir, but all the same I maintain that Burke is positively right. You wish to pass this law in haste. I know that if you examine the history of legislative measures in this country you can surely find precedents in which legislation was rushed through in the course of one sitting. You know that the Official Secrets Act was rushed through the Imperial Legislative Council in the course of a few hours. We also know that the Bengal Ordinance was issued in a few minutes. You may do that if you like. You have been empowered by law to do it, but I submit that it would not be right. It would be morally indefensible. Why do you not take the people into your confidence ? The publication of the Bill in the various vernaculars of this vast country will serve as a sort of deterrent. Mischief mongers will come to know that there is trouble brewing for them within the walls of the Legislative Assembly. They will know that it is not safe to insult the religious feelings of other communities. Why should we suppose that there will be peace and good will in the country to-morrow if we pass this measure this evening ? It is a wrong belief altogether. Do you know what the Press of this country has said about the measure ? There is the Statesman of Calcutta, there is the Hindu of Madras and there is the Indian National Herald of Bombay. There are other newspapers in the country which have criticised this measure very severely. They are all opposed to the proposed new legislation. Are we to ignore the opinions of all these newspapers ? Are their opinions to be cast to the winds ? Should no importance be attached to the opinion of people who educate the public ? If you ignore the opinion of such important newspapers, I can only say that the House will be abusing its authority. I hope that the electors will remember the conduct of their present representatives in future elections. You rush to the villages for votes at election times, you coax the villagers in all possible ways but when you are elected to the Assembly or to the Council of State, you clean forget your masters. You say here that they are ignorant people, that they cannot read and write, that you are the custodians of their interests and that you are the really enlightened people. You fancy that you can legislate for the whole country at your unfettered and sweet will and pleasure. That seems to be the idea of some of my Honourable friends. I request them very seriously to think over the matter and vote in favour of my amendment. Let this measure be brought up in the Delhi Session of 1928. I have said purposely in my amendment that the opinions should be collected from the various provinces before the 15th January 1928. You will not lose anything whatever. I have consulted some important persons on the subject matter of my amendment, I have the leave of one great man in the country to tell my Honourable colleagues that he thoroughly sympathises with this amendment. He is no less a person than the religious head of the Ahmadiya sect of Mussulmans. I am told that that sect has got a million people as its followers. Fortunately for us the religious head of that great community is at present in Simla. I had the privilege of meeting His Holiness the other day and I have ascertained his opinion to-day. He has sent me word to say that he is not satisfied with the present form of the Bill. He thinks that the Bill has emerged from the Select Committee in a wrong form, and he has sent me word also to say that he thinks it will be much better if this Bill is circulated in order that opinions may be collected upon it from people living in the different parts of the country. It is for Honourable Members of this House to attach importance to the opinion of such a great man or not. But it is my duty to place before you the opinion which I have obtained from him.

Mr. K. Ahmed : The opinion as stated is not correct. His Holiness welcomes the Bill in substance, Sir.

Mr. D. V. Belvi : It is no use contradicting me here. The Secretary of His Holiness is in this building. My Honourable friend Mr. Ahmed may take the trouble of going out a little and consulting him. I consulted him only 20 minutes ago.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member must not make any reference to a visitor in the Gallery

Mr. D. V. Belvi : On these grounds, Sir, I move my amendment and I request my Honourable friends to consider it coolly and to pass it. I am not opposed to the measure if it is brought up in a proper form. But the measure as it now stands appears to me to be most dangerous. I do not think the Prophet of the Muhammadans will be protected by this legislation. I do not think the saints of the Hindus will be protected by it either. It will be still possible for the members of one community, if they are evilminded, to insult the religious feelings of the other community. This is not the way to proceed to root out the evil. With these words, Sir, I oppose the principle of this Bill and I move my amendment.

Mr. Abdul Latif Sahib Farookhi (North Madras : Muhammadan) : Sir, I rise to support the motion moved by the Honourable the Home Member and to oppose the amendment of my Honourable friend Mr. Belvi. Sir, several speakers, including my Honourable friends Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar and Mr. K. C. Roy, pointed out that this is a repressive measure. I quite agree with them that this is a repressive measure. But, Sir, there are occasions when we have to strengthen the hands of the Government to enact such measures so as to enable us to live in an atmosphere of peace. (An Honourable Member : " And that from a Swarajist ! ") Swarajists or anti-Swarajists, we have come here to co-operate with the Government. When we entered the Legislature no doubt there was a talk of obstruction. But ever since I came here, I have been seeing that we are helping the Government in several Committees, and I do not see any reason why in a measure like this, which is calculated to bring about peace and harmony between the different communities we should not strengthen the hands of the Government. Sir, I do not understand the reason why we should defer legislation on an important question like this. Sir, it is pointed out that section 153-A. is sufficient, but unfortunately, owing to the famous judgment of Justice Dalip Singh, we have found that several eminent lawyers and people who can be quoted as authorities on law have admitted that there are loopholes in the law, and we have therefore to shut up those loopholes. We have to look to the present state of affairs in the country. I have only yesterday received a Resolution passed by the Mussalmans of Bezwada which runs as follows :—

" The Mussulmans of Bezwada strongly condemn Telugu dramas of ' Roshanara ', ' Jowharibai ', ' Zaibunnisa ', ' Fall of Vizianagar ', and such of their ilk as untrue, defamatory and mischievous, and protest with all the emphasis at their command against their publication and staging in the Andhra Districts and elsewhere, as they are calculated to insult Mussalman religion, Mussalman Emperors, Kings, religious heads, Mussulman Princesses and women in their modesty and chastity.

The meeting brings to the notice of the Government that the dramas are defamatory and provocative, breed hatred and contempt, and promote feelings of enmity between communities. The Mussulmans are greatly exasperated. This meeting declares emphatically that Mussulmans cannot bear such insults. Prays Government to take immediate steps to cancel licenses for the above-named dramas, prohibit staging, proscribe the said dramas and take legal action against authors and publishers of the said publications."

Sir, this only goes to show the state of feeling in the country at large. I cannot agree with my friends who suppose that there is discontent only in the Punjab. After the judgment of Justice Dalip Singh in the Rangila Rasul case huge monster meetings were held in several parts of India and the demonstrations only went to show the extent of feeling which prevailed in the country. Sir, I am not advocating the cause of the Mussulmans only. It is possible that some Mussulman writers may write against other religions. (An Honourable Member : " We do not agree.") You may not agree, but as an Indian it is my duty to see that peace and harmony is brought about between the different communities ; as a Mussulman, as one whose religion enjoins peace upon him, it is my duty to see that my fellow-countrymen should also live in peace. I do not want that there should be any provocation on the part of the Mussulmans which might incite the religious feelings of the Hindus. Such being the case, it is only necessary that we should enact a law of this kind as soon as possible. My friend Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar said there may have been occasions when Judges have with the most bona fide intentions interpreted the law in a manner contrary to custom. But the point is that nobody knows whether there may not be similar occasions hereafter. It is possible that in future there may be other Dalip Singhs, who, with the best intentions, may think that there is a loophole in the law and that a particular act does not come within the purview of that law.

Mr. T. A. K. Shervani (Cities of the United Provinces : Muhammadan Urban) : There are Dalals.

Mr. Abdul Latif Sahib Farookhi: My frined, Mr. Shervani, says that there are Dalals also ; but we know, Sir, that if there were only judgments of Dalals, then we need not have come to the House to ask for such legislation. Sir, it is also pointed out that this Bill is very wide and will take a large number of offenders under its purview, but I feel that there is a very strong safeguard, inasmuch as it gives discretion to the Government to decide and sanction a prosecution. (An Honourable Member : " That is very dangerous.)" My friend says that it is very dangerous. But sometimes we require such dangerous safeguards (Hear, hear), and Sir, I am quite confident that the Government will always see to it that prosecutions are not sanctioned unless there is a strong reason and ground for sanctioning such prosecutions. (An Honourable Member : " There may be merely a strong agitation.) Sir, it is also said that this Bill would put a restraint on scholars, historians and those who are trying to search after the truth. But my submission is, Sir, that in the Report of the Select Committee the word " deliberately " is inserted, and therefore it would go to obviate such dangers. Sir, my friend, Mr. Belvi, referred to the speeches made at Aligarh and said that the Government failed to take steps against those speeches. First of all, Sir, I am not prepared to admit that those speeches were objectionable. Even granting, however, that they were objectionable, and even granting that the Government failed to take action against those speeches, is it necessary, or is it advisable on the part of Government, now, to fail in their duty to enact such a law ? If the Government once failed to do its duty, it is not necessary that it should always fail to perform it. Then, again, Sir, my friend, Mr. Belvi, said that this law will be as hard on Moslems as on Hindus. Well, Sir, I shall not regret it. If any Moslem really and with deliberate intention to wound the religious feelings of Hindus does anything to provoke them, I think that Moslem should be punished, and I wish all the more that a Moslem who really deserves punishment should be punished, and therefore I think the Moslems will not regret that. Let it be as hard on the Moslems as it will be on the Hindus (An Honourable Member : " And on the Christians.") Then, Sir, my friend, Mr. Belvi, also said that no Mussalman publicist was included in the Select Committee, and he expressed the confidence that if any Mussalman journalist was there, he would have surely signed the minute of dissent written by several other gentlemen most of whom belong to the class of publicists. Well, Sir, I feel that I have the privilege to belong to that class of people —I am the editor of a daily Urdu paper (Hear, hear)—and if I were on the Select Committee, surely I would only have agreed to differ with those who wrote the minute of dissent. Sir, several papers have pointed out the necessity of such a law. Even the Statesman, if I remember correctly, wrote that there are loopholes in the law and those loopholes should be shut, and I can say with some amount of confidence to this House that the whole Mussalman Press, irrespective of the political thought it advocates, is in favour of enacting such a law. In conclusion, Sir, before I sit down, I shall only point out to my friend, Mr. Belvi that to circulate a measure like this which already went to a Select Committee where many eminent lawyers like Mr. Jinnah were present and where every possible safeguard was included, for eliciting public opinion is unnecessary in my opinion, and it will only be delaying a necessary legislation. Sir, yesterday several arguments were advanced in favour of doing the needful at the proper time. My Honourable friend, Mr. Jayakar, asked the Home Member whether he should not use his own discretion and decide the matter on its own merits. Here then is also a case where the matter should be decided on its own merits : and it is unnecessary, after it has gone through several stages, through the Select Committee also, to circulate this Bill for eliciting public opinion. Sir, in conclusion, perhaps this is the first day that I have had an opportunity to congratulate Honourable Members on the other side (Hear, hear), and I think that I should not be ashamed of doing it if I only think it my duty to do so as a representative of the people, and therefore, Sir, I have to thank the Honourable the Home Member for having done his duty at the proper time and for having taken care not to allow things to drift to such a state as would prove to be disastrous : and therefore, Sir, I thank the Honourable the Home Member and congratulate him on the important steps that he has taken so promptly.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub (Rohilkund and Kumaon Divisions : Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I myself feel ashamed that the conduct of the inhabitants of this country should necessitate the enacting of a measure like this. The freedom of speech and the freedom of the pen are, Sir, the most cherished rights of civilised nations in the world, and if after a century of British rule in India we are not capable of using both our tongues and our pen with care and with decorum, I am afraid we cannot congratulate either ourselves or the Government on bringing the Bill on to the Statute-book. Sir, most of the legal enactments and legal measures are intended to restrict human action and the freedom of mankind to a certain extent. Not only do the laws enacted by human agency bring such restrictions, but also the laws which are considered by different communities as enacted by super-human agency also bring restrictions on the freedom of human action, and therefore we cannot condemn any Act of the Legislature solely on the ground that it is calculated to restrict the freedom of human action. Sir, the laws enacted in a country are the index of the state of civilisation of that country and the Legislature of every country at every time follows the standard of civilisation of that country. The higher the level of civilisation of a country rises, to the same degree the Legislature of that country becomes more liberal and more elastic. As an example, I may point out that in some countries in Europe capital punishment has been abolished ; but if the example of those countries were followed in India, I am afraid the number of murders and assassinations would increase to an alarming degree. (An Honourable Member : "Question.") The laws enacted by the Indian Legislature are not unalterable like the laws of the Medes and Persians. When the state of affairs in the country improves and the level of civilization is raised to such a degree that moral force will be able to stop the scurrilous use of pen and tongue, not only this but also many other enactments of this character will disappear from the Statute-book of the country. But now when it is admitted on all sides that scurrilous writings and speeches are becoming more numerous and more provocative than ever, we will be failing in our duty if we do not lend our support to the passing of this Bill. I do not claim that the Bill under discussion is quite perfect and free from all objections. When it was introduced first in this House, I myself said that it was too wide and too indefinite and, although the Select Committee has amended the Bill in desirable directions, still I must confess that it is not in any way altogether unimpeachable. However, like any other imperfect measures of the Legislature, the necessity for its being brought on the Statute-book is established, and it is with these feelings that I feel constrained to support the motion of the Honourable the Home Member.

Mr. B. P. Naidu (Guntur cum Nellore : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I am sorry I cannot congratulate the Government, like my Honourable friend Mr. Farookhi, on their bringing forward this Bill. I have listened with great interest and pleasure to the analytical and humourous speech of my Honourable friend Mr. Kelkar. Sir, in my opinion this is a piece of panicky legislation for which there is no real necessity at present. The law, as it stands now, I understand, is enough to cover and meet the prevailing communal antagonism in the country. That being so, why impose upon the people a measure which is capable of doing considerable harm in several directions ? As my friend, Mr. Roy, has put it, it puts a premium on religious intolerance and bigotry. I will go further and say that it will also encouraged gross superstition. At a time when we are desiring progress in all directions, a measure of this type will stifle liberty of thought and expression and, I am afraid, will deal a death below to religious and historical research. Hinduism, which is considered to be a most catholic religion, would not have attained to its present high position but for the free atmosphere in which its votaries lived and died. There are a number of sects in the broad fold of Hinduism and the diversity of their thought is the strength and greatness of Hinduism. I am sure India will not in any way be the poorer for the want of this Act, which, after all, serves no good purpose.

Mr. B. Das (Orissa Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, I rise to oppose the consideration of the Report of the Select Committee before us. Sir, last year at this time in the Simla Session, when the Honourable Sir Alexander Muddiman brought forward his amendment to the Criminal Procedure Code, section 153, I had the privilege to oppose it at every stage. Sir, I then said that Government had ample powers in their hands and there was no necessity for further legislation ; and Sir Alexander Muddiman at that time did admit that they had ample power in their hands, but they wanted that particular legislation in order to do away with the communal spirit in the country. I find that the enactment of that piece of legislation has brought more communal discord in the country and to-day we are going to enact another piece of legislation in the name of religious amity. How can an alien Government legislate to set right religious disputes in the country ? I do not think the Government can. The Government have got ample power. Sir, at that time I quoted from the Statesman a passage which equally applies on this occasion. Sir, the Statesman which was previously known as the "Friend of India" occasionally even now writes certain leading articles in the spirit of a friend of India, and last year the Statesman wrote while protesting against that piece of legislation thus :

" .... but the operation of the new law may well prove an additional incitement. Sir Alexander Muddiman raises a question that goes back further in history than the time of Milton, but which Milton settled for reasoning men in his Areopagitica when he uttered his memorable protest against the licensing or prohibiting of books "

The paper further observed :

" In India bad law and bad journalism have for too long gone side by side. Who began it is no longer a matter of importance, but irresponsibility in journalism has evoked oppressive legislation and that in its turn has led to a greater irresponsibility."

If that was the view of the Statesman last year, I will enlighten the House about the view of the Statesman this year which further confirms the view of many sensible and responsible persons in the country that this piece of legislation is unnecessary. Sir, the Statesman in its very able editorial about this Bill says :

" The spirit of the Bill is only to be paralleled in English legislation by reference to the times of Queen Mary and Queen Elizabeth, when the rival religions of Rome and Protestantism were struggling for the mastery. If this Bill becomes law there are classic books which cannot be published in India without danger of prosecution of those who print or circulate them."

In another passage, it further says :

" No real discussion of religious questions, even if they be purely historical, will be permissible. Had a law akin to this been in existence in France, Renan would probably have ended his days in prison after writing ' La Vie de Jesus.' Voltaire would certainly have done so. The fact is that the difficulty of the Rangila Rasul case has rushed the Government into a thoroughly bad piece of legislation."

I shall stop here. It may be that there was a flaw in the law. It may be that Justice Dalip Singh pointed out where that flaw was. But it is not a right move to bring forward this piece of legislation. I was surprised the other day although my friend Sir Hari Singh Gour pointed out, in order to bring out certain amendments in the Penal Code in the Select Committee, which sections applied to which kinds of offence and no further legislation was necessary, I find that my Honourable friend Sir Hari Singh Gour, though he was put on the Select Committee has not brought out anything which helps us to understand the law.

Mr. N. C. Kelkar : He did not attend the Select Committee.

Mr. B. Das : Sir, it was due to your kind intercession that the Honourable Member Dr. Gour was put on the Select Committee.

Mr. President : Was the Honourable Member on the Select Committee ?

Mr. B. Das : The Honourable Dr. Gour was put on the Select Committee owing to your intercession, Sir.

Mr. President : Was the Honourable Member himself on the Select Committee ?

Mr. B. Das : I was not on the Select Committee, Sir, nor did I want to be on the Select Committee. I am not a lawyer. I belong to that profession to which my Honourable friend Messrs. Roy and Moore belong. I happen to be a journalist in my leisure hours and I edit the Young Utkal for the uplift of Orissa. I am sorry to hear that my Honourable friend Mr. Farookhi, who is a Mussalman journalist, made the speech that he did supporting this measure. I submit that journalists have additional responsibilities besides making occasional speeches on the floor of this House.

Mr. Abdul Latif Sahib Farookhi : It was because of the additional responsibility as a journalist that I made the speech that I did.

Mr. B. Das : Before proceeding further, I must congratulate my Honourable friend Mr. Farookhi on the speech which he made in support of the Government.

Mr. President : That is not the issue before the House.

Mr. B. Das : Sir, I ask him to join our party as we are responsive co-operators too. I also ask him to oppose this measure because he belongs to the same profession of journalism as I do. When a journalist makes any suggestion, it goes throughout the country. Any opinion that we journalists give on the floor of this House is always read all over the country We, journalists, have great responsibilities, because we always shape public opinion ahead. Before the public can think of a thing, it is the journalist that, by his investigation of the problems, brings out the problems with a view to shape public opinion. When my Honourable friend Mr. Farookhi said that had he been on the Select Committee, he would have differed from my Honourable friends Messrs. Roy, Moore and Chunder, I felt sorry that as a journalist he should have spoken like that. I feel that the responsibilities of a journalist are far greater than of other people. I find, Sir, that the Englishman of Calcutta, which is always so unfriendly to India, writing on this Bill says that this will serve no useful purpose.

Mr. T. C. Goswami (Calcutta Suburbs : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Is there such a paper ?

Mr. B. Das : My Honourable friend Mr. Goswami who comes from Calcutta ought to know the Englishman.

Mr. T. C. Goswami : I have not seen it for ages.

Mr. B. Das : In view of the very strong agitation that has been set up by the best class of papers in India and in view of the strong comments that are being made by my Honourable friends Messrs. Moore, Roy and other journalists, I hope every Honourable Member of this House will oppose this piece of legislation. If the Government pass this measure, it will give additional power in the hands of district officers, some of whom are sitting behind the Government benches. But they would find that this additional piece of legislation has set them wool-gathering. If they want to suppress a certain agitation that is going on, or if they want to put down scurrilous writings, they can easily do it. They have got enough weapons in their hands at present and why add additional power to them. As my Honourable friend Mr. Belvi rightly pointed out, this will only lead to further agitation by the followers of the various sects, by the followers of Gurus, bogus Gurus, of bogus Avatars scattered all over India. I feel that this Bill is not going to serve any useful purpose.

With these words, Sir, I oppose the motion for the consideration of the Select Committee's Report.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi (Dacca Division : Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, as a signatory to the Report of the Select Committee, I feel that I should speak on this Bill. Sir, this Bill which has been introduced here is the outcome of that unfortunate decision of a learned Judge of the Punjab High Court, I mean the decision of the Honourable Mr. Justice Dalip Singh in the Rangila Rasul case. From what I have read in the papers, I think that the learned Judge held that insulting a Prophet was not insulting a religion and that therefore the learned Judge could not convict the accused under section 153-A. He further suggested that legislation might be undertaken to bring these kinds of culprits to book. Sir, that extraordinary judgment gave rise to a considerable amount of discontent, not only in the Punjab but all over India. The agitation went on from one end of the country to the other, and the Muslim feelings became extremely bitter. In various meetings, perhaps including the one at which Sir Abdur Rahim presided, resolutions were passed asking the Government to remove the learned Judge who gave that extraordinary judgment.

Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan (North Punjab : Muhammadan) : May I ask the Honourable Member to read out that resolution ?

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : I am sorry I have not got that resolution here, but I shall show that to the Honourable Member to-morrow. Sir, in the Punjab it brought about a serious state of affairs. Fortunately the destinies of the Punjab were in the hands of His Excellency Sir Malcolm Hailey at that particular time. In reply to a deputation from the Mussalmans, His Excellency, I understand, assured them that he would move the Government of India to undertake legislation of this kind. As a layman, I do not know whether that step was necessary. I thought the best thing for the Government of the Punjab would have been to move against that order of the learned Judge and ask the High Court of Lahore to form a full Bench and give an authoritative decision on the law point. However, I am told that in another decision, that is the Risala Vartman case, the acting Chief Justice, Mr. Broadway, and Mr. Justice Kemp practically overruled the judgment of the learned Judge, Mr. Justice Dalip Singh.

Lala Lajpat Rai : They did not overrule the judgment in the Rangila Rasul case.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : That was my information. I may be wrong. My further information is that they said that it would be better if the law were to be made clear on the point, and hence the necessity for this Bill.

I will not deal with my Honourable friend Mr. K. C. Roy just at the present moment but I will deal with the Bill first.

Sir, this Bill was considered in the Select Committee with the assistance of the eminent lawyers of India—Mr. Jinnah, Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar, the late Advocate General of Madras, Mr. Jayakar and Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya. They are all eminent lawyers. (An Honourable Member : " Every one of them ? ") Yes, Sir, every one of them. They considered the Bill, and what was their conclusion ? At the outset those of us, members of the Select Committee, who are laymen, must express our gratitude to those lawyers for explaining the whole thing to us. Section 295A which was revised now reads as follows :

"Whoever, with deliberate and malicious intention of outraging the religious feelings of any class of His Majesty's subjects, by words, either spoken or written, or by visible representations, insults or attempts to insult the religion or religious beliefs of that class, shall be punished with imprisonment, etc., etc."

These eminent lawyers have explained to us that by adding those words "with deliberate and malicious intention of outraging the religious feelings of any class" we safeguard people making fair comments and expressing their honest views as regards religious beliefs. We thereby safeguard them.

Mr. M. A. Jinnah (Bombay City : Muhammadan Urban) : We safe guard an honest man.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : Thank you, Sir. Then they say by adding "the religious beliefs" of that class we bring those culprits to book who attack on a founder of a religion also and cannot be brought under section 153-A. My Honourable friend Pandit Malaviya and my Honourable friend Nawab Sir Abdul Qaiyum wanted it to be made clear.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : On a point of order, Sir. Can the Honourable Member refer to the proceedings in Select Committee ?

Mr. President : Order, order.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : They wanted, Sir, to make it clear by giving illustrations in the Bill, so that there may be no difficulty for a court in coming to a proper finding. We discussed that and afterwards we were unanimous,—after hearing from Mr. Jinnah, that this would cover that and there could be no apprehension that the court would not be able to come to a proper conclusion.

Although, of course, Mr. Jayakar pointed out to us the difficulties that would arise, if examples or illustrations were given.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : On a point of order, Sir. Is the House at liberty to discuss what transpired in the Select Committee ?

Mr. President : Is the Honourable Member discussing what happened in the Select Committee beyond what is actually embodied in the Report of the Select Committee ?

(Some Honourable Members : Yes.)

Mr. K. C. Roy : It is a misstatement of fact also.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member is not justified in referring to the conversations in the Select Committee if they are not embodied in the Report.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : I am not referring to anything else, Sir. Personally, Sir, I am satisfied that this Bill as amended meets the requirements at the present moment. Furthermore, I am also of opinion that the sentence provided for in the Bill is sufficient for the purpose, and that no increase of sentence should be made. Then, Sir, I am for making the offence "bailable" and not for making it "non-bailable" ; if it is made non-bailable, the poor man will never have an opportunity of defending himself properly. In non-bailable offences it is our experience that it is very very difficult to get a magistrate to grant bail and it is only men with money and influence, men who can engage counsel like Mr. Jinnah, who can ever think of getting bail.....

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : May I point out to the Honourable Member that the offence is triable by the Court of Session or the Presidency Magistrate and not by " a magistrate ".

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : Yes, Sir ; that is so ; but even in such cases he cannot get bail unless he can engage counsel like you. (Honourable Members : " Question.") Usually bail is not granted for these non-bailable offences and it is with the greatest difficulty that it can be got. Surely you do not want to put that man in the lock-up and not allow him to go out and prepare his defence by making the offence non-bailable. What does it matter if it is non-bailable ? He will not escape ; you can put the bail as high as you like.....

Mr. K. C. Neogy (Dacca Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : The Committee has made the offence " bailable ". What is your complaint ?

Mr. A. H. Ghuzvani : But the minority want it to be made " non-bailable ".

Mr. M. A. Jinnah : Wait till the amendment comes.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : Then, Sir, I would answer in one word my Honourable friend, Mr. K. C. Roy. Mr. K. C. Roy has said that this Bill, as amended, will not serve the purpose for which it has been brought forward. We shall not take that advice from my Honourable friend Mr. K. C. Roy. We shall take advice from the eminent lawyers who were in that Committee ; and they tell us that this will serve the purpose.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : It is not a legal matter.

Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : With these words, Sir, I support the Bill, and I hope that this House will pass this Bill unanimously and not ask for a division, and thus show to the whole of India that the differences between the Mussalmans and the Hindus are gradually coming to an end.

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum (North-West Frontier Province : Nominated Non-Official) : Sir, I just want to say a few words in support of what the last speaker has said. I am surprised to see that so many members of the Select Committee, who had discussed the measure very thoroughly in the Committee Room, should now speak and urge diverse views and opinions on this subject. I thought we had all come to a somewhat unanimous verdict on the subject, but when I saw the minutes of dissents and the majority and minority views and also several notices of amendments, I thought that what I had seen in the Committee Room must have been a mere dream. The Honourable the Home Member gave every opportunity to the members of the Select Committee to find some such solution of the difficulty and to limit the law to such an extent that it may be acceptable to the country, i.e., to minimise the effect of the law and to bring in as few persons within its purview as possible. Sir, if I had only been allowed to go into the details of the discussions we had—and you, Sir, have ruled that we should not go into it—I would have been able to prove that several measures and solutions were suggested to meet the difficulty but that this was found to be the simplest of all. Some simple explanation to section 153-A was also suggested in the Select Committee, instead of enacting a new section. Sir, what I have to say is this, that, as far as I could make out, there was no ulterior motive on the part of the Government in bringing in this measure, namely, to put a wider net so as to bring in too many journalists or too many public speakers or social reformers within the clutches of the law. The Home Member was face to face with the difficulty created for him by the Press of both the communities. If the Hindu Press had only said that the existing law containing section 153-A was not open to a different interpretation and that it was only the casual mistake of a certain Judge to interpret it in a certain way, perhaps this difficulty would not have arisen. But, Sir, as far as I can remember, there was not a single Hindu paper in Northern India, which did not in one way or other try to support the Judge who had put a certain interpretation on this section. They were almost unanimous in their opinion that the law was open to a different interpretation, and it was to safeguard against that and to make the position quite clear, that most of the Muslims wanted to bring in some sort of legislation on this subject. Well, Sir, I am not going to say more on the subject. But what I should like to say is this, that if the law is not made clear now, a similar interpretation may be put on the section in future and the difficulty will always exist. Sir, I do not know how we can make it safer for the country to interpret section 153-A as covering all these offences except by some modification of that very section or by bringing in some new section of the sort as is proposed in this Bill. The difficulty is there and the future possibility too is there! Sir, I see from the speeches of some of the Members and also from the amendments put down by some that the blame is generally attached to the Mussalmans for having raised a hue and cry for bringing in a new law. Well, I for one will accept that responsibility or blame, Sir, and my reason for that is simple. Sir, a new religion has of late sprung up in this country, which is spreading very fast. Whether it is a new religion or the revival of an old religion, I am not sure, but a new movement in the name of Arya Samaj has sprung up in this country and has been carrying on a regular campaign of Shuddhism and various other activities. As far as I have seen the literature of that movement, it is chiefly confined to abusing and criticising other religions and beliefs, as against exposing something good in itself. Well, Sir, there may be other religions and sects of religions in this country, who may be able to tolerate that, Sir, but my religion, Islam, teaches me, Sir, not to criticise or vilify the founders of religions or any sacred persons of any religion in the world and here is my difficulty. (An Honourable Member : "It teaches peace.") If I had only been able to return tit for tat or to give some suitable reply to the abusers of my religion I should not have minded it, Sir ; but our difficulty arises in that we cannot abuse or utter any bad words against any saint, and this is why the Mussalmans seem to be more anxious to secure immunity for their Prophet and also for the Prophets and saints of others, Sir. That is all I have to say, Sir.

1 P.M.

[Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum.]

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt (Burdwan Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I want to make my position clear before I say a few words why I oppose this Bill. There are certain amendments that stand in my name which give my Muhammadan fellow subjects the right to prosecute and have those punished who insult their religion and who insult their religious belief, because a demand has come from the Muhammadans for a legislation like this. But for myself and for members of other communities, I make bold to assert that we do not require any such protection and we have not asked for it.

Mr. K. Ahmed : What about the poor judge ?

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Sir, I am sorry that more than one speaker has made flings at the Honourable Judge who gave judgment in that famous Rangila Rasul case. His judicial wisdom has also been questioned and his knowledge of law has also been questioned by laymen. (Mr K. C. Neogy : " Shame.") Sir, I was sorry that even such a sober friend of mine, as Mr. Farookhi went the length of saying something against Mr. Justice Dalip Singh, and I think it were better if he had been silent on this point. But when worse passions are aroused, probably we lose the balance of our mind. At the same time I shall be failing in my duty if I do not give in plain words the genesis for this legislation, the reason why Government have taken so much pains to undertake a legislation like this. It has been said that there was a demand for the removal of the Judge. I do not know whether any aggrieved litigant has a right to demand the removal of a Judge. If any litigant had that right, I think no Judge would be safe to deliver any judgment in this land. I was going to submit the genesis of this legislation. Many of us in this House, especially my Honourable friend Mr. Ghuznavi—I do not find him here now—are aware of the favourite wife policy of the Government, and my Honourable friend Mr. Ghuznavi—of course as he is not here, I do not know whether it is proper for me to make any reference to him ; I am not referring to him in any personal capacity—presided over one of those anti-partition meetings and he was at that time considered by the Government as the wrong Ghuznavi and the right Ghuznavi was for some time Minister, but be that as it may, he may remember those days and my Honourable friend the Law Member also may remember those days, and the favourite wife policy of the Government. I do not know that even at this late hour, when we are on the threshold of fresh constitutional reforms, we should be faced with such retrograde measures which smack of the favourite wife policy on the part of the Government. We are aware how the Government found it hopeless to wean away the best men among the Hindus to their side and make them accept the reforms. They saw that their only hope lay in pandering to the worst instincts of other communities, and this legislation is one other instance of that. For some time, Sir, I regret to observe, some of our leaders took to that policy of the Government, imitated that policy of the Government, which resulted in such regrettable things as pacts, etc., in Bengal and elsewhere. I beg to submit that two wrongs do not make a right and that things which have no righteousness and honesty behind them will never succeed. That was the reason for the failure of many of our political agitations. I hope the same fate will await the Government so long as they pursue the policy of setting one community against another. I believe, and thoroughly believe, that this agitation against the Rangila Rasul case was wholly artificial. It was got up by certain individuals (Mr. Abdul Haye : " Question "), for their own interest. I also believe that this Government know this, and they have brought forward this legislation to pursue that favourite wife policy. My reasons for charging the Government with this policy behind it are these. There have been woeful tales of murders of Hindus and leaders of the Arya Samaj. The Government have a ready weapon in their hands to deport gentlemen like Mr. S. C. Mitra and men of his type, but they did not move to put an end to murderous conspiracies by deporting men connected with conspiracies against the lives of Hindu leaders. The Arya Samajists were ready with evidence of conspiracy behind these murders, and the Government did not move an inch although they had that handy weapon, Regulation III. All these things go to show that the Government were pursuing the favourite wife policy and I charge the Government with a deplorable lack of statesmanship.

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum : Go to the frontier and you will see which is the favourite wife policy.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : I am not going to hear you. I heard just now from you of the springing up of a new religion in India. I do not know many centuries ago the ancestors of my Honourable friend, who characterised the religion of the Arya Samajists as a new religion, came here, but the Aryans came here, according to Lokamanya Tilak and other scholars, from their " Aretic Home ", some 5,000 years ago. (Laughter.) There is nothing to be laughed at. It shows a deplorable want of knowledge of history. (Some Honourable Members : " Go on ".) The members of the Arya Samaj have been called the followers of a new religion. I challenge any one in this House to prove that the Arya Samajists are the followers of a religion which has come into existence only recently and not 5,000 years ago. They are the followers of our ancient Vedas and other scriptures during the compilation of which there was no other religion in this world. To characterise that religion in the way it has been done, is certainly provocative, and had it not been directed against a very peaceful community, namely, the Hindus, I think there would have been more agitation that there has been in this particular case.

Sir, I would like to submit one or two points as to why I oppose the Bill being taken into consideration at all. I am clearly of opinion that the existing law is adequate to deter people from scurrilous attacks upon religion or vulgar calumnies upon sacred characters. The outstanding feature of the psychological hesitancy that is apparent on the face of the Report of the Select Committee and the amendments proposed and adopted, leads to the only inference that every member of the Select Committee was attempting how best to make an egregious measure acceptable to the public. The result has been a texture of maudlin spider's web, in which the warp of intolerance has been crossed by the woof of fatuous reasoning. I think it is insulting to the intelligence and dignity of a Legislature, to go out of its way for protecting religious beliefs and feelings which may be deliberately, maliciously and intentionally outraged. Paragraph after paragraph has been incorporated in the Report of the Select Committee to fence round the object of legislation, but the final emergence has been an evanescent fantasy, which the whole range of psycho-physicists including the Superintendents of Mental Hospitals of Ranchi and elsewhere will find it difficult to touch. But, as everywhere else, the initiative has been left in the repository of all powers in India, to avoid " factitious or vindictive proceedings ". This provision means that the Government will judge for themselves the religious belief of a particular class who may have to apply for initiation of proceedings under the present legislation. Sir, I, as a Bengali Hindu, cannot support this delegation of functions of our own conscience, which is after all the bedrock of religious feelings and beliefs. Nor am I willing that our Hindu feelings and beliefs should be discussed by Magistrates and Judges in the atmosphere of litigation and outwitting, and in the factories of affidavits and statements. I have not forgotten that one of the modern prophets of up to date Philistinism, Miss Catherine Mayo, has wired across the seas that there are plenty of saints among the medical missionaries and civil servants in this country. But I am still unwilling as a Hindu to substitute them, even in our mental horizon in the place of Rishis and other authorities of our religious hierarchy. So far as I am aware of the views of my own people, I must characterise this piece of legislation as an impudent trespass, and I feel it my duty to speak out that Bengali Hindus do not need any protection of the kind. For nearly a century the Hindus have passed through the grossest abuse and vituperative attacks on their sacred beliefs and convictions by Christian missionaries and communal fanatics. Kali, the mother, Sri Krishna, the soul of India, have been their targets of attack. The Hindu community has survived all that and will survive till the eternity of time, all such ebullitions of prattling ignorance and aggressive bigotry. Our faith has remained unshaken in spite of the effervescence of the boiling pot of India, where it is laid down in our Shastras that all these trials and ordeals will bring out in brighter relief the immutable and eternal gold, the faith of Aryavarta. It needs no utilitarian and opportunistic class baiting of the Legislature to protect itself. The Honourable Mr. Crerar has let the cat out of the bag, by agreeing with Mr. Jinnah, that the offence contemplated should be non-bailable. Surely, the yielding to clamour cannot be complete without this, and I shall not be surprised if this is carried. Sir, I shall be failing in my duty as a member of the premier community of India if I do not bring before you the lessons of an episode of Sri Krishna. When he was dancing on the hood of Kalya, the serpent king was vomitting poison on the feet of the boy-god. Sri Krishna asked him why he was spitting poison. The serpent king replied "My Lord, you have created me with poison in my mouth ; do you think I shall emit anything better." Brothers and sisters who inhabit India to-day ought to learn that the rancour, hatred, spite, venom that are surging in the thought current of India to-day are the only offerings we are making to the God of India. Think of God as the lover and solace, as the protector and preserver, as the fountain head of all that is good, noble and peaceful, raise the level of culture, education, good will and trust. Then and then only you will not feel outraged either with Chauvinism of a foreign people or the intolerance of your own people. You will not then have to requisition the powers of initiative of self-appointed and self-anointed peace makers to defend your faith. I cannot conceive of a greater depth of degradation for Indians than this, and I trust and hope that this House will not succumb to the unscrupulous forces around us but will stubbornly rise against a measure which is calculated to foment disunion amongst Indians for the benefit of the foreigners and is subversive of the liberty of speech and the Press. With these observations, Sir, I beg to oppose the consideration of this Bill.

Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : I do congratulate the Select Committee on limiting the scope of the Bill, but I feel the Bill, as it stands, is still more capable of mischief than of protection. I would have liked the Bill limited in its scope to the protection of the founders of religion only from scurrilous attacks and would not have indulged in importing into it certain undefined terms which are imported into these sections. Sir, personally, as I said in the beginning, when the principle of the Bill was being discussed, I do not want any enactment like the present measure. I feel that enactments like this, instead of stopping fanaticism will encourage fanaticism. I do not know why this demand has come from Muhammadans. I would simply say to my Muhammadan friends that my Prophet is a historical personage ; he has got a living history behind him. Do I require to protect my Prophet through a Legislature like that of India ? My friends say that certain people do write things which injure our feelings. But if a man chooses to go to hell to find out certain defects in Islam, let him go to hell. Why should I get enraged ? If anybody calls my Rasul rangila, I would say that he is a personage who transformed a race, ferocious, barbarous and vicious, into the conquerors of the world in 23 years. Well, if Rasuls like that are rangila, I would pray God to bless every community with Rangilas like that. I am really surprised that my co-religionists are so very excited over the affair. I come here in the capacity of a representative. Unfortunately, four cities out of seven who have returned me have passed resolutions in favour of the enactment. Therefore, although personally I am against this enactment, I cannot oppose it. My friend Mr. Farookhi thinks that there are certain loopholes in the existing law and in order to fill those loopholes he says we require this law. Let me assure my learned friend that there will always be as many loopholes as there are members of my honourable profession. (Laughter.) If you cover one loophole, ten more will be created. We live by creating loopholes. So by this enactment you will neither protect our Prophet nor will you cover the loopholes ; the probability is that you will create more loopholes. As regards the complaints about certain dramas and things like that, I laugh at them. The writer of the play " Roshanara " does not know that Aurangzeb had no daughter of that name. If people pervert historical facts, let them do it. It does not harm me. History is history, let them learn and realize that wrong facts lead to absurdity. But if you will insist upon their stopping such dramas, the dramas will become more popular and excite the curiosity of the people to see it. Man after all likes sensation. I therefore submit that it is the biggest folly to attempt to protect by legislation religious personages or religions. These acts are done by fanatics. But a fanatic, when he does a thing like that, thinks that by insulting, killing or doing some other things like that, he will go straight to Heaven. What does he care for legislation ? (An Honourable Member : " He thinks he will go to Heaven ".) So, as a matter of fact, by this kind of legislation you cannot prevent fanatics from doing such things ; while sane men will never commit acts like that even when there is no legislation. (Mr. K. Ahmed : " Send him to jail, and he will not do a thing like that.") And thus this whole piece of legislation is rather futile.

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum : A good sermon from the pulpit ! (Laughter.)

Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : Well, I am not in the habit of delivering sermons, I have been all through listening to the sermons, I am presenting only a common sense view before the Honourable gentleman over there. Can you stop a mad man from displaying his madness ? Just consider your own fanaticism, look how we are being led to it. There is a member of a community who abused a religion, and a judge delivered a judgment. The members of a particular community are abusing the judge. Why should you abuse him ? He may have committed an honest mistake. There is the other community, more cultured, more literate, which is making a hero of that judge. Are these mentalities to be encouraged ? I deplore these tendencies ; whether it may be on the part of my own co-religionists to abuse a particular judge, or whether it may be the sister community to make a hero of him. (Laughter.)

Sir, I have one more remark to make about co-operation ; all of us should take a lesson from it. We have to co-operate with the Government when religious and communal fanaticism are rampant, it is the curse of our country and a stronghold of co-operation ; I should not congratulate myself on co-operating with the Government when I have to protect my religion. Do I need co-operation with the Government to protect my Prophet from the attacks of certain fanatics when I believe that my Prophet is protected already by divine laws and history from scurrilous attacks of all kinds ? Neither does the great religion of Islam require any protection whether it be obtained by means of co-operation or non-co-operation.

Mr. K. Ahmed : But you have taken up practice again, haven't you ? After coming out of the jail, you are co-operating with the Government now. (Loud Laughter.)

Mr. T. A. K. Shervani : That is beside the point. Sir, as regards the mode and manner of the speech of the Honourable gentleman who spoke, just before me I would like to say one word. I would rather use his own words that " two wrongs do not make one right ", and therefore I must leave his speech out of consideration. (An Honourable Member : " Is he also a fanatic ? ") Sir, as regards the delaying of the measure, I would submit that the sooner this business is finished, the better. It has already done a lot of mischief, and we should not relish the mischief any longer ; so we should finish it as soon as possible. Sir, with these ideas of mine I support the measure.

The Assembly then adjourned for Lunch till Twenty-Five Minutes to Three of the Clock.

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Twenty-Five Minutes to Three of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

Mr. W. T. M. Wright (Secretary : Legislative Department) : Sir, I move that the question be now put.

Mr. President : Is it the general desire of the House that the Chair should accept closure ?

Mr. S. Srinivasa Iyengar (Madras City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : Sir, I want to say a few words, having regard to the fact that some members of the Party have spoken differently.

Mr. President : Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan.

Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan : Sir, I thank you very much for giving me this opportunity to say a few words in connection with this question which is now before the House for consideration. There seems to be a lot of confusion of thought so far as the object of this Bill, which we are discussing to-day, is concerned. It has been remarked by some of the speakers that this Bill is desired by Mussalmans more than by anybody else Some people have gone to such an extent as to say that the object of Government in bringing forward this Bill is to show a sort of favouritism to the Muslim community. I do not agree with those remarks. I think this Bill, whether it is good or bad, affects both communities equally. Besides, it is absolutely wrong to say that the demand for such legislation came from Muslim quarters. On the other hand, it is the Punjab High Court which probably recommended to the Government to bring forward such a measure. The Honourable Judge, who tried the Rajpal case said that, although he was convinced that the book was worded in very uncivilised language and the author of that book deserved to be punished, as the law stood he could not punish him under section 153A. He strongly recommended that the law should be amended so that all such cases may be covered by the law, and I think it was chiefly on the recommendation of the Judge, and the flaw in the law pointed out by him, that the Government found it necessary to bring forward this measure.

There also seems to be some misunderstanding regarding the Vartman case and the Rajpal case. If the Judges who tried the Vartman case had definitely said in their judgment that by convicting the author, publisher and writer of the pamphlet Vartman, they overruled the judgment which was delivered by the Judge in the Rajpal case, I think we might have felt that it was not so necessary to have this measure. Although I know that while delivering that judgment in the Vartman case the learned Judges considered some of the reasons which led the Judge who tried the Rajpal case to acquit the accused and they did not agree with some of the remarks of the Judge, still, I think it is wrong to say that both the cases were absolutely similar. In the Vartman case the prosecution has definitely proved and established that the author of Vartman had the definite object of creating hatred between different classes of His Majesty's subjects or at least Muhammadans had the genuine feeling of hatred not against the author of this pamphlet alone but against the Hindu community as a whole. I do not know whether the prosecution had succeeded in establishing this fact in the Rangila Rasul case. Therefore it is wrong to say that the judgment in the Rangila Rasul case has been overruled by the Vartman case, and therefore this law is not necessary. I take exception to another remark which was made by Mr. Amar Nath Dutt who said that this agitation about the Rajpal case was artificial. I say it is entirely wrong. The agitation was genuine and all the Muhammadans all over India very keenly felt that a man who had insulted the Prophet in such a scurrilous language had been acquitted. There may be some forms of this agitation to which some people may take exception. But so far as the resentment of the Muhammadans against the judgment was concerned, leaving aside the personality of the Judge who delivered that judgment, it was genuine. In other words, the Muhammadans all over India strongly resented the fact that the writer of Rajpal case was acquitted.

I only wish to say a word about my Honourable friend Mr. Shervani. I want to make it perfectly clear that the object of the Bill is not to protect the Prophet. The object of the Bill is not to protect other prophets or founders of the various religions. I entirely agree with him that however scurrilously these esteemed personalities may be attacked, still the world has got admiration for their deeds and it will not matter much so far as their reputation or personality is concerned. The object of the Bill is to stop the spreading of feeling of ill-will and enmity between the different classes of His Majesty's subjects. Under section 153A., the prosecution has to prove that the pamphlet or the writing has actually promoted enmity between the different classes of His Majesty's subjects. In some cases the prosecution may fail to prove that such writings did create feelings of enmity between the different classes of His Majesty's subjects, but the fact may still be there that enmity has been created whenever, in present circumstances, a man belonging to one community attacks the religious feelings of another community.

The chief objection to this Bill comes from those people who are interested in the Press. I am one of those persons who have got great admiration for the liberty of the Press. I am one of those persons who would like to place no restriction upon the freedom which the Press enjoys. But let us see what the object of the Press is. The chief object of the Press is to educate the masses and give them a real training for some high ideals. If the Press forget its proper duty and if it takes upon itself to be responsible for all the feelings of hatred and enmity which are now present among the different communities in India, I think the Press has got no right to expect any sympathy from us. If you ask any member of any community, if you ask any sensible man of any community, he will tell you, " God save us from the Press ". (Laughter.) Some say even the Associated Press. So far as the Press is concerned, every one of them agrees that the only thing which is now responsible for the present disgraceful state of affairs which exists in this country is the Press. It may be the vernacular Press, it may be the Lahore Press, it may be the United Provinces Press, or it may be the Nagpur Press, or it may be the Calcutta Press, but all the same, it is the Press. We want to press upon those who are interested in the Press to realise once for all that if they want to abuse their right and the liberty that is enjoyed by them, we shall always be prepared to co-operate with the Government in bringing forward any measure which would be a restriction upon the Press taking undue advantage of the liberty that it now enjoys.

The arguments which these gentleman who oppose the consideration of this Bill have advanced so far are not about the merits of the Bill which is before us, but are based on a serious suspicion that this legislation or this law may be improperly applied. I think we should keep the issues very clear on this point. I submit that every law in the Indian Penal Code can be misapplied by the executive if they choose to do so. Now, would you say that those laws which can be misapplied should be removed from the Statute-book ? I do not agree with my Honourable friend Mr. Belvi that every man may be allowed to start a prosecution under this section. It should be entirely left to the Government to see that, wherever there is a reasonable case and wherever a man has done such mischief to the interests of Indian nationalism that there is no peace possible between the two communities, the Government will start prosecutions only in grave circumstances. To leave it to private individuals is to overflood the courts which I think nobody would like.

Therefore, Sir, with these few observations I very strongly support the motion that the Bill be taken into consideration and hope that no time will be lost in putting it on the Statute-book.

An Honourable Member : I move that the question be now put.

Mr. S. Srinivasa Iyengar : Sir, some members of my party have spoken opposing this motion, as the party has given itself freedom on this question, and I have also the freedom to express my own opinion. It is I think a matter for some regret that there should be any strong opposition to this measure severely restricted as it has been in Select Committee. Is it the case that you want, is it the case that any Member of this Assembly wants that a person " with deliberate and malicious intention of outraging the religious feelings of any class " should " insult or attempt to insult the religion or the religious beliefs of that class "? I put that question nakedly, and I think there can be only one answer. You cannot say that it should be allowed.

Then the next question is this. Under the law as it at present stands without this Bill, is this an offence ? I say, Sir, that this is not an offence under the existing law specifically and substantively. What is an offence under the existing law is if you promote class hatred and fulfil the requirements of section 153-A, then you may bring a person who promotes class hatred within that section. I do not know that if you simply insult the religion or the religious beliefs of a class you can say in every case that you promote class hatred. There can be difference of opinion—I have nothing to do with recent judgments—there can be reasonable difference of opinion and it cannot be said that to insult the religion or religious beliefs of a class must necessarily promote class hatred in every case. In the one case, the gist of the offence is direct promotion of class hatred. In the case of the present Bill the gist of the offence is the deliberate and malicious intention of outraging the religious feelings of any class in insulting or attempting to insult the religion or the religious beliefs of that class. Therefore, the two offences are distinct and I do not think that this offence, which is sought to be provided for, is really an offence under the law as it stands.

Now it may be that those who were responsible for the drafting of the Penal Code thought that there was no necessity for a law of blasphemy in India, and I quite agree that it would have been an ideal state of things if we still had not that necessity. I myself prefer, like my master and the master of better men—Mahatma Gandhi—that there should be no laws at all punishing anybody and if it were possible by adopting the satyagrahic attitude to keep all people in order, that would be an ideal state of things. I have got very much sympathy with the sentiments which have been so eloquently and so feelingly expressed by my Honourable friend Mr. Shervani. But at the same time as practical men looking at the state of society as it exists, is it to be said that Hinduism and Muhammadanism are either defunct religions or are getting rapidly moribund ? I think, Sir, that both these religions are powerful religions, full of vitality yet, and however much of a rationalist one may be, I cannot imagine the time when these two religions will cease to exist or those peoples who profess them will die out. Sir, we are not valetudinarian Hindus ; we are not valetudinarian Muhammadans. I am afraid we are robust Hindus and robust Muhammadans, and therefore it is idle to say that there can be that freedom to insult the religion or the religious beliefs of a class with deliberate and malicious intention of outraging the religious feelings of that class. I do not know what the religious feelings of English society may be. I presume there too there are people who feel deeply for religion ; and the law of England does recognise blasphemy as an offence, which the Indian law does not recognise. According to the judgment of the House of Lords in Boman v. Secular Society, 1917 Appeal Cases, " blasphemous matter " means " words spoken, written or printed, whereby it is sought to bring the Christian religion into contempt by means of ribald, contumelious or scurrilous language ". The present Bill is much narrower in scope than the law of blasphemy in England. It is not merely by any scurrilous, ribald, contumelious language that the intention is presumed : you go further and you want here malicious and deliberate intention. I cannot understand how the liberty of the Press—I am using the word " liberty " advisedly—is restricted by means of this language. I yield to none in my love of the Press and in my appreciation of its liberties. But the Press has its duties also ; and when I see that it is said to be a repressive law I must, with all deference to my friend, Mr. Rangaswami Iyengar and to my friend, Mr. K. C. Roy, say that, it is not a repressive law at all in my judgment. It will certainly be a repressive law if we pass a law which will strengthen the hands of the bureaucracy or which will prevent us from fighting as much as we can fight against the Government for the purpose of getting Swaraj or freedom of Speech or Assembly. Of course I do not want any law of sedition ; I wish it were blotted out of the Penal Code. Similarly, I am against section 153A and I wish it were blotted out of the Penal Code ; but this is an enactment for the protection of the religions of India and to say, as Mr. Roy said, that this puts a premium upon intolerance and bigotry is far too strong a proposition and I could not at all appreciate the logical steps by which he arrived at that, to him, convincing conclusion. All that I can say for myself is that it is a just law which is necessary to educate people into tolerance. It is the spirit of tolerance that is sought to be created. People must be educated in their homes not to insult the religion or religious feelings of other people. The Press must also educate the people in this ; but if the Press does not educate the people in this respect, or the education by means of the Press is defective, if sometimes the Legislature has to step in for the purpose of educating the community not to go beyond a certain stage in attacking the religion or religious beliefs of a particular community, to say that this is putting a premium upon intolerance and bigotry is, I submit, not right at all. What is happening to-day is that we are really face to face with religious intolerance and fanaticism. Till quite recently, in India, tolerance of each other's religion was an accepted fact and there was no necessity for having in India this mediæval law of blasphemy which disfigures the common law of England. But unfortunately to-day communal conditions are not such as to enable us to continue to enjoy that spirit of tolerance, and I would appeal both to the Hindu Members of the Assembly and to the Muslim Members to look at this question in a calm and dispassionate spirit. I do not think the accident of the Risala Vartman or Rangila Rasul case should make us imagine that it is a Muhammadan demand we are yielding to or that this legislation is for the benefit of Muhammadans. I consider, Sir, this is as much a law for the protection of my religion, Hinduism, as it is for the protection of Muhammadanism, and a Hindu who wants Swaraj is as much bound to protect the Muhammadan religion as his own religion, and a Muhammadan who wants Swaraj must protect Hinduism from the defamers of the Hindu religion as much as he must protect his own religion. I do not consider in these matters that we should say that simply because we differ in our religious beliefs we have not got the mutual duty of seeing that the religion of each community is respected and is not insulted beyond limits. I do not think, as the Bill is worded, that any fair criticism or even any vehement and unfair criticism or even criticism couched in insulting language, would come within it whether the language is used by a social reformer or merely by a critic opponent of the religion concerned or a sceptic. Even if the language of contempt is employed, it may not bring him by itself within the clutches of this measure if it becomes law though it may in some cases be some evidence of malice. What will bring him within the clutches of this Bill is only speeches and writings with deliberate and malicious intention to outrage feelings ; that is to say, if he seeks to outrage the religious feelings of a particular class, and insults the religion or religious beliefs of that class. I submit, therefore, Sir, that the Bill contains sufficient safeguards, to protect the liberty of the Press or the liberty of the individual critic, historian or reformer in the amplest manner possible. Before coming into the House just now, Sir, I saw the decision in the case Chakravarty vs. Emperor in the Calcutta High Court under section 153-A, where the explanation of the word " malicious " is given. We have got that decision of the Calcutta High Court which says that the republication of inflammatory matter intended to promote communal or class hatred will not by itself make the publisher or printer of a newspaper liable. I cannot imagine how the newspapers are going to be penalised by this legislation by mere innocent publication or republication. If an editorial is written in a journal with the deliberate and malicious object of outraging the religious feelings of a particular class, undoubtedly that newspaper will become amenable to the pains and penalties imposed by the Bill, and I do not suppose any editor or proprietor of a newspaper will say that that should not be the case. Therefore, Sir, I consider that this is a very just piece of legislation.

My friend Mr. K. C. Roy said that he was surprised that I should support a Bill of this description, and he thought that it was in terms of the Unity Conference I was thinking when I, the other day, supported this measure. Well, Sir, if that was so, I think I was justified in it, and I take it as a compliment, and I only wish that all of us proceeded to enact legislation in that spirit. I think that is the spirit that should pervade this Assembly. But there is no question of weakness ; there is no question of surrender of Hindu rights or Muslim rights ; nor is there any question of partiality to one community or the other. If you find that the administration of this legislation by this Government to be such as unduly to protect one community more than another, there is certainly this Assembly, and there will be plenty of other opportunities when you can agitate on that matter and see that the Government and the administrators and those who sanction prosecutions are compelled to remain impartial. But simply because the administration of the law may be bad in particular areas or in particular hands, that is no reason why we should not seek to protect each other's religion. I am not here to protect or strengthen the Government to any extent. I am not here to add to the law of sedition or to section 153-A or to the armoury of repressive laws. I am here to protect the Hindu religion from the grievous onslaughts that may be made by malicious persons ; I am here to protect the Muhammadan religion from the grievous onslaughts that may be made by malicious people. I am here for the protection of these two great religions and these two great communities and for the purpose of promoting peace and goodwill between these two communities. It was only for these reasons that I was a party to the Report of the Select Committee, and I heartily support the motion that the Bill be taken into consideration.

(Several Honourable Members moved that the question be put.)

Mr. President : The question is that the puestion be now put.

The motion was adopted.

Mr. President : The original question was :

" That the Bill further to amend the Indian Penal Code and the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, for a certain purpose, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration."

Since which the following amendment has been moved

" That the Bill, as reported by the Select Committe, be circulated for the purpose of eliciting opinions thereon by the 15th January, 1928."

The question I have to put is that that amendment be made.

The motion was negatived.

Mr. President : The question is :

" That the Bill further to amend the Indian Penal Code and the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, for a certain purpose, as reported by the Select Committee, be taken into consideration."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. President : The question is :

" That clause 2 do stand part of the Bill."

Pandit Nilakantha Das (Orissa Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, I beg to move :

" That in clause 2 of the Bill for the words ' religious feelings ' the word ' feelings ' be substituted and consequential changes be made in the other clauses of the Bill."

The section says :

" Whoever, with deliberate and malicious intention of outraging the religious feelings of any class of His Majesty's subjects, by words, either spoken or written, or by visible representations, insults or attempts to insult the religion or the religious beliefs of that class."

When we are here clearly stating " religion or religious beliefs " which will be insulted there is no meaning in saying, I think, that " religious feelings " also are outraged. There is no need of putting the word religious " before " feelings ". It is perhaps enough if feelings only are outraged by the insult of religion or religious beliefs. Moreover you cannot characterise the feeling outraged as religious, for no religion contemplates want of peace and ruffled feeling on any account. The feeling thus outraged is, I may say so, rather irreligious. Therefore, this is not simply superfluous or redundant. But it means nothing but blasphemy to religion and here serves no useful purpose. It may also give a handle to my lawyer friends in court to make a distinction whether religious feeling was outraged or any other feeling was outraged and this frustrates the safeguard contemplated in the Bill. Therefore this being only something like a formal amendment, correcting probably a mistake of the draftsman, I move it and hope that the Mover of the Bill will accept it.

The motion was negatived.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Sir, I move :

" That in clause 2, for the words ' any class of His Majesty's subjects ' the words ' Muhammadan subjects of His Majesty ' be substituted."

Sir, after the vote which has befallen my friend, I do not know what will be the fate of this amendment, but still I deem it my duty to move the amendment standing in my name which I have just read out.

The majority verdict of this House has been that the words " religious feelings " should be there, but I want to have the following words substituted, namely, instead of the word " any class of His Majesty's subjects " I want to have the words " Muhammadan subjects of His Majesty ". And my reasons are these. No other class has demanded a legislation like this and we in this House find that our Muhammadan brethren are very keen about it, and out of deference to their opinion I think we should yield to their desire by having this legislation. Therefore, Sir, I beg to submit that in clause 2 a change like this should be made, namely, for the words " any class of His Majesty's subjects " the words Muhammadan subjects of His Majesty " should be substituted.

The motion was negatived.

Mr. C. Duraiswamy Aiyangar (Madras ceded districts and Chittoor : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I move :

" That in clause 2 after the words ' spoken or written ' insert the words ' or by acts '."

Sir, I find that in this debate which has taken place for a long time, many Members have been complaining that there are many loopholes in this Bill, and if this is one of the loopholes, I wish that it should be rectified now by the insertion of the words " or acts ". Sir, it is possible for a man deliberately and maliciously to insult or wound the religious feelings of any other community not only by words spoken or written, or by words published in newspapers or by visible representations, but also by some acts which will not involve either words or representations. For instance, Sir, a religious procession of the Hindus is taking place. Supposing some Muhammadan brother—probably I should not call him a brother if he is engaged in such an act of insult—supposing some Muhammadan comes in and wants to kill a cow in the midst of that procession. It is neither a word nor a representation nor a visible sign, but yet an act which may wound the religious feelings of the Hindu community.

Mr. K. Ahmed : There is another section for that in the Indian Penal Code.

* Speech not corrected by the Honourable Member.

Mr. C. Duraiswamy Aiyangar : Similarly, when a Muhammadan procession is taking place during the Mohurrum, supposing some Hindus deliberately go there in order to have their own music and their own religious prayers mingled with those of the Muhammadans, that will wound the religious feelings of our Muhammadan brethren. Therefore, I think it is absolutely necessary that we must have these words also added to clause 2, because that is also a manner in which some fanatics may deliberately and maliciously wound the religious feelings of another community. Of course we have got a journalistic doctrine enunciated in the Select Committee—I call it a journalistic doctrine because journalists have combined to establish a new doctrine—that the moment an offence is provided against in an Act, such offences will become more numerous. This is the first time I have heard that doctrine. I never heard of it before—if murder is provided against, murders will become more numerous, if dacoity is provided against, dacoities will become more numerous. But as these journalists have been telling us that these offences will become more numerous, for my part I wish to provide against the contingency of religious feelings being wounded not only by words and representations but also by acts. This is my reason for suggesting that this amendment should be made.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Sir, I must oppose this amendment. It will be apparent to the House that this amendment would entail a very large and dangerous extension of the Act. During the course of the discussion, as is apparent from the Report of the Select Committee, much of our attention was devoted to making the Act so restricted as not to include cases which by common consent ought not to come within its ambit, at the same time leaving it operative for the strictly limited purpose in view. The Honourable Member's amendment would open the door to consequences which none of us who supported this Bill would ever think of dealing with. Many of the cases which the Honourable Member has in mind would probably be covered by the specific provisions of some of the sections of Chapter XV and other sections of the Code which deal with specific acts. I oppose the amendment.

(Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar rose in his seat.)

Mr. President : What the Honourable Member from Madras wishes to say has already been stated by Mr. Crerar.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : I only want to say a word because the Press has been mentioned.

Mr. President : The Press has lost.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : The Press will never lose its case. The only point that I wished to bring out was that the matter mentioned by my Honourable friend, Mr. Duraiswamy Aiyangar, is already covered by sections 295 and 298 of the Indian Penal Code.

Mr. C. Duraiswamy Aiyangar : It is not provided for.

Mr. A. Ragaswami Iyengar : Section 298 runs as follows

" Whoever, with deliberate intention of wounding the religious feelings of any person, utters any word or makes any sound in the hearing of that person or makes any gesture in the sight of that person, or places any object in the sight of that person, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both."

Mr. President : The Honourable the Home Member had taken this very point.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : My Honourable friend contended that it is necessary to extend the scope of this section to further offences than was contemplated by the Select Committee, on the ground that he does not agree with the view embodied in the minute of the press men on the Select Committee, that because you constitute new offences, that would, by itself, be a means of encouraging the commission of these offences. I only wish in support of this to cite the opinion of a very high authority—that of Lord Haldane when he was Lord Chancellor. He said :

"Public opinion is very important in this connection. You may make as many laws as you like, but unless public opinion backs you up you will not succeed —nay, more, you will make things worse, because you convert what was possibly a very flagitious act into something of quite a different character, because of the restriction on liberty which you seek to impose."

Mr. President : That has nothing to do with the present motion.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : It has a good deal to do with what my friend said.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : The cat is now let out of the bag. As I have remarked previously, it is only to pander to a certain community and not with a desire to promote nationalism that this Bill has been introduced by the Government. You see, Sir, as soon as my Honourable friend, Mr. Duraiswamy Aiyangar, wants to give the Hindus some protection, the Honourable the Home Member rises at once and says "No". It was not meant for that, and it is the favourate wife policy. I was surprised that a shrewd lawyer like my Honourable friend, Mr. Rangaswami Iyengar, should quote the authority of Lord Haldane in support of the Honourable the Home Member. Sir, on this matter we are so much divided in this House that we have very little hope of succeeding. Still, I hope that the good sense of the Hindu Members in this House will prevail and that Mr. Duraiswamy Aiyangar's amendment will be accepted.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : To extend the law ?

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Yes.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That in clause 2, after the words 'spoken or written' the words 'or by acts' be inserted."

Mr. D. V. Belvi : Sir, the amendment which stands in my name runs as follows :

"That in clause 2 of the Bill after the word 'written' the words 'or by signs' be inserted."

I do not think this amendment stands in need of a long speech. If you refer to the Bill as originally presented to this House, you will find that there was this expression " or by signs " in it. That is one reason in support of my amendment. The second reason is that we find the same expression in section 499 of the Indian Penal Code. That is the section which deals with the offence of defamation. And just as it is possible to defame a man by signs, so it is equally possible to commit by signs the offence for which we are now providing. I shall give you two illustrations. Before I do so, I may say that I am not well acquainted with the conditions in Northern India, but I know well the conditions in Southern India and my illustrations should be taken as applicable to the conditions prevalent in Southern India only. Now, suppose there is a Ganpati procession in a big city like Poona. Fortunately for me the District Magistrate of Poona is present in this House and he will bear me out when I give you this illustration. (An Honourable Member : "Who is he ?") He is Mr. Haigh, the Chief Whip of the Government Party. Now suppose there is a big procession going along a public road with or without music. Suppose a mischievous man of some other religion comes and makes signs. You know that Ganpati is a god who has a big round belly and you know that he has also the trunk of an elephant. Now to insult the Hindus the mischievous man of another religion comes and makes signs like this. (The Honourable Member held his hands in front of him to denote a big belly, and curled his hand in front of his nose to represent a trunk.) (Laughter). That is quite enough to upset the Hindus in the procession who will at once jump to the conclusion that their god has been insulted. Take another instance applicable to a Muhammadan procession. We know that in Southern India the Tajias—I do not know what they are called in this part of the country—are immersed in water. A good many Muslims follow these Tajias. I believe they have some religious ceremony to perform when they go to a tank or to a river, for immersing their Tajias, and when they come back, it is their custom, at least in Southern India, to come back as if they are mourning, as if they are crying. Suppose some mischievous man who does not belong to the Mussalman faith comes in front of the people who are returning, and he wants to ridicule them by doing this (the Honourable Member illustrated the gesture) and saying " Oong, oong ". (Loud laughter.)

[Mr. D. V. Belvi.]

Mr. President : Order, order. The Honourable Member must use language which the reporters can understand or follow.

Mr. D. V. Belvi : If they cannot follow me, it is not my fault. I am pointing out to the House the manner in which the Muhammadans may feel insulted and I may say that they would be justified in feeling so, and that might lead to rioting and perhaps to assaults. So such contingencies should be provided for. They were rightly provided for in the original Bill, but I do not know what happened in the Select Committee where all at once this expression " or by signs " was taken out. I submit to the House on these grounds that the expression " or by signs " should be inserted now in the proposed new section.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Sir, I oppose the amendment. I submit that on general grounds it is open to the same objections on which the previous amendment was rejected by the House, and I may further point out that precisely the kind of offences which the Honourable Member has instanced are specifically covered by section 296, which relates to voluntarily causing disturbance to any assembly engaged in religious ceremonies, or, in the alternative, by section 298 which also deals specifically with this class of offence.

The motion was negatived.

Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar (Madras and Ramnad cum Tinnevelly : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I move :

"That in clause 2 of the Bill, the words ' or by visible representations ' be omitted."

The House may be aware that the words "by signs or by visible representations or otherwise" did occur in the original Bill, but the words "or by signs" and "or otherwise" were scored out by the Select Committee, and that this one phrase was retained. My reason for moving this amendment is this. The reasons given by the Select Committee for deleting the words "or by signs" and "or otherwise" are these :

"We have limited the scope of the original section by the omission of the words "or by signs" and the words "or otherwise". Indeed, we find difficulty in imagining causes to which the latter words would be applicable, and we think the words "or by signs" are not necessary for the purpose of the particular class of offences with which it is intended to deal."

I do not follow the reasoning of the Select Committee in retaining the phrase " or by visible representations ". If this is the reasoning which appealed to them to delete the other two phrases " or by signs " and " or otherwise ", then I submit " or by visible representations " must also have been omitted. Further, section 298 of the Indian Penal Code does cover such a case. Section 298 runs thus :

"Whoever, with deliberate intention of wounding the religious feelings of any person, utters any word or makes any sound in the hearing of that person any gesture in the sight of that person or places any object in the sight of that person shall be punished....".

Therefore, I submit that this phrase in section 298 covers such a case. I appeal to the Home Member to read section 298 and see if such a case does not come under that section. If that is so, then I would ask him to accept my amendment. The third reason I would urge is this. With the phrase " visible representation " it is possible to fabricate a large number of cases ; at least that would make the door wide for fabrication. For these reasons, Sir, I commend my amendment.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Sir, I think I have explained to the satisfaction of the House why the Select Committee decided to retain those words. I should point out in the first instance that the section quoted by the Honourable Member, 298, is not really in point. It refers only to the placing of bodies, etc., in the sight of any particular person. What the Select Committee had in mind was offensive cartoons or the like which might appear in letterpress and point to or make clear an offence of a malicious and deliberate intention. That is the reason for retaining these words, and I think the House will agree that they should be retained.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That in clause 2 of the Bill, the words ' or by visible representations ' be omitted."

The motion was negatived.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava (Ambala Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, I move :

" That in clause 2, for the words ' insults or attempts to insult ' the words ' scurrilously attacks in offensive and improper language or by offensive and improper visible representation or attempts to scurrilously attack in offensive and improper language or by offensive and improper visible representation ' be substituted."

In moving this amendment, Sir, I would respectfully beg the House to consider and to be clear in their minds as to what the scope of the clause in the Bill is. Unless and until you are quite clear about the limitations and the safeguards which ought to be provided in this Bill, you will not be able to appreciate the exact significance of the words that appear in the Bill. The Bill penalises insults which are actuated by a deliberate and malicious intention. In the first place, before coming to the actual wording of the clause, I would submit two observations for the consideration of the House, so that it may be clear to the House why I have sought to make this amendment. That this amendment really limits the scope of the Bill and seeks to make a very necessary change, there can be no doubt. At present in the Bill you will find that the word " insult " is used. Now, Sir, this word " insult " has been used in some places in the Penal Code. But this word has not been defined so far by the Legislature. The question arises what is the exact significance of the word " insult ". My humble submission is that the word is too vague. It is illusory and it has not special significance in law. My submission is that insult is always a temperamental affair. What would be regarded as an insult by a particular man may not be regarded as an insult by a more calm and dispassionate man. Moreover this word " insult " is objectionable from another standpoint, namely, that insult has greater regard to the result of the act rather than to the act itself. It does not rivet the attention of the judge to the fact of the person. It rather has reference in a greater measure than is necessary to the consequences which flow from such act.

Mr. K. Ahmed : That would be for the assessors and jurors to decide.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : I shall come to that also. My friend is suggesting that this offence is triable by a Sessions Court where there will be assessors. It makes it all the more obligatory upon us to see that the words used are quite specific and have the significance that we want to attach to them. Since assessors also will be the persons who will judge the meaning of this expression, it is all the more necessary that the expression should have that meaning which we desire to convey. Now, Sir, it has been pointed out in the course of the discussion that the words " deliberate " and " malicious " provide necessary safeguards and therefore there is no necessity for substituting these words. To start with, let me clear the ground by submitting before you that the word " deliberate ", if it only indicates premeditation, cannot be a great safeguard so far as this Bill is concerned. So far as the question of malice is concerned, " malice " also is nowhere defined in the Penal Code. I know the word " malice " is used in section 153-A. Even there we do not get good help from the authorities. After all, the word " malice " is taken from the civil law and in its soft connotation the word " malice " may imply only an improper motive. Supposing that is the accepted connotation of the word " malice ", may I enquire if an act outraging the feelings of any community will not be malicious by itself ? I contend that this argument that an act calculated to outrage the feelings of a community is malicious by itself will be advanced by many lawyers and will be accepted by the judges so that the words " deliberate " and " malicious " do not provide in my humble opinion those safeguards which are necessary to be provided in the Act. Then, the question arises as to how that intent is to be judged. Sir Hari Singh Gour pointed out, on the previous day of the discussion of this Bill, that if it is taken that a man is presumed to know the natural consequences of his act, it will be rather difficult, it will be a point of nicety whether that very act to which a deliberate and malicious intention is sought to be attributed will not itself damn the accused. My humble submission is that the word " insult " does not connote the specific meaning which we seek to convey and import into the operation part of the clause. The words " deliberate and malicious " also convey a very soft connotation and meaning and it is absolutely necessary that we should make our meaning very clear in the Bill. Now, Sir, as you know, the language used in any document and the exact words used therein are the materials on which a judge comes to the conclusion whether a person was animated by this or that intention. I do not at the same time eliminate from my consideration that in many cases it happens that the judge may come to the conclusion that a certain person is actuated by malicious intention in spite of the fact that plain language was used. Nevertheless it would not be fair to assume that words spoken or written will not be the main guide for a judge to come to the conclusion whether these words import the intention which is covered by this Bill. My humble submission is that if that is so, then it is absolutely necessary that we should make it absolutely clear that it will be improper and offensive language of a particular speech or writing which will be the test whether that intention was expressed in that way or not. I have used the words " scurrilous attack " and want that to be substituted for the word " insult ". Now " scurrilous attack " is an act which everybody will agree must be penalised. As I have already submitted, the word " insult " will denote different meanings to different people, but the words " scurrilous attack " can only have one meaning. Moreover, the word " attack " by itself denotes that there is a disposition to injure in the mind of the accused and, unless the prosecution established mens rea, the present principles of the criminal law declare that a person not possessing mens rea is not guilty. So that my humble submission is that if this clause is passed in its present shape, there is a likelihood that such persons who have more zeal than discretion will come into the meshes of the law and this Bill may prove very injurious so far as certain public interests are concerned.

Sir, as regards limitations and safeguards, I will request you to consider that, so far as religion and religious views are concerned, it is not, as one Honourable Member said, a Moslem measure only, it is an all-India measure ; and it will happen that different interests will come into conflict. There are social reformers among Hindus who would like to criticise their own religion with the best of motives. There are Muhammadan reformers who would like to criticise their own religion in the same way with the best of motives. The question therefore is not that we should look at it from that standpoint from which a Hindu would look at a Muhammadan measure or that standpoint from which a Muhammadan would look at a Hindu measure. My humble submission is that we should all look at it from the standpoint of Indians and looking at the measure from that standpoint, let me be quite clear before you when I say that, as long as there are so many religions in India which compete for supremacy and reformers are allowed to have their way in the way in which we now see them going on, all the prophets, seers and rishis are bound to be criticised very freely. And they ought to be criticised very freely. I am against religious attacks as a rule, but if an attack is honest though scurrilous and is only designed to make a deep cut into a certain fungus growth which has been hardened by usage or by custom, I think I for one would stand for such a cut being made.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Why don't you give your verdict then ?

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : I am not a judge unfortunately !

Mr. K. Ahmed : An assessor ?

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : I am not an assessor either. There is a section in the Criminal Procedure Code by virtue of which a lawyer cannot be an assessor.

Sir, judging from the history of fanaticism I sometimes doubt if religion did not take its birth to make people irreligious ! In the name of religion, Sir, such sufferings, executions and assassinations have taken place !

Mr. President : Order, order. The Honourable Member is going on as if he were speaking on the motion that the Bill be taken into consideration. He must restrict himself to the amendment now before the House.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : My humble submission is that, so far as the question of the substitution of these words is concerned, they have got a specific meaning and that is, that the scope of the Bill should not be enlarged beyond its proper due. In making this submission that the scope should not be enlarged, I am bound to submit why it should not be enlarged, and therefore, when I speak of religion in that strain, it is in no mood of blaspheming any religion. My submission before the House is that so far as religion is concerned it needs democratisation. There are, I submit, religious strongholds. There is such a thing as religious vested rights and those rights must be pulled down by rationalism.

The second thing I want to submit before you is that the scope of this law should be rather hedged down to a very narrow compass, the reason being this. This present situation which has necessitated this measure is not the result of the acts of the common multitude. The present situation has resulted from the acts of the Government.....

Mr. President : I very much regret to interrupt the Honourable Member again, but he is making general observations on the Bill itself instead of confining himself to the amendment which he has moved. I quite realise his difficulty. He had prepared a speech for the consideration stage of the Bill which he was unable to deliver. But that is no reason why he should take this opportunity of delivering himself !

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : I must admit, Sir, that the observations you have been pleased to make are perfectly correct and that I really wished to speak on the main motion also, and it is my misfortune that I have not been able to catch your eye. But at the same time I do not want to avail myself of this occasion to inflict a speech on the House. At the same time I am desirous, I am most solicitous to make my meaning absolutely clear to the House and that meaning is this. I do not want to read out a speech : I only want to submit that I should be allowed to make my meaning clear. I have already submitted before you how I feel in this matter and that it is in the public interests that we should see that the Bill does not catch in its meshes those who are really working for the good of the country and for the reform of religion.....

Sir Hari Singh Gour (Central Provinces Hindi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan) : That is exactly what you are trying to do.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : I was therefore submitting that these words " insults or attempts to insult " should be substituted by the words which I have submitted in my amendment, because these words which I wish to substitute are more specific in meaning and, while calculated to catch hold of the actual culprit, will leave room for those who, according to my estimate of things, should not be caught in the meshes of the law. Sir, I move the amendment.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Sir, I hope that the Honourable Member who moved this amendment will not think me in any way discourteous if I reply with very much more brevity than he has moved. There are three principal objections to his amendment and I shall make them very briefly. The possibility of including such words as " scurrilous " and so forth was carefully considered in Select Committee and was, I think, for very good and sufficient reasons discarded as impracticable. The Honourable Member suggested, I think, that the word " insult " which is used in the Bill does not already occur in the Code. As a matter of fact it occurs already in several places in the Code. That is the second point. My third point is simply this, that the language of the amendment is so cumbrous and involved that if it were added to the clause, which is already not entirely simple, it would result in an exceedingly unmanageable piece of legislation and one extremely difficult to interpret.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Sir,.....

Mr. President : I hope the Honourable Member will realise the sense of the House and not insist upon his right to speak.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Sir, the observations I have to make are very few ; but I hope the House will indulge me when I say that I oppose not only the amendment but the Bill ; and I am sure that the Honourable the Home Member will realise that it is not yet too late to reconsider his verdict. I have not the slightest doubt that the Government of India are pledged to religious autonomy. We have in this country such a thing as caste autonomy, religious autonomy, sectarian autonomy. Has the Honourable the Home Member considered the effect of his Bill upon these various religious autonomous institutions and how is he going to deal with inter-sectarian conflict and inter-caste conflicts which arise and arouse religious animosities and which give rise to deliberate and, let me add, technically malicious attacks upon rival sects ? Let me give you an example. A Brahmin has crossed the seas and comes back to this country and the caste hold a panchayat and outcaste him and also publish in their caste newspaper that this man has become a Mlechh and is not a Brahmin and, consequently, nobody should dine with him. His religious feelings are really aroused and if you read the section, as it stands, that man has a just cause for complaint. But are you going to prosecute the whole Brahmin community because they have outcasted either him or his family or a few of his friends who sympathised with him ? Take the case of the Shias, and the regular annual fights that take place between the Shias and the Sunnis. The press telegrams only a few days ago gave us a vivid description of the feuds that take place between the various sub-sections of the same caste. Let me also remind the Honourable the Home Member that when this Bill becomes law it will.....

Mr. President : The Honourable Member must confine himself to the amendment which has been moved.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Now, I am arguing, Sir, a fortiori. I am pointing out that if the Bill is bad, the amendment is worse....

Mr. President : The Honourable Member is not in order in speaking on the merits or demerits of the Bill as a whole.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Now, Sir, there is another point to which I should like to draw the attention of the House. The Honourable the author of the amendment complains of ambiguity in the phraseology of this Bill. First of all, he deals with the question of malice, and he wants to know whether the malice within the contemplation of the Bill is malice prepense or constructive malice. He wants further to know whether the meaning of the word " deliberate " is something.....

Mr President : All this is not relevant to the amendment now before the House.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Sir, I am recapitulating the arguments of the author of the amendment.....

Mr. President : That the author of the amendment was irrelevant, is no ground for the Honourable Member to be irrelevant.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Now, Sir, so far as the amendment itself is concerned it substitutes words which are more ambiguous and more capable of a wider meaning than the language used in the Bill itself. As you, Sir, would not allow me to recapitulate the arguments of the author of the amendment or to deal with him but leave me within the narrow door of this amendment, I can only say that I reserve my right, should I be so fortunate as to catch your eye, to make general observations upon the Bill at a later stage when it comes for the third reading.

Mr. President : The question is :

" That in clause 2, for the words ' insults or attempts to insult ' the words ' scurrilously attacks in offensive and improper language or by offensive and improper visible representation or attempts to scurrilously attack in offensive and improper language or by offensive and improper visible representation ' be substituted."

The motion was negatived.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : (The Honourable Member on rising was greeted with cries of " Withdraw, withdraw.") I am not going to withdraw ; I shall move my amendment.

(Cries of " Withdraw, withdraw ".)

Mr. President : Order, order.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Sir, it would have been much better if the two previous amendments had been accepted by the House, and although they have not been accepted, I still rely on the good sense of this House and beg to move the amendment that stands in my name. Seeing that much mischief has been done by the introduction of religion in this Bill, I want to do away at least with the last portion of clause 2 which deals with religion, namely, " insults or attempts to insult the religion or the religious beliefs of that class ". Instead of that I ask the House to substitute the words " the Prophet of the Muhammadans ", because, Sir, there were certain scurrilous writings against the Prophet of Islam which have wounded the religious feelings of our Muhammadan fellow subjects, and I think it is but right and proper that they should have some protection in this matter. But I do not say that protection is offered to them by the words " insults or attempts to insult the religion or the religious beliefs of that class ". Now, Sir, here no mention is made of avatars, gurus, prophets, and such like things. In fact, we want.....

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Sir, on a point of order. The amendment which my Honourable friend is moving now is altogether consequential to amendment No. 7 which he has already lost.

Mr. President : The amendment is not consequential, but the acceptance of it will make the whole clause absurd. (Cries of " Withdraw ".)

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Sir, I am not going to withdraw. It may give a certain absurdity but it will not be more absurd than the one which is in the clause itself. And this is a very unhappy specimen of legislative craftsmanship, because " insults or attempts to insult a religion " is meaningless. I do not know how a religion can be insulted. In fact, religion is above all insult, if it is really a religion at all. I am not going to discourse on religion, neither am I competent to discourse on religion, but what little I know of religions that are practised in this world by the followers of various religions is that they consider religion to be something sacred and which does not come within the purview of human legislation, but it is something divine whether it be revealed religion or inspired religion. Be that as it may, Sir, I still press my amendment and I hope the House will accept it.

The motion was negatived.

Pandit Nilakantha Das : Sir, I move :

" That in clause 2 of the Bill for the words ' the religion or religious beliefs of ' substitute the words ' any one held in religious esteem or reverence by ' and make the necessary consequential changes in the clauses and Schedule which follow."

Sir, at the outset I must confess that through oversight there have been some unfortunate mistakes in drafting this amendment. I have put " any one ", but I mean " any one, or anything, including relics, gods, and goddesses ", and I shall crave your indulgence to permit me to add those words, so that I should be definite in restricting the scope of the Bill exactly to that for which this legislation is demanded.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member has got other amendments. He can move them when the time comes. I cannot allow the Honourable Member to make any alteration in this amendment.

Mr. B. Das : Sir, I beg to move the amendment standing in my name :

"That in clause 2 for the words 'or the religious beliefs of that class' the words 'of that class, or the founder, prophet or avatar or such religion' be substituted."

Sir, I do not know where I stand and where this legislation is going to make me stand in future. There are so many saints, so many avatars, so many prophets, I want to have a limit, to know how far this is going to apply. By founder I mean Guru Nanak, Raja Ram Mohan Roy, Sree Chaitanya, etc. ; by prophet I mean, Buddha, Jesus, Mulhammad and Zoroaster ; by avatar, I mean certain avatars of the Hindu religion. I do not like this particular clause to humbug us in our ordinary daily transactions and we will be faced with sedition against many modern gurus and saints. For the edification of the House I will just quote a line describing Gurus from the Census Report of 1901, by Sir Edward Gait, who happened to be afterwards Governor of my Province. Talking about Gurus he says :

4 P.M.

"This adoration of the Guru is one of the most characteristic features of the Vaishnava revival in Bengal. The Vaishnavas say :

'When Hari—(Hari means God)—is angry, the Guru is our protector, but when the Guru is angry we have no one to protect us.' This service veneration of the Guru is called Gurupádásraya."

Sir, when I find that there are such opinions prevalent I want to protect myself so that I will not come under this Act either in this House or outside this House. Sir, as a Hindu I knew I had 33 crores of gods but looking into this particular Census Report I find that in the Hindu religion there are so many gods and godlings.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Godlings ? I object to that, Sir.

Mr. B. Das : Sir Edward Gait, in this Census Report, says that there are godlings of nature, godlings of disease, deified heroes, ghosts and evil spirits, Gramya Devatas, and Gurus and bogus Gurus whom I have mentioned already this morning. How do we stand ? How are you going to protect the public from the operation of this particular enactment ? I also find from the same Census Report that even among the Muhammadans of Bengal there are many Saints and Pirs. (An Honourable Member : "Never mind".) I will enlighten you a little.

Mr. K. Ahmed : The clause is quite explicit. Don't be under a misapprehension.

Mr. B. Das : There are many Pirs. Some of the Pirs and Saints died only 20 or 30 years ago. Some of us unwittingly might utter words that might go against any of these, that might hurt the religious feelings of the followers of any of these saints. There is a quotation given here which is very apt. I will read it to the House.

Mr. K Ahmed : That does not touch the clause of the Bill.

Mr. B. Das : It will give some sense to my Honourable friend Mr. K. Ahmed. It is :

"Barâ to Mir,
Ghâtâ to Fakir, Marâ to Pir."

which, if translated, means,

"If he grew rich, he became a chief, if poor, a beggar, and if he died, he blossomed into a saint."

Mr. K. Ahmed : There is no relevancy in it whatever.

Mr. B. Das : I cannot understand how I stand. I do not think Members of this House would be so irreligious—I will not say irreligious—would be so ungentlemanly as to offer any insult to any great religious teacher or any Prophet or Avatar. But I want the law to be so framed that it is understood by the millions of the lay public. I belong to the lay public. I might offend the Guru of somebody even in this House. There are so many bogus Gurus, as we find in Bengal, Dibrugarh and Orissa. It is so easy, Sir, to become a Guru and earn lakhs and lakhs of rupees. I know many Hindus even convicts, who have become Gurus like that. It is so easy to grow a beard like my friends Mr. Acharya or Pandit Nilakantha Das and pose as a Guru. I wish I could become a Guru and make it the chief source of my livelihood ! I say that the law should be so framed that it protects the innocent and does not suppress free thinking and rational school of thought. With these few words I commend my amendment to the acceptance of the House.

The motion was negatived.

Pandit Nilakantha Das : I beg to move :

"That in clause 2 for the words 'imprisonment of either description' substitute the words 'simple imprisonment' and make consequential changes in the Schedule."

Sir, we have widened the scope of the Bill so much that I am afraid it will mostly imprison cultured men. Religion or religious belief—this expression is very, very wide. For instance, as my Burmese friend remarked the other day, I do not know whether rationalists, agnostics, positivists and others like them can be said to have any religion in the sense in which the term "religion" is generally applied. But it is their duty to deliberately run down any religion having a God. When they deliberately do it, it will be easy, when feeling is inflamed among the masses—to find malice in that deliberate running down. (An Honourable Member : Free thinker.) Yes, I speak of free thinkers, and if you have care for such free thinkers having no God or Prophet to protect them against any outrage, then mind how under the wide net you spread under the provision of this Act you will be always sending such men to jail. They deliberately insult our so called religions, as they feel it their duty to do so, to them your God is, so to say, a creation of chicken-hearted foolishness and I am afraid that it will be very easy to explain such statements as malicious insults to religion, and those highly cultured men will be undoubtedly consigned to prison. On the other hand, I do not think the rationalists are so very wild that they should be inflamed, but if they be, and speak or write some sentences in legitimate excitement, what follows ? No lawyers, like those on the Select Committee, will even be required to prove their offence. They will have to walk simply from court to prison. I do not know whether I shall be allowed to refer here to the amendment of mine which has not been allowed, where I wanted to restrict, but unfortunately I was not allowed to make some formal correction....

Mr. President : Had the Honourable Member any hope to carry the House with him on that amendment ?

Pandit Nilakantha Das : Hope springeth eternal in the human breast. (Mr. K. Ahmed : " Not, here ".) Therefore, I think that simple imprisonment will be enough for that class of people, who on account of their culture are under this Bill liable to go to jail.

There is another class. There are fanatics, rustics, ruffians and others like them, and they are also contemplated in this Bill. I know that many of them, if they get rigorous imprisonment, will be engaged in labour from morning to evening in jail, and they will not have time to mend themselves or to think of their past offences or guilt. I should therefore like to say that in simple imprisonment you may provide for some religious instruction or religious study or some other means by which the man may be reformed. There is no need for sentencing a man to rigorous imprisonment for some utterances which he felt entitled to make on account of his culture, belief or even fanaticism. My Honourable friend Mr. Jayakar remarked very aptly the other day that fanatics should be considered so many lunatics. To prescribe rigorous punishment for them is useless.

Mr. President : I think the House is now convinced.

Pandit Nilakantha Das : I thank you for the conviction that the House has got through you. I move my amendment.

Mr. President : The question is :

" That in clause 2 for the words ' imprisonment of either description ' the words ' simple imprisonment ' be substituted and consequential changes made in the Schedule."

The motion was negatived.

Mr. T. Prakasam (East Godavari and West Godavari cum Kistna : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : I move :

" That in clause 2 of the Bill for the words ' two years ' the words ' one year ' be substituted."

Mr. K. Ahmed : Make it three years.

Mr. T. Prakasam : My friend, Mr. K. Ahmed, says, make it three years. Perhaps it would be better in his opinion if it is made 20 years penal servitude. I am anxious not to say anything in this House which would embarrass any of my Mussalman friends who are anxious to bring about Hindu-Muslim unity at this juncture. My reason for this amendment is that it is not the severity of the sentence that will deter the crime. Severity of sentence might instil fear in the minds of those who are inclined towards crime. Those who are killing themselves now in Nagpur and other places, those who are guilty of setting houses on fire, are not the men who would be deterred by a sentence of two years. Fanaticism knows no limits. They do not care for their lives. This provision is intended to prevent attacks on founders of religions. It is only men who have worked themselves into a frenzy that would indulge in the sort of attacks which the propounders of this Bill have in view. As my Honourable friend Mr. Jayakar has said, the sentence must be lenient in the case of these people who get their minds unhinged temporarily for the sake of their religion. So I submit the sentence must be reduced to one year. It will be in the wisdom of this House to make the sentence more lenient.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I regret that I have to oppose the amendment, but the particular considerations in the mind of the Honourable Member were given very careful weight to in the Select Committee, and the Committee came to the conclusion embodied in the Bill. I think the House will support that conclusion

Mr. President : The question is :

" That in clause 2 of the Bill for the words ' two years ' the words ' one year ' be substituted."

The motion was negatived.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : I move :

" That to clause 2 the following proviso be added:

' Provided that writings, speeches, visible representations or discussions for the bona fide purpose of research, comparative study, reform or revival of religion or religious beliefs shall not be deemed to be insults or attempts to insult the religion or religious beliefs of any class of His Majesty's subjects '."

In moving this amendment, Sir, I would respectfully submit that this amendment in a way provides for those safeguards which are necessary in the interests of historical research and comparative study of religion. As all research and historical study is for the benefit of society in general and for the genuine improvement of knowledge, I would submit that such an exception must necessarily be made. Avatars and prophets, as I have submitted already, are bound to be criticised by the students of the comparative study of religions and not necessarily with that intention which is penal. But, Sir, it is always a matter of doubt in cases of this kind whether a person who writes a book comes within the meshes of the law. Therefore, I think that it should be made absolutely clear that any person who makes a speech or writes a book actuated by a desire for historical research or the comparative study of religions or the revival of any religion, should be protected. As anatomical dissection qualifies the doctor for the acquisition of healing qualities, research of religion qualifies humanity for future right action. I submit, Sir, that it is often true that the original lustre of a religion is encrusted with such fungus growths that we require the scapula of the surgeon to take it away before that religion can appear in its pristine lustre and be of use to the community at large. If this provision is not made in the Bill, it may happen that many a social reformer will hesitate to work in the spirit in which they ought to work considering the enormity of the social and religious evils rampant in India.

With your permission, Sir, I would say a word about the other amendments appearing on the paper, because my amendment comes into conflict with the other amendments. So far as the other amendments are concerned, the one appearing as No. 20, Explanation 2, and the one appearing as No. 21, are practically, though in a smaller measure, just like the one I have proposed. Mine is the more comprehensive and seeks to protect those who ought to be protected by the law. As regards the amendment Number 19, the House will be pleased to observe that it involves a scrutiny of very abstruse matters and it will be difficult for any judge to come to a decision whether a particular notion of religion is false or whether a particular custom is pernicious or superstitious or what is the true view of religion. Similarly, it will be difficult for any judge to find out whether a particular conduct of any founder of a religion is in its nature, public or private. This is a matter which will be difficult to be found out by the best genius, and I submit that if in amendment No. 20 expression (1) is enacted or No. 19 is enacted, we will be introducing such a complexity into the law that it would be difficult for a judge to unravel it. If the House considers that a provision of this nature is necessary in the Bill, I would propose that the amendment which I have moved is the one which ought to be put in the Bill.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Sir, I wish to say only a few words in opposing this amendment. I submit to the House that the phrase " with deliberate and malicious intention of outraging the religious feelings of any class of His Majesty's subjects " is perfectly clear. It governs the whole clause, and the proviso which has been moved is unnecessary; also, it contains so many ambiguities that its interpretation would be a very difficult and doubtful matter.

The motion was negatived.

Mr. President : Does the Honourable Member wish to move the alternative amendment ?

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : No, Sir.

Mr. T. Prakasam : Sir, the amendment which I rise to move runs thus:

" That to clause 2 the following Explanation be added :

' Explanation : It does not amount to an offence within the meaning of this section, if the criticism offered by anybody on any religion or religious beliefs of a particular class is bona fide with a view to remove false notions based on superstitious or pernicious customs which are foreign to the true religion or with a view to prevent forcible conversions or re-conversions from one religion or faith or belief to another ?''

Sir, the Honourable Mover of the Bill in his speech admitted that the present legislation is not intended to exclude bona fide criticism on matters I have tried to indicate in this amendment, and I do not think the Members of the Select Committee or anybody in this House would dispute that bona fide criticism on any religious belief is intended to be brought within the meaning of new section 295-A. I do not agree with the opinion of our leader, Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar, that there is no provision in the criminal law for an offence against religion, or beliefs. No doubt the learned Judge of the Lahore Court pointed out what in his opinion was a defect, and it is only proper that the Government should consider it their legitimate duty to remove that defect by asking for certain amendments in the existing law. But in attempting to do so, they have enacted a provision which instead of removing the trouble in view is likely to create more troubles not only as between the Hindus and the Mussalmans, but as between several sub-sections of the same community and individuals. Hindus and Mussalmans are fighting to-day and some of them have lost their heads. Some of them have been attacking ruthlessly not only individuals but also the founders of religions. These things will not last for a long time ; they will soon come to an end, because the leadership that has failed hitherto both among the Mussalmans and the Hindus and also the leadership of the Government that has failed hitherto, all have recognised their error and all are agreed now upon putting a stop to this by devising ways and means. This legislation is considered one of the remedies. I am sorry, Sir, that this is beginning at the wrong end. However, if this could be really of any help to us in regard to the particular situation, it will be a matter of great satisfaction to the country and to everybody concerned. But my submission is that the clause as it is is so general and the net can be spread for everything that one can possibly imagine. Here is my friend sitting behind me, my friend Mr. Belvi, who was fighting yesterday hard in this House not to have that legislation against child marriages. It was said that a child below one year can be married and that the Hindu law, or the Shastras, or the religion, says that it is a sacrament, and that a marriage tie, which creates a status, cannot be declared invalid. It was asked, how a status once created by tying a thali even on the neck of a child of 9 or 8 months, could be divested by a court of law. Our imagination goes to that length, our intelligence takes us to such height. We have to stop this evil in society. In my opinion, to marry a little child of one year is as bad as infanticide. One who tries to stop it comes under this clause. What is it that will not come under this clause ? Anything can come under this clause. It was contended that all aspects had been considered by the Select Committee and all have been provided for. I say they have not been stated or provided for. Courts of law will only look into a section of the Act. My Honourable friend Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar, if he should argue a case in a court of law, will say that the debates of the Assembly are not to be looked into.

Mr. D. V. Belvi : Cannot be looked into.

Mr. T. Prakasam : My Honourable friend Mr. Belvi says that they cannot be looked into. That is the law. If the debates cannot be looked into and if the object of the Legislature is not to be traced, what is it that is left but the bare section ? General expressions or attacks on religion or attacks against beliefs or attacks upon founders cannot and are not intended to constitute an offence if bona fide. What is to happen to persons who have rebelled against a spiritual Guru, such as one Sri Sankaracharya, who declared at one time that whoever crossed the sea, whoever went to England had forfeited his caste. I should not refer to any incident in my own life. It is more than twenty years since I was called upon by Sri Sankaracharya of a Mutt who said that he had jurisdiction over me, to explain why I had crossed the seas and to show cause why I should not go through a penance. I declined to submit myself to his jurisdiction. There was a bull of excommunication read against me publicly on the banks of a river. We challenged the order and we got over the whole trouble and made that Guru accept our view. I am sorry we have been reduced to such a pass to-day that we have to ask the Government to pass legislation like this. These matters ought to have been settled by ourselves. We have outgrown most of our original bad customs. It is not only the enlightened public that have so outgrown them, but also the masses to a great extent. But there are certain impediments in our way and if only those impediments are removed—we hope they would be removed soon—there would be legislation on a broader basis. I am anxious that this House should be convinced of the necessity of these amendments—I do not care a bit whether the whole House is convinced. So often it refuses to be convinced when once it makes up its mind—I am anxious that this House should keep its mind open on this matter. I am not making any extravagant demand. I am just asking the addition of an Explanation to the clause so that what you did not intend and what you do not intend to come within the mischief of this section would be at least made clear. That is what I am asking the House. I am anxious the more that this amendment should go in now, because in these days I am realising that the non-co-operators, or at any rate some of the non-co-operators of 1921, are fast becoming co-operators (Laughter) and they may soon become worse tyrants who would abuse this very section against their own countrymen as judges. I therefore submit, Sir, that in enacting any piece of law, you had better make your intention quite clear. It is the duty of the legislators to make the intention absolutely clear by adding an Explanation like this to the clause. If the House fails to do it now, they would realise later what mischief is in store, which you do not intend and which you may not be able to prevent at that time.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That to clause 2 the following Explanation be added :

'Explanation:—It does not amount to an offence within the meaning of this section, if the criticism offered by anybody on any religion or religious beliefs of a particular class is bona fide with a view to remove false notions based on superstitious or pernicious customs which are foreign to the true religion or with a view to prevent forcible conversions or re-conversions from one religion or faith or belief to another '."

Mr. N. C. Kelkar : Sir, in the present temper of the House I am not going to help in the massacre of the innocents. I will try and save the victim ! I do not move the amendment* standing in my name.

* To clause 2 of the Bill the following Explanations be added :—

"Explanation 1.—It is not an offence under this section to set out facts and offer criticism based on such facts, pertaining to the public conduct of founders or saints or representative-men or protagonists of any religion or any sect of any religion, provided that such setting out of facts and such criticism is not malicious.

Explanation 2.—It is not an offence under this section to set out facts, and to offer criticism based on such facts, pertaining to the principles, doctrines or tenets or observances of any religion or any sect of any religion, in the course of a historical or philosophical or sociological diquisition, and with a view to promote social or religious reform."

Mr. M. K. Acharya : Sir, I have a very, very innocent amendment tabled against my name and I trust that even if it be massacred there will be some who feel that they will be doing their duty in voting for it. For

"They are slaves who dare not be In the right with two or three."

The amendment reads thus :

"That the following be added to clause 2 and necessary additions be made to clause 3:—

'295-B. All books, pamphlets or other publications containing words or visible representations calculated to insult the religious feelings of any class of His Majesty's subjects, if published outside India, shall be proscribed' the word prosecuted as printed is a printer's mistake :

"and if published within India, be seized and destroyed by order of the magistrate within whose jurisdiction the publication takes place'."

If I am not mistaken, Sir, the supporters of this legislation are for inaugurating an era of peace and good will. But the clause 295A, which I suppose is going to be passed, is, as has already been doubted, not only by back benchers like me but by those who were on the Select Committee, likely to be almost a dead letter ; because the amendment made in the Select Committee that the offender must, with the deliberate and malicious intention of outraging the religious feelings of any class of His Majesty's subjects, have done something which may bring him within the purview of that section—that amendment practically makes it impossible to bring anyone to book at all ; since as the Select Committee itself puts it, the burden of proof is going to be on the prosecution. And I am perfectly sure that when an offender is prosecuted under this section, and when any of my clever lawyer friends are engaged for the defence, like, my revered leader on my right side or my friend Mr. Jinnah on the left side, Mr. Iyengar or Jinnah will indulge in all his perplexing arguments or rapier thrusts against the poor prosecution witnesses, and will call upon them to prove what the malicious intention was. I am yet to know, Sir, how anybody is going to go deep into the heart of an individual and bring out the malice from there and place it before the assessors or the jurors or the lawyers and the judge. Therefore, Sir, in my humble layman's opinion, whatever the learned legislators may say here is subject always to the other things that they may say elsewhere, and in my humble layman's opinion it would be almost humanly impossible to prove that a man has said anything deliberately and maliciously to outrage the feelings of any class. Everybody will always take shelter and say that he has written only by way of honest criticism, that he wanted only to expose what he considered to be certain defects, and so on.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : On a point of order, Sir. I consider that this amendment goes beyond the scope of the Bill. It tries to create another offence far graver and far more comprehensive than that contained in the original Bill. It also seeks to put power into the hands of the executive without any judicial cognisance. The amendment seeks to create, Sir, an altogether new offence which was not contemplated by the original Bill, and it goes beyond the scope of the Bill. Therefore, Sir, I beg your ruling on the point.

Mr. M. K. Acharya : I thought, Sir, that the Honourable Member was opposing it.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : This is an amendment which goes beyond the scope of the Bill.

Mr. M. K. Acharya : Sir, I am explaining why I want this amendment to be made ; because I thought that, as there is some legislation here which seeks to prevent any ill-feeling spreading to any very large extent through scurrilous writings, the most innocent way of putting a stop to the spreading of this very, very strong agitation in these matters was to seize the publications which may be really offensive and stop any further mischief in the country. I am absolutely unable to comprehend how this attempt to prevent the mischief spreading is outside the scope of this legislation. But I dare say that the larger genius of the front benchers will have their play very soon.....

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyenger : It is an addition to the procedure.

Mr. M. K. Acharya : But so far as I can see, what we are trying to do is—that is what has been said, and it is supposed to be the very purpose of this legislation—we are trying to inaugurate an era of intercommunal peace and good will, and of preventing unnecessary attacks being made upon the religious feelings of any large section of His Majesty's subjects. And I beg to submit, Sir, that it is perfectly right, nay it is our duty to see, that not only that the man is punished—for that is after all a very, very small matter, or that may be probably vindictive or whatever else it is—but we must put such publications out of harm's way. If, therefore, Sir, there is going to be any legislation, any really honest bona fide legislation that will help people, especially in the circumstances that obtain at present in the country, namely, circumstances causing great excitement, where even dramas and historical romances and things of that kind are taken exception to, then very necessarily it follows that, if there is any very large agitation in the country, in the interests of law and peace and order, which I suppose the executive are said to be keen to protect, certainly such publications as have caused such great agitation in the country ought to be brought under some form of restraint ; and the very least that we can do is to take hold of such publications and see that they do not go about fast circulating. Unfortunately, from the beginning of the world's creation, forbidden fruit has always tasted sweet ; and somehow those things, which have this stinging attack upon people, go about circulating like hot chestnuts, as my friend here remarked. I have never been to England, but apparently hot chestnuts are sold abundantly in the streets of England. Anyhow people like to have hot things, to warm their cold blood up ; and that is what has happened. Everybody who has got any self-respect in this House was talking vigorously about Miss Mayo's book. How are you going to deal with the book ? What would the jurors say if Miss Mayo were placed in the dock ? I suppose she would have a European jury. What would they say ? No malice ! They would say that from the innermost motherly abundance of her heart, of her great good will and her love and apostolic charity for Mother India it was that this book was written. That is the book that has caused the greatest annoyance to everyone with any self-respect in India. Take Mr. Pilcher's words the other day, my friend knows that the Statesman was prosecuted for merely reproducing that. I contend that it is the duty of the Government to see that these things do not go about circulating. It is a very small matter. I thought, from the way in which many people took my humble comments the other day, we were all agreed that these publications ought not to be allowed. What is the use of punishing one man and sending him to jail, when the book goes on circulating, when the publication is passed from hand to hand ? Your object is absolutely defeated. One stupid fanatical man in jail does not solve the problem. My Muhammadan friends will reply emotionally. I sometimes wish my Hindu friends were emotional also. The publication will go on circulating like hot chestnuts as has been said. Therefore, Sir, I think my amendment is very much more effective, because punishing the man is going to be very troublesome. It will be very difficult to prove his malice, as I said. Of course the lawyers will have plenty of work. I am not going into that, that is for the other section : but if the Government be so pleased as to order a prosecution, which is very doubtful, I say it will be very, very paying to some of my able criminal lawyers. But how is the real malady to be treated ? Where is the real physic to be administered ? Where is the prevention after all ? And therefore I submit, Sir, that with regard to books written in this vein, and whether they are deliberately malicious or not, the writer ought to take ample precaution to see that his book has not the result of offending the feelings of large communities. He must calculate all the effects of his book. It will not do to say : " Well, I am only interested in academic or philosophical discussion In the other section it may be very difficult to deal with him where it will have to be proved directly that he had deliberate malicious intention to hurt their feelings. And even if there is not that deliberate intention, the speech or publication must be proscribed, if the words are reasonably calculated, in the opinion of reasonable people, to create feelings of great annoyance—strong feelings are sometimes roused up very much. Even in a very, very old philosopher like me, feelings are stirred up when my women or religion is insulted ; it does not matter if I am myself insulted ; but when my God is insulted, when my religion is insulted, and the womanhood of India is insulted when things of that kind happen, when our religion is made responsible for all these silly things, I ask, what great harm is done to anybody if these books are taken out of the market and kept out of harm's way ? Somebody has said, " Love laughs at locksmiths ". I may say " Knavery laughs at legislators ! " The clever criminal knows how to defy the law. I know there will be some people who will clandestinely get these books, put them under their beds and read them But no great harm can come out of that. They will not be able to circulate these books and openly and defiantly say " I am doing this and I am not going to be afraid of the law or the consequences of the pronouncements of judges ". Therefore, I thought that this is the very least thing that we can do, if really we are serious. Of course Government may not be serious, but it is their lookout, but I assume that the Government are serious, or at least my friends believe that this is a very serious legislation which is going to help them. I do not myself believe it. I think this legislation is not going to help us very much. But if it is going to be of any use, let us see that such publications as really create all this great agitation in the minds of people, are brought within the purview of this Bill, so that we may prevent—we cannot, perhaps, altogether remedy—the spreading of any class of literature which is calculated to wound the religious feelings of people. There have been many instances in the recent history of our country—I am not going to refer to them here—how we poor Hindus have been for centuries, many centuries, countless centuries, made to suffer patiently, uncomplainingly—I am not sorry for it—how we have been made to suffer on account of attacks made upon our religion, our religious habits and customs by people who do not know the A B C of spirituality or religion. Everybody of course cannot be expected to take the same sapient view of things, to laugh at these things and go away. Already we have got instances of people, of so-called enlightened people, even among comrades of mine in this House, feeling very greatly agitated, and wanting to pull down the High Court of Lahore or of other places. If that be the feeling in the country even among educated people, and if that feeling cannot be prevented from spreading, let us prevent at least the causes that will bring about such agitation. That is the purpose of my amendment. I do not believe that any good press or any good newspaper will come within the purview of this provision ; I do not believe that any press or any newspaper or any reasonable writer will go about using language calculated to wound the religious feelings of any large section of the community. If they do, then the least thing that we can do is to ask Government to put away those few copies of any paper or pamphlet out of harm's way. This is a very necessary thing, Sir ; and I submit, therefore, that if really this legislation is intended to be of any use and is going to prevent the spreading of writings which will infuriate people and lead them -somebody up here said—to snatch at each other's throats, then this is the very least thing that we can do. I appeal to the self-respect of both the Hindus and the Mussalmans to see that they do not complacently allow the circulation of books, publications and pamphlets that are calculated to hurt the religious feelings of any class of His Majesty's subjects.

Sir, I move my amendment.

Mr. K. Ahmed : There is a provision already in the law.

Mr. M. K. Acharya : What ? Has this been already provided for foreign publications also ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I think I can offer an explanation which will persuade the Honourable Member that his amendment is not necessary. Perhaps the Honourable Member has overlooked sub-clause (i) of clause 3 of the Bill. It empowers the Local Government to declare forfeited to His Majesty copies of any literature offending against the Bill ; that is to say, any publication which constitutes an offence under clause 295A is ipso facto liable to forfeiture and copies thereof can be seized and forfeited in any part of India where it is found. I would only add that what is suggested in the Honourable Member's amendment certainly goes beyond the intentions of this House in referring the original Bill to the Select Committee ; it certainly goes beyond the scope of the commission which we imagined ourselves to have. I would also point out to the Honourable Member that his amendment could not in any case form part of clause 295A which is a penal clause and creates an offence.

5 P.M.

Mr. President : The question is :

" That the following be added to clause 2 and necessary additions be made to clause 3 :

' 259-B. All books, pamphlets or other publications containing words or visible representations calculated to insult the religious feelings of any class of

[Mr. President.]

His Majesty's subjects, if published outside India, shall be proscribed and if published within India be seized and destroyed by order of, the magistrate within whose jurisdiction the publication takes place '.''

The motion was negatived.

Mr. President : The question is :

'' That clause 2 do stand part of the Bill.''

The motion was adopted.

Clause 2 was added to the Bill.

Mr. President : The question is :

'' That clause 3 do stand part of the Bill.''

(At this stage some Honourable Members rose in their places including Mr. Abdul Haye.)

Mr. President : We have so far not made any change in the recommendations of the Select Committee. I wonder whether the Honourable Member from the Punjab wishes to press his amendment.

Mr. Abdul Haye : I wish to move my amendment. It runs as follows :.....

Mr. M. S. Sesha Ayyangar : I have got No. 32.

(Some other Honourable Members also said they had their amendments).

Mr. President : Amendments Nos. 23, 24 and 25 are consequential amendments. Amendment No. 26 Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : May I say one thing in respect of my amendments ?

Mr. President : The Honourable Member's amendments are merely consequential.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : I beg to move :

'' Delete sub-clause (i) of clause 3 and renumber sub-clauses (ii) and (iii) as (i) and (ii), respectively.''

A perusal of section 295 of the Indian Penal Code will establish that it deals with offences which are more heinous in their nature than the one which the present Bill seeks to penalise. Chapter No. XV deals with offences relating to religion.....

Mr. President : Order, order. The House now stands adjourned till 11 A.M. on Monday, the 19th instant.

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Monday, the 19th September, 1927.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member has not heard the reply. The reply was that the Government had decided not to take any action.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Declined to take any action ? Are Government aware that it is an insult to the Members of this House not to give effect to the wishes of the country.....

Mr. K. Ahmed : In view of the fact that the Muhammadans are below the proper proportion in service, do Government propose to take steps to give a due share to them ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I did not catch the Honourable Member's question.

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I do not accept the statement made by the Honourable Member.

NUMBER OF MUSLIM ASSISTANTS IN THE RAILWAY BOARD.

1067. *Mr. Abdul Haye : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state the total number of assistants excluding stenographers employed at present in the Railway Board ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : 30.

(b) Yes.

(c) 4 Muslim clerks have been appointed to officiate as assistants.

Mr. K. Ahmed : In view of the fact that it has become absolutely necessary to act according to the promise of the Government, do Government propose for their own prestige and dignity to give effect to the promise of 33 per cent. which should be acted upon ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I think my reply shows that it has been doing so.

NUMBER OF MUSLIM GAZETTED OFFICERS IN CERTAIN SPECIFIED ACCOUNTS OFFICES.

1068. *Mr. Abdul Haye : (a) Will the Government please state the total number of gazetted officers in the following offices ?

I. Office of the Auditor General.

V. Office of the Accountant General, Central Revenues.

(b) How many of these officers are Hindus and how many are Muslims ?

(c) Is it a fact that in some of these offices not a single Muslim officer has been posted ever since the offices came into existence, and if so, may such offices please be specified ?

(d) What is the number of appointments made in the ministerial establishments in these offices during the last two years ?

(e) How many of the men appointed were Muslims and how many of the Muslims appointed are at present in service ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I propose to reply to questions Nos. 1068, 1070, 1072, 1074 and 1075 together.

I would refer the Honourable Member to the Honourable Sir Charles Innes' reply to Maulvi Muhammad Yakub's unstarred question No. 3 on the 27th January 1927. That reply still holds good in the case of the offices referred to in these questions.

Mr. K. Ahmed : In view of the fact that Government have not suitably answered this question, do Government propose now for the benefit of the country to answer the question in full and give satisfaction to the Members of this Assembly by adhering to the promise given by them ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : Government always give effect to their promises.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Is it not a fact that Government Members say that things are right when they are not right ?

(e) Why were the claims of Muslims ignored by the Accountant General, Railways, in making the above appointments, and did he know that out of a total number of 150 Accountants serving under him, only 3 were Muslims ?

(f) When will the Accountant General, Railway, take necessary steps in pursuance of the Government policy, to recruit Muslims in his Department, which is overwhelmingly manned by non-Muslims ?

The Honourable Member's attention is invited to the answer given by me on the 6th September 1927 to Mr. Shanmukham Chetty's short notice questions on the same subject. I regret that I am unable to make any statement as the Government of India have not yet received either a text of Sir Edward Grigg's speech or a summary of the recommendations made by the Feetham Commission on Local Government in Kenya.

CONDITIONS OF RELEASE OF BENGAL STATE PRISONERS AND DETENUS.

1080. Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Are Government aware that certain conditions are shown to State prisoners in jail and they are asked if they agree to sign those conditions their cases will be favourably considered but no assurance is given of their release on subscribing to those conditions ?

(b) Will Government please explain why they do not make a list of those State prisoners whom they are willing to release if they are agreeable to the terms proposed ?

(c) Is it the object of showing the terms to all to tempt State prisoners to make incriminating statements implicating other persons ? If not, will Government please state fully their reasons for this system or procedure ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) If the Honourable Member will read the debate which took place in this House on the 3rd February last, he will see that a declaration by a State prisoner or detenu as to his intentions for the future is an element which would be taken into consideration by Government in dealing with the question of release, though it is not the determining factor. An opportunity is accordingly given to State prisoners and detenus to give an undertaking as to their future conduct if they so desire, but obviously no assurance of release in consequence of any such undertaking could be given.

(b) It is not the case, as the Honourable Member assumes, that Government are not prepared to release a detenu unless he gives an undertaking.

(c) The Honourable Member will see that in the debate to which I have just referred my predecessor explicitly stated that a declaration would not amount to a confession of having taken part in such activities in the past. The answer to the first part of this paragraph of the Honourable Member's question is therefore in the negative. The declaration refers to the future, not to the past. I have explained in my answer to (a) what is the object of this procedure.

Mr. Satyendra Chandra Mitra : Is the Honourable the Home Member aware that the terms are enforceable under clause (c) of section 11 by serving notice on those persons ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Will the Honourable Member be good enough to repeat the question ?

Mr. Satyendra Chandra Mitra : The terms which are shown to these persons are enforceable under clause (c) of section 11 of the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment Act, and in fact, on some of these persons these terms were served as notice and they are enforceable.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : If an infringement of the terms takes place, the Government can take consequential action– is that the Honourable Member's question ?

HUNGER STRIKES AMONGST THE BENGAL STATE PRISONERS AND DETENUS.

1081. Mr. S. C. Mitra : Will the Government be pleased to supply a list of hunger-strikes that have taken place amongst the Bengal State prisoners and detenus during the last four years ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I regret I am not prepared to supply such a list.

TRANSFER OF BENGAL STATE PRISONERS AND DETENUS TO JAILS OUTSIDE BENGAL.

1082. Mr. S. C. Mitra : (a) Will Government kindly explain the principle and reasons why Bengal State prisoners and detenus are transferred to jails outside their Province ?

(b) Are not Government aware that there is a good deal of difference in the nature and preparation of food in different Provinces and that detenus suffer greatly from the language difficulty and want of facilities for interviews with their relatives ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) There are difficulties in keeping more than a limited number of State prisoners and detenus in any one jail, and the number of jails in Bengal in which they can be accommodated at all is limited.

(b) Government have realised that transfer to a jail outside Bengal may mean certain differences of diet and fewer opportunities of interviews, but do not consider that any avoidable hardship is involved.

†1083*—1084*.

† Not put at the meeting, but the questions and answers thereto will be found at pages 4564—65 of these proceedings.

EYE-SIGHT TESTS OF GAZETTED OFFICERS AND SUBORDINATE STAFF OF STATE RAILWAYS.

1085. Lieutenant-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : 1. Will the Honourable Member please inform this House if it is a fact that :

(a) Railway officials who are recruited in England for employment in all superior Railway Departments are accepted as physically fit with defective vision up to a maximum error of 3.5 Diopters, corrected with suitable glasses to 6|6 in one eye and 6|9 in the other ?

(b) this visual test is based on the Board of Trade Rules and accepted by the Medical Board of the India Office ?

2. If the answer to (1) is in the affirmative, will the Honourable Member please state if it is a fact that Medical Officers of all Indian State Railways demand from railway officials on first appointment a visual acuity equal to that of the Royal Navy, i.e., 6|6 in each eye without glasses ? Is it a fact that this is an unheard of visual requirement in any Department of Railways in the Empire ?

3. Will Government be prepared to remedy this anomaly ?

4. Is it a fact that a Committee of Railway Medical Officers recently met and drew up a report correcting this visual anomaly, and that this report was submitted for the approval of the Railway Board ?

5. If so, will the Honourable Member please state if he has examined this report and when orders will be issued on it ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : As my reply is both long and technical, I should like, with your permission, and if the Honourable Member has no objection, to lay it on the table.

1. (a) The rule referred to by the Honourable Member was in existence, but has since been modified. Government have no information as to the standards of visual acuity now adopted for gazetted railway officers recruited in England, but in the case of subordinates such as guards, engine drivers, etc., a candidate is disqualified unless both eyes are emmetropic and acuteness of vision and range of accommodation perfect.

(b) In view of the answer given above, this question does not arise.

2. The statement made by the Honourable Member is not correct. Standards have recently been laid down for gazetted officers appointed on Railways which in no case require 6|6 acuity of vision in each eye without glasses. As regards subordinates the information at Government's disposal shows that only a certain class, viz., foot-plate staff, are required on recruitment to have 6|6 acuity of vision, in each eye without glasses, and that this class, on re-examination while in service, are permitted a lower standard.

3, 4 and 5. Government have received the Report of the Standing Advisory Committee of Medical Officers on the standards of physical fitness—including acuity of vision. Rules regarding gazetted officers have been issued along with the Regulations for recruitment in the Gazette of India of the 9th July 1927, and the Secretary of State has been requested to adopt the standards for candidates to be recruited in England. The Committee's report on the standards for subordinates is under the consideration of the Government.

SPECIAL COURSE IN OPHTHALMIC SURGERY FOR RAILWAY MEDICAL OFFICERS OF STATE RAILWAYS.

1086. Lieutenant-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : (a) Will the Honourable Member be pleased to state if all Railway Medical Officers recruited both in India and England undergo a special course in ophthalmic surgery, with special reference to their official professional work of which visual tests and opinions form an important part ?

(b) If not, are Government prepared to issue orders that this course of study do form a part of every Railway Medical Officer's training and that none who have not undergone a special ophthalmic training be employed as Medical Officers on State Railways ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) No. But candidates who have undergone a special course in ophthalmic surgery are given special consideration, other qualifications being also taken into account.

(b) Government do not propose to issue such orders.

INDIANS APPOINTED AS KING'S COMMISSIONED OFFICERS, ETC.

1087. Mr. Mukhtar Singh : Will the Government be pleased to state in regard to the following appearing in the Indian Sandhurst Committee Report, page 11, paragraph 9, sub-paragraphs 2 and 3 :

> " of the 44 Indian boys who have passed successfully out of Sandhurst, 42 now remain in the Indian Army. The other two have for different reasons resigned their commission, > of the 83 boys who passed the Sandhurst entrance examination, 35 were residents of the Punjab, 12 belong to Bombay, 9 each to the United Provinces and Bengal, 5 to the North-West Frontier Province, 3 each to Rajputana and Hyderabad, 2 each to Burma and Coorg and one each to Bihar, Assam and the Central India Agency."

(a) How many of these 44 and 83 boys are Moslems, Hindus including Sikhs and others ?

(b) How many of these 44 boys are from each of the different Provinces of India and how many of these are Maratha Brahmins and Maratha non-Brahmins ?

(c) How many of the Provincial quotas forming these 83 boys, are Moslems, Hindus including Sikhs and others ?

(d) How many of the 12 boys forming the quota of Bombay are Maratha Brahmins and Maratha non-Brahmins and others ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) —(d). As much as possible of the information desired by the Honourable Member will be obtained and communicated to him in due course.

STOPPAGE OF THE RECRUITMENT OF HINDUS TO THE MINISTERIAL OR TECHNICAL ESTABLISHMENT OF THE FOREST RESEARCH INSTITUTE AT DEHRA DUN.

1088. Mr. Mukhtar Singh : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state if it is a fact that Mr. C. G. Trevor, acting for the President, Forest Research Institute and College, has issued an order to the following effect ?

> With a view to stop the preponderance of Hindus on the staff of the Forest Research Institute and College it is hereby laid down that until further orders no Hindu will be appointed on the ministerial or technical establishment whether permanent or temporary unless the candidates of the following communities who come forward are to be forced to be unqualified or unsuitable :

Moslems, Anglo-Indians, Christians and other communities.

(b) Was this action of Mr. Trevor in accordance with the orders or policy of Government ?

(c) If not, what action do the Government propose to take in the matter ?

(d) Will the Government be pleased to state if it is the policy of the Government to introduce communalism even in Institutions which are of a highly technical nature ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : (a) Yes.

(b) The order does not correctly carry out the intentions of Government.

(c) Instructions are being issued to withdraw the order.

(d) If by " communalism " the Honourable Member means the securing of adequate representation of minority communities, the principle will be applied with special caution in the case of services in which high technical qualifications are the most important requirement.

Mr. B. Das : Are Government officials in high positions allowed to foster communal discord between the different sections of the people of India ?

(At this stage Mr. K. Ahmed rose in his place.)

Mr. President : Order, order. Mr. Ram Narayan Singh.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Am I not entitled according to the Rules and Standing Orders of this Assembly to put questions ?

Mr. President : Order, order. Mr. Ram Narayan Singh.

Mr. Ram Narayan Singh : Question No. 1089.

RESOLUTION REGARDING THE BACKWARD TRACTS IN BIHAR AND ORISSA.

1089. Mr. Ram Narayan Singh : With reference to the Government's reply to Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh's question No. 102 on Monday, 22nd August 1927, will the Government be pleased to state whether in submitting to the Secretary of State for India a copy of the resolution on " Backward Tracts " in the province of Bihar and Orissa, they made any remarks thereon and if so, what ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The Honourable Member is referred to the reply which I gave to part (a) of his question No. 554 on the 29th August, 1927 and the earlier answer referred to therein.

GOVERNMENT POLICY IN REGARD TO THE KHADI MOVEMENT.

1090. Mr. Ram Narayan Singh : Will the Government be pleased to state their policy about and attitude towards the Khadi (hand woven and hand spun cloth) movement in this country ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The Honourable Member's question will be fully answered when his Resolution on a somewhat similar subject comes up for discussion to-morrow.

†1091*—1092*.

ABOLITION OF TOLLS ON THE RAILWAY BRIDGE OVER THE RIVER GANDAK.

1093. Maulvi Muhammad Shafee : (a) What principle do the Government recognize for permitting the levy of tolls on bridges constructed and maintained either by Government or Railway Companies for crossing rivers or waterways ?

(b) Are Government aware that the bridge on the river Gandak between Sonepore and Hajipore within the jurisdiction of the Saran and Muzaffarpur Districts in the province of Bihar and Orissa for the Bengal and North Western Railway was constructed some time in 1885 and that a footpath was attached to the bridge for the convenience of foot passengers ?

(c) Are Government aware that the cost of attaching the footpath to the bridge as related by the Railway Company amounts to no more than two lakhs of rupees ?

(d) Are Government aware that the heaviest rate of toll which is one anna per passenger has been realized from those who cross the bridge since the year 1885 ?

(e) Are Government aware that the sum realized as toll up to the last financial year amounted to about 5 lakhs of rupees ?

(f) Are Government aware that there is a very strong feeling in the country against the levy of tolls on that bridge ?

(g) Are Government aware that the Bihar and Orissa Legislative Council has recently passed a Resolution recommending the abolition of the tolls on the said bridge ?

(h) Will the Government be pleased to state what steps the Government are going to take in the matter ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Railways are entitled to levy tolls on footpaths of bridges constructed at their expense, but if a Local Government compensates a railway for the loss in net receipts which would follow the abolition of such tolls, the railway administration ceases to charge the tolls.

(b) Yes, the bridge was constructed in 1887.

(c) The cost was Rs. 2,10,000.

(d) Yes, the tolls have been levied at the rate of 1 anna per passenger since 1887.

(e) No. Records do not exist to show the sum.

(f) No.

(g) No.

† Not put at the meeting, but the questions and answers thereto will be found at page 4565 of these proceedings.

(h) There has been correspondence between the Government of India and the Government of Bihar and Orissa on the question of the abolition of these tolls and the Local Government decided last year not at present to press for their abolition. It is for the Local Government to reopen the question and the Government of India propose to take no further action unless this is done.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Are Government aware that the Bengal and North Western Railway has been more than compensated for the expense which it incurred in making that footpath by the levy of tolls for a long number of years ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : If the figure which the Honourable the questioner mentioned, namely, 5 lakhs, is correct, it seems likely that this footpath has been kept open at a continuous loss to the Bengal and North Western Railway from the beginning.

CANCELLATION OF THE PASSPORT GRANTED TO MR. SAKLATWALA, M.P.

1094. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to a London telegram published in the Pioneer, dated the 5th September 1927 (page 3), in which it is stated that the validity of the passport granted to Mr. Saklatwala, M.P., in December 1926, has been cancelled " at the desire of the Indian authorities ", and that he will not be allowed to enter India ?

(b) Is this correct ; and if so, why have the Indian authorities recommended the cancellation of the passport ?

(c) What objection have the Government to lay the correspondence in this connection on the table ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) Yes.

(b) It is the case that the validity of Mr. Saklatwala's passport for India has been cancelled, mainly on the ground of his conduct in India during his last visit. The Government of India and the Secretary of State were in complete agreement that this action should be taken.

(c) I do not consider that it would be in the public interest.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : What is the conduct of Mr. Saklatwala referred to which justifies the Government of India in recommending the cancellation of the passport ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The conduct of Mr. Saklatwala is that which the Government of India and the Secretary of State regarded as likely to be prejudicial to the public interest.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Will the Honourable Member be more specific on this point ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : No, Sir.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Have the Government of India considered the desirability of taking other action instead of this improper one of cancelling the passport ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : That question has occupied the attention of Government.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Did they consider the question of prosecuting him or taking any other action under the ordinary law of the country instead of this administrative action ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I have already replied on that point

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I ask what made the Government of India think that the presence of Mr. Saklatwala would lead to a disturbance of tranquillity ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I have already answered that question.

Mr. B. Das : May I inquire if Mr. Saklatwala's visit to India last year and his public conduct was in any way harmful to the public interest in India ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : My answer refers to Mr. Saklatwala's last visit to India.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : May I know if the Government definitely decided that this was the suitable action to take by way of punishing Mr. Saklatwala's conduct in India ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : No, Sir. It is not punishment.

Mr A. Rangaswami Iyengar : What is the object of this action, Sir ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Prevention.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : May I know if there has been any disturbance of public tranquillity in consequence of Mr. Saklatwala's visit ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : As I pointed out, the object was to prevent any breach of public tranquillity.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : May I know whether Government had any reason, on account of Mr. Saklatwala's action in the past, to justify the action ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : They had reason to apprehend the possibility of a breach of tranquillity.

REJECTION OF THE APPLICATION OF AN INDIAN STUDENT TO BE ALLOWED TO ASSIST IN THE WATER DEPARTMENT OF THE NEW MILLS COUNCIL.

1095. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Is it a fact that an Indian student in England studying at the Manchester College of Technology made an application to the New Mills Council to be allowed to assist in the Water Department of the Council during his long vacation, but his application was rejected after discussion on the ground that he was an " outsider " ?

(b) Do Government propose to ascertain the facts of this case from the High Commissioner for India, and indicate what steps are proposed to be taken in the matter ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) and (b). The Government of India have no information but have addressed the High Commissioner in the matter.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Will the information be communicated to me or to the House ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : It will be communicated to the Honourable Member.

RESTRICTION OF THE EMPLOYMENT OF GURKHAS TO THE ARMY AND REGULAR MILITARY POLICE BATTALIONS.

1096. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Is it a fact that an order has been issued by Government that no Gurkhas of Nepalese nationality should be given any employment except in the Army, and in regular military police battalions, and then only up to the existing sanctioned strength ?

(b) What is the existing sanctioned strength of the Gurkhas of Nepalese nationality in the Army, and in the regular military police battalions ?

Sir Denys Bray : (a) Yes, Sir, in deference to wishes expressed by the Nepal Government.

(b) Army 21,166 (including 2,000 reserve). Military Police 3,478.

VALUATION OF GOVERNMENT HOUSE PROPERTIES IN SIMLA.

1097. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Will the Government be pleased to give an approximate valuation of Government house properties in Simla ; and also indicate if additional quarters will be required to be built in New Delhi for office and residential purposes, in connection with the proposed longer stay of the Government in New Delhi ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The book value of residential and non-residential buildings of the Central Government in Simla is roughly estimated at Rs. 2,20,00,000, but the actual value is probably slightly higher. The above figure does not include the value of Railway properties in Simla.

A longer stay in Delhi by itself is not likely to involve the construction of additional accommodation for office and residential purposes.

PRESERVATION OF THE MOSQUES OF THE SHARQI KINGS AT JAUNPUR.

1098. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Are Government aware that the mosques of the Sharqi kings at Jaunpur, viz., the Jami Masjid, the Atala Masjid, and the Lal Darwaza Masjid, which have been declared protected under the Ancient Monuments Preservation Act, VII of 1904, are in a dilapidated condition requiring repairs, and the Archæological Department is unable to maintain them for the reason that their Mutawallis refuse to enter into an agreement with the Government in respect of their maintenance ? If so, what action do the Government propose to take for the preservation of these mosques ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : Yes. Government are enquiring into the matter.

EMPLOYMENT BY MEMBERS OF THE INDIAN LEGISLATURE OF RETAINERS FOR THEIR FIRE-ARMS.

1099 Maulvi Muhammad Shafee : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether the exemptees under clause (1) (a) of Schedule

I of the Indian Arms Rules, 1924, are allowed to keep retainers for their arms ?

(b) If the answer be in the affirmative, will the Government be pleased to state whether the Members of the Indian Legislature are included in that category and thus permitted to keep retainers ?

(c) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the fact that the provisions with regard to keeping retainers in the Indian Arms Rules, 1924, have been differently interpreted by several Local Governments and that thus there are different and often contradictory procedures adopted in the several provinces with regard to giving permission for keeping retainers ?

(d) Are Government prepared to take steps to make uniform provisions to be followed in all the provinces in regard to keeping retainers by the Members of the Indian Legislature ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) The exemption granted to those named in clause 1 (a) of the Schedule is personal, and does not extend to retainers or servants.

(b) Does not arise.

(c) and (d). Government are not aware that a different procedure is followed by different Local Governments, but they will enquire.

†1100*—1103*.

RECRUITMENT FOR THE AUDIT AND ACCOUNTS DEPARTMENT.

1104. Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : (a) Is it a fact that in pursuance of Resolution No. 1279-F.E. of the Government of India, Finance Department, the Government of India have stopped recruiting non-Indians for their Audit and Accounts Department ?

(b) Is an English qualification insisted upon in the case of appointments in the Audit and Accounts Department ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : The reply to part (a) of the question is in the affirmative and to part (b) in the negative.

RESOLUTION REGARDING INDIANISATION OF THE HIGHER GRADES OF PORT TRUST SERVICES.

1105. Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : What action has been taken by Government in connection with the Resolution of the Honourable Sir P. C. Sethna in the Council of State on 26th January 1922, recommending Indianisation of the higher posts in the services of the Port Trusts ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : Under the various Port Acts, the Boards of Trustees exercise statutory power to appoint their own officers, except in the case of the highest appointments. In the debate in the Council of State, to which the Honourable Member refers, it was recognised that the most practical step that the Government could take to increase the number of Indians in the higher grades of the Port services, would be the amendment of the Port Acts so as to increase the number of Indians on the Boards, in which the power of appointment is vested. The Port Acts of the principal ports were accordingly amended for this purpose, and I am informed that the number of Indians appointed by the Board is now increasing.

APPOINTMENT OF ASSISTANT ACCOUNTANT UNDER THE PORT COMMISSIONERS, CALCUTTA.

1106. Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to an advertisement in the Calcutta papers inviting applications for the post of Assistant Accountant under the Port Commissioners, Calcutta, the post being open to "fully qualified Chartered Accountants European or Indian" ?

(b) Is there any reason why the members of the Society of Incorporated Accountants should thus be excluded from applying ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : (a) Yes.

(b) Government have no information, but have made enquiries in the matter and will communicate the result to the Honourable Member.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : Will the Government take the action necessary in order that this particular post may go to an Indian ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I am not aware that it is in the power of the Government of India to take any direct action in the matter.

Mr. B. Das : Will the Honourable Member communicate the result of the inquiry to the Indian Chamber of Commerce about the appointment of accountants in the Port Trust ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I am afraid I did not catch the Honourable Member's question.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Is it not in the power of the Government of India to Indianise this Port Trust ? Do Government propose to take steps and move the authorities in England, so that what is needful may be done ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : The Government of India do not propose to undertake legislation to amend the various Ports Acts at present.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : Will they be good enough to communicate this question and their reply to the authorities of the Port Trust ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : Yes, Sir.

REPRESENTATION FROM THE INDIAN CHAMBER OF COMMERCE IN CONNECTION WITH THE APPOINTMENT OF ASSISTANT ACCOUNTANT UNDER THE PORT COMMISSIONERS, CALCUTTA.

1107. Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : Have Government of India received any representation from the Indian Chamber of Commerce, Calcutta, in connection with the appointment of an Assistant Accountant to the office of the Port Commissioners of Calcutta ? If so, will they be pleased to lay it on the table ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : The Government of India have received a representation from the Indian Chamber of Commerce on the subject and a copy has been placed in the Library.

TRANSFER OF THE RAILWAY CLEARING HOUSE TO DELHI.

1108. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state if it is a fact that the Government have finally decided to locate the Railway Clearing House at Delhi ?

(b) If the answer to the above be in affirmative, will the Government be pleased to state in which building or buildings it is going to be accommodated and also when it is going to be transferred from Lahore to Delhi ?

(c) Is it a fact that notwithstanding the statement made by Mr. A. A. L. Parsons in the Legislative Assembly on the 25th March last, the Clearing House is not going to be located in any of the old Government buildings but a new building is going to be hired or purchased for the same ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Yes.

(b) and (c). The staff are to be accommodated in a building which has been purchased for the purpose and in an existing vacant building of the North Western Railway. The transfer of the office from Lahore to Delhi is to take place at the end of this month.

RAILWAYS ON WHICH THE CLEARING ACCOUNTS SYSTEM OF WORKING HAS BEEN ESTABLISHED.

1109. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state in which Railways is the Clearing House system being worked and also in which others its working is likely to be extended in the course of the next ten years ?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state the total number of stations on the different railways on which the Clearing House system is being worked and also how many of these stations are nearer to Lucknow than Delhi ?

(c) What is the total number of stations on the different railways in India and how many of these stations are nearer to Lucknow than Delhi ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) The four State-managed Railways have been brought under the Clearing Accounts system of working and a portion of the traffic of the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway is being working experimentally under this system. I hope that eventually other Company-managed Railways will come in.

(b) and (c). The compilation of the information will involve a great deal of labour which Government do not think it desirable to impose on the authorities concerned.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Is it a fact that more stations dealing with this Clearing Office are nearer to Lucknow than to Delhi, and is it for this reason that the Government do not give the information required ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : No, Sir. Mere proximity is not really the consideration. It is a question which is the more convenient centre of the train services on the Railways as a whole. There is no doubt that from that point of view Delhi is a better station for the four State Railways I have mentioned and for the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway than Lucknow.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : For how long did this Clearing Office remain in Lucknow ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : It was never in Lucknow.

ESTABLISHMENT OF THE RAILWAY CLEARING HOUSE AT LAHORE, ETC.

1110. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) How many men (excluding menial staff) are at present employed in the Lahore Clearing House ?

(b) Is it proposed to increase the number of such employees when the Clearing House is transferred to Delhi ? If so, how many ?

(c) How many of these employees have been recruited from the North Western Railway and how many from the East Indian Railway ?

(d) Will the Government be pleased to state if any extra allowance will be given to the employees on their transfer from Calcutta and Lahore to Delhi ? If so, what will be the total amount of such allowance per month ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) The present sanctioned cadre is 830 men.

(b) An increase may become necessary if the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway decide to come in permanently into the Clearing House system of working.

(c) The information required will be obtained and supplied to the Honourable Member.

(d) An allowance of 10 per cent. of pay, subject to a minimum of Rs. 10 per mensem has been sanctioned for employees who hold permanent posts in other offices and who elect the new scales of pay sanctioned for the subordinate establishment of the Clearing Accounts Office. This allowance is to be absorbed in future increments falling due to the employees concerned. It is not possible to frame a reliable estimate of the total sum of such allowance as it is not known how many employees will elect the new scales of pay ; but in any case, the amount involved will be small.

AMOUNT OF ALLOWANCE GRANTED TO THE MINISTERIAL STAFF OF THE LATE OUDH AND ROHILKHAND RAILWAY TRANSFERRED FROM LUCKNOW TO CALCUTTA.

1111. Mr. Rafi Ahmad Kidwai : (a) Was any extra allowance given to the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway employees on their transfer from Lucknow to Calcutta ?

(b) If so, what is the total amount of this extra allowance per month given to the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway employees ?

(c) What is the total number of the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway employees transferred from Lucknow to Calcutta from time to time since the amalgamation of the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway and East Indian Railway ?

(d) Have Government taken into consideration the suggestion of locating the Clearing House at Lucknow with a view to saving a large amount of this allowance by retransferring some of the old Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway employees from Calcutta to Lucknow ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) An extra allowance of 10 per cent. of pay subject to a minimum of Rs. 4 per mensem was granted to the ministerial staff of the late Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway who were transferred from Lucknow to Calcutta.

(b) Figures showing the total amount of this allowance are not available. It would vary from time to time, as men drawing it were transferred from Calcutta.

(c) Government have no information.

(d) The suggestion was considered, but as I have explained in replies to other questions, it has finally been decided to locate the Clearing House at Delhi.

APPROXIMATE EXPENDITURE REQUIRED FOR THE LOCATION OF THE CLEARING HOUSE AT DELHI AND LUCKNOW, RESPECTIVELY.

1112. Mr. Rafi Ahmad Kidwai : Will the Government lay on the table a comparative statement showing the approximate recurring and non-recurring expenditure which would be needed for the location of the Clearing House at Delhi and Lucknow, respectively ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am afraid it is impossible to make such a comparison.

EMPLOYMENT OF THE STAFF OF THE LATE OUDH AND ROHILKHAND RAILWAY AS CREWMEN.

1113. Mr. Rafi Ahmad Kidwai : Will the Government be pleased to state how many of the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway employees transferred to Calcutta have been retransferred to the United Provinces and how many of them have been transferred to the newly created crew system ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government have no information, but it is being obtained and will be supplied to the Honourable Member.

OFFICES LOCATED IN THE OLD OUDH AND ROHILKHAND RAILWAY BUILDINGS IN LUCKNOW.

1114. Mr. Rafi Ahmad Kidwai : Will the Government be pleased to state what offices are at present located in the old Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway office buildings in Lucknow and what portion of these buildings remains unused ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The Headquarters buildings of the late Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway at Lucknow are at present occupied by the Divisional office, the Railway Police office, the Assistant Signal Engineer's office and the offices of the Executive Engineer, Construction, while certain departments of the Provincial Government are housed in the upper floor of the East Block. The press building and the paper godown are at present unoccupied.

DEMOLITION OF THE OFFICE BUILDINGS OF THE LATE OUDH AND ROHILKHAND RAILWAY IN LUCKNOW.

1115. Mr. Rafi Ahmad Kidwai : (a) Is it a fact that the whole or part of the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway office buildings at Lucknow is going to be demolished because the Railway Department does not require them ? What is the cost of the portion proposed to be demolished ?

(b) If so, cannot these buildings be utilised for accommodating the Clearing House ? If not, why ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : One bungalow is being, or will shortly be, demolished because it has been condemned as dangerous. It could not be used for housing the Clearing House office. The original cost of this bungalow is not known to Government.

SALE OF MATERIAL OF THE OLD RAILWAY STATION AT LUCKNOW.

1116. Mr. Rafi Ahmad Kidwai : (a) Is it a fact that tenders were invited for the sale of material of the old railway station (East Indian Railway) at Lucknow and that the tenders received being considered too low, it was decided to call for fresh tenders ?

(b) If so, were the fresh tenders invited ?

(c) If not, how was the material disposed of ?

(d) Will the Government be pleased to state for what amount the whole material was sold and what was the difference between the amount so received and the amount offered in highest tender ?

(e) Will the Government be pleased to state the name of the purchaser of the old material of this station and whether this purchaser had also submitted tenders for the purchase of this material when the tenders were originally invited ?

(f) If so, what was the amount he had offered in his first tender ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The required information is being obtained and a communication will be sent to the Honourable Member in due course.

EXTENSION OF THE LEE CONCESSIONS TO RAILWAY OFFICERS NOT ENTITLED TO THEM.

1117. Mr. Rafi Ahmad Kidwai : (a) Has the Railway Board received any applications from the railway officers not entitled to Lee concessions praying for the extension of these concessions to their class of officers ?

(b) If so, will the Government be pleased to state the number of signatories belonging to different railways as well as the reasons advanced in the application for the extension of such concessions to them ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Yes.

(b) The applications have been received both from individual officers and from various associations. It would, I am afraid, take more time and trouble than the information would be worth, to attempt to calculate the number of officers affected and to summarise the various reasons advanced in support of their requests.

OFFICERS IN THE SUPERIOR SERVICES IN THE COMMERCIAL AND TRANSPORTATION DEPARTMENTS OF STATE RAILWAYS.

1118. Mr. Rafi Ahmad Kidwai : (a) What is the total number of Indian officers of the Superior Services in the (i) Commercial and (ii) Transport Departments of the different State Railways ?

(b) What is the proportion of Indian officers to the non-Indian officers of the Superior Services in (i) the Commercial and (ii) Transport Departments of the different State Railways ?

(c) What steps have the Government taken or propose to take to bring the number of the Indian officers to the proportion recommended by the Lee Commission ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) and (b). The information is available in the Railway Board's Classified List, of which a copy is in the Library.

(c) The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to Railway Board's Resolution No. 2058-E., which was published in the Gazette of India, dated 17th July 1927.

CANCELLATION OF THE PASSPORT OF MR. SAKLATWALA FOR INDIA.

1119. Mr. Rafi Ahmad Kidwai : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to a Reuter's telegram published in Civil and Military Gazette of Lahore of the 5th September reporting cancellation of Mr. Saklatwala's passport to India ?

(b) If so, is it a fact that the passport has been cancelled at the instance of the Government of India ?

(c) If the answer to part (b) be in affirmative, will the Government be pleased to state the reasons for taking this step ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I would refer the Honourable Member to the answer I have given to Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh's question No. 1094.

†1120*.

NUMBER OF BIHARIS ADMITTED INTO THE ARMY AFTER THE GREAT WAR.

1121. Mr. Siddheswar Sinha : Will the Government be pleased to state the number of Biharis admitted into the Army after the Great War year by year ?

Mr. G. M. Young : The Honourable Member's attention is invited to the statement laid on the table in reply to starred question No. 25, dated the 27th January 1927. Since that statement was compiled, that is to say, during the period from the 1st October 1926 to the 30th June 1927, one combatant and three non-combatants have been recruited from Bihar and Orissa.

† Not put at the meeting, but the question and answer thereto will be found at page 4567 of these proceedings.

BIHARIS IN THE ARMY IN INDIA RESERVE OF OFFICERS.

1122 *Mr. Siddheswar Sinha : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state the number of (i) Europeans and Anglo-Indians, (ii) Biharis, (iii) Indians other than Biharis, in the Army in India Reserve of Officers as it is composed at present, category by category ?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state the number of Bihari applicants for these, category by category, and the reasons for the non-acceptance of the application if any ?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to state the number of Biharis made permanent in the Army in India Reserve of Officers ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) I will furnish the Honourable Member with a statement giving the required information.

(b) 16 applicants from Bihar and Orissa have been rejected; one because he was ineligible under the rules, another because he was medically unfit and the rest because they were considered unsuitable.

Government have no information as to the categories for which these gentlemen applied.

(c) Three.

GRANT OF MARRIAGE AND HOUSE ALLOWANCES TO OFFICERS OF THE INDIAN MEDICAL SERVICE.

1123. *Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : (a) Will Government please state whether it is a fact that marriage allowance and house allowance are given to officers in the Indian Army as also in the R. A. M. C.?

(b) Are such allowances given to officers in the I. M. S. both temporary and permanent ? If not, why not ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) Yes.

(b) No. The reason, as far as concerns permanent officers, is that the rates of pay of permanent officers of the Indian Medical Service are consolidated rates, while those of other Indian Army officers and of officers of the Royal Army Medical Corps serving in India are made up of basic pay and allowances on the same system as rates of pay in the United Kingdom.

Temporary officers of the Indian Medical Service are engaged under a contract which provides for consolidated rates of pay in their case also.

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : Will the Honourable Member kindly tell me, in so far as the consolidated pay is concerned, how much of that consolidated pay goes towards house and marriage allowances ?

Mr. G. M. Young : If my Honourable friend will put that question down on the paper I shall be very glad to answer it.

NUMBER AND TONNAGE OF STEAMERS AND SAILING VESSELS REGISTERED IN INDIA.

1124. *Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : Will Government be pleased to state separately the number of the steamers and sailing vessels, together with their gross registered tonnage, registered at various Indian ports ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : The only information available is that contained in Table No. 11 (Shipping) of Volume II of the " Annual Statement of the Sea-borne Trade of British India with the British Empire and Foreign Countries ", to which I would invite the attention of the Honourable Member.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : In view of the fact that their information is inadequate, will the Government of India kindly see their way to get more information on the subject from the various ports ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I am prepared to consider that, Sir.

CONVENING OF A SUB-CONFERENCE TO CONSIDER QUESTIONS AFFECTING MERCHANT SHIPPING LEGISLATION IN THE EMPIRE.

1125. Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : (a) Will Government be pleased to state the date, when a Sub-Conference, as recommended by the Imperial Conference of 1926, is to be called to consider all questions affecting Merchant Shipping legislation in the Empire ?

(b) Are Government aware that it was decided at the Imperial Conference that due representation should be given to Indian shipping interests at that Sub-Conference ?

(c) If the answer to (b) be in the affirmative, will Government please state if it is their intention to act up to that suggestion in selecting the Indian representatives to the proposed Sub-Conference ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : (a) So far as the Government are aware, no date has yet been decided on.

(b) The Inter-Imperial Relations Committee of the Imperial Conference, 1926, recommended that India, in view of the importance of her shipping interests, should be given full representation on the proposed Sub-Conference, on an equal footing with Great Britian and the Dominions.

(c) The selection of the Indian representations will be considered when the Sub-Conference has been decided on.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : When the selection is made, will the Government be good enough to see to it that India is represented at this Conference by a national Indian and not by a non-Indian ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : Government will certainly take into account that question, Sir, and the known wishes of a large number of Members of this House.

RESOLUTION REGARDING THE PROHIBITION OF LIQUOR.

1126. Khan Bahadur Makhdum Syed Rajan Bakhsh Shah : (a) Have the Government taken any steps to give effect to the Resolution passed by this Assembly regarding the prohibition of liquor ?

(b) If not, will the Government please state reasons for not doing so ?

(c) Do the Government intend to give effect to the Resolution forthwith ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : This question (No. 1126) has already been answered†.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Are the Government aware that it is derogatory to the principles of the Standing Rules and Orders of this Assembly as also to the interests of the Legislative Department to put in the same question twice (vide Question No. 1062)—this question having been asked half an hour ago and answered. Is it not the rule that unless six months have elapsed no question can be repeated in this House ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I would suggest that it is also undesirable to put a supplementary question twice. (Laughter.)

REPRESENTATION OF MUSLIMS IN THE INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE.

1127. Khan Bahadur Makhdum Syed Rajan Bakhsh Shah : (a) Is it a fact that the Muslim population is about $\frac{1}{4}$th of the total population of India, and that only 10 Muslims out of 109 Indian recruits for the I. C. S. from 1922 to 1927 have been selected ?

(b) Is it a fact that out of 109 posts for the I. C. S., 81 have gone to the Hindus, 7 to the Indian Christians, 2 to the Sikhs, 9 to the Burmese and 10 to the Muslims from 1922 to 1927, and if so, is this not a violation of the solemn promise given by the Government that no undue predominance to any community will be given in the services ?

(c) Are Government prepared to take steps to give due and proportionate representation to the Muslims by increasing their number in the said service henceforth and to make up the deficiency ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) Yes.

(b) The figures quoted by the Honourable Member are those which I gave him on the 29th August last. There has been no violation of any promise. The latest pronouncements of Government on this subject is that of the 2nd March, 1925. Speaking in another place my predecessor pointed out that Government had accepted the principle that steps should be taken to secure that the services are not unduly overweighted with the representatives of any one community or province, and in order to give effect to this principle he announced the procedure of reserving, if necessary, one-third of the direct Indian recruitment to the Indian Civil Service for the redress of inequalities. This procedure has been strictly adhered to ever since.

(c) It was made clear by Sir Alexander Muddiman in the statement I have already mentioned that it was not possible for Government to give proportionate representation to any particular minority community.

MISS MAYO'S BOOK "MOTHER INDIA."

1128. Mr. M. S. Aney : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the following special message first published in The Hindustan, a Gujrati daily of Bombay and since published in all the prominent Indian newspapers :

> "Many of the British M. Ps. have been provided with a free copy of Miss Katherine Mayo's book "Mother India."

† For answer to this question, see answer to question No. 1062 at page 4521 of these proceedings.

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state whether free copies of the same book have been supplied to any officials and the Anglo-Indian publicists in India also ?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to say whether the Publicity Department of the Government of India has been supplied with a copy of the book or not ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) Government have seen the report, and have ascertained from the Secretary of State that no copies of the book have been distributed by the India Office or at public expense.

(b) Not so far as Government are aware.

(c) No.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : May I know if Government are aware that Miss Mayo is connected with the British Library of Literature in New York ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Will the Honourable Member kindly repeat the question ?

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : May I know if Government can tell us what connection Miss Mayo has with the British Library of Literature in New York ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I am afraid I have no information on the point. If the Honourable Member will put down the question, I shall endeavour to answer it.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : I will answer the question. The answer is that she has none.

Mr. B. Das : Do I take it that Miss Mayo was not at all helped by any of the Provincial Governments or the Government of India in the matter of collection of materials for her book, or that she was not at all helped by the Secretary of State by the supply of any materials ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Miss Mayo received no more assistance from any officials of Government than would be accorded to any other private person.

Lala Lajpat Rai : The question is whether she was given any assistance. The question I wish to ask is, did the Publicity Department of the Government of India give any assistance to Miss Mayo in connection with the materials for her book ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I am not aware that the Government of India gave any assistance of any sort to Miss Mayo, but if she did get any assistance, it was no more than would ordinarily be extended to any other member of the public.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : May I ask if the Government of India's Publicity Department supplied Miss Mayo with any photographs that are published in her New York edition ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I have no information on the point, but shall inquire.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : The answer is in the negative.

Mr. K. Ahmed : In view of the fact that the Honourable Member has admitted that no more than ordinary courtesy was shown to Miss Mayo and no more materials were supplied than would ordinarily be supplied to a member of the public, do Government propose to supply us with the precise extent of the help accorded ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I did not say that any materials were supplied to Miss Mayo. If ordinary courtesy was extended to her, I think there would be no reasonable objection on that ground.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : May I know exactly what assistance was given to her, whether by way of courtesy or by way of departmental accommodation ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Miss Mayo spent some months in the country. I am afraid I cannot give all the details the Honourable Member requires.

Lala Lajpat Rai : Are Government aware that Miss Mayo was a guest of a Superintendent of Police in Lahore and got information from the Head of the Publicity Department of the Government of India ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : No, Sir.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Has the Honourable Member read the book himself, and has the Honourable Member read both the editions, American and English ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I have only read one edition.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Is it a fact that there is some difference between the two editions, and that things uncomplimentary to Muhammadans were left out in the English edition ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : So far as I am aware, there is no difference in the letter press.

Mr. M. S. Aney : Is it a fact that Miss Mayo was furnished by some officials with materials before they were actually published, and that the materials were checked by some officials before they were actually published ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : No, Sir.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Has the Publicity Department compared the two editions ?

Mr. President : I am prepared to let Mr. Coatman answer the question.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : We would like to hear Mr. Coatman.

Mr. J. Coatman : I have read both the editions, Sir, but I can not say that I have compared them as one would compare two different texts ; and I am not conscious of any material difference between the two editions.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Has the Honourable Member been supplied with complimentary copies of both the editions ?

Mr. J. Coatman : No, Sir.

Lala Lajpat Rai : Is the Honourable Member aware that a statement has been made in the Press that a C. I. D. Inspector asked an Indian gentleman in Lahore to see Miss Mayo ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The statement was made in the Press, but my information is that it is not correct.

Mr. B. Das : Will the Honourable Member verify it ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I have already made an inquiry on the subject.

Mr. M. R. Jayakar : Having regard to their present experience, will the Government consider the advisability of being more careful in future about extending such courtesies to American tourists ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I cannot agree that the Government has been in any respect careless in the matter.

Lala Lajpat Rai : Are Government aware that Mahatma Gandhi and Miss Bose of the Victoria Girls School in Lahore have entirely repudiated the statements Miss Mayo put into their mouths in her book ?

Munshi Iswar Saran : Will the Honourable Member kindly state the nature of the courtesy they extended to Miss Mayo ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I have already answered that question.

Munshi Iswar Saran : As I am at a distance, I could not hear it fully.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I said Miss Mayo spent some months in India and I am not in a position to give the complete details asked for.

Munshi Iswar Saran : I do not want details ; I want to know the broad features of the courtesy.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I have already answered the question.

PERIOD FOR WHICH A POSTMASTER GENERAL RETAINS CHARGE OF A POSTAL CIRCLE.

1129. Mr. M. S. Aney : Will the Government be pleased to state what is the average period for which a Postmaster General is retained in charge of any Postal Circle in India ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : No definite period is prescribed.

APPEALS FROM THE ORDERS OF MR. BOOTH, POSTMASTER GENERAL, PUNJAB AND NORTH-WEST FRONTIER PROVINCE.

1130 Mr. M. S. Aney : Will the Government be pleased to state—

(a) the number of appeals received by the Director General of Posts and Telegraphs from the orders passed by Mr. Booth from the time he assumed charge of his office in the Punjab to the end of June 1927, and (b) the number of appeals allowed by the Director General or the Government of India ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The information is being collected and will be furnished to the Honourable Member in due course.

RETENTION OF MR. BOOTH AS POSTMASTER GENERAL, PUNJAB AND NORTH-WEST FRONTIER PROVINCE.

1131. *Mr. M. S. Aney : Will the Government be pleased to say whether there are any special reasons for keeping Mr. Booth in charge of his office of Postmaster General in the Punjab for an unduly long period ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : There are no special reasons. The posting of officers to particular appointments is a matter entirely within the discretion of Government.

Mr. M. S. Aney : Is the Honourable Member able to say how long Mr. Booth has been in the Punjab ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Will the Honourable Member kindly repeat his question ?

Mr. M. S. Aney : Will the Honourable Member be able to state how long Mr. Booth has been in the Punjab ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Mr. Booth has probably been in the Punjab for five years or more, I cannot say precisely.

Mr. M. S. Aney : Is that the ordinary period for which Postmasters General are retained in a province ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : There is no fixed tenure to the appointment of Postmaster General in a particular circle.

Mr. M. S. Aney : Can it be said that at least five years or something more than that is the ordinary period for which these persons occupy this post ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I cannot give any definite answer to that question because I have not tried to examine the periods spent by Postmasters General in particular circles in the past.

NUMBER AND NATIONALITY OF PILOTS IN THE BENGAL PILOT SERVICE.

1132. *Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : Will the Government be pleased to state the number of candidates admitted into the Bengal Pilot Service year by year from the year 1910 up to March 1927, giving separately the figures of those who were recruited in India and those who were recruited in England as well as of those who were Indians and those who were non-Indians ?

NUMBER AND NATIONALITY OF PILOTS IN THE BENGAL PILOT SERVICE.

1133. *Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : Will the Government be pleased to state the present number of pilots in the Bengal Pilot Service giving separate figures of those who are Indians and those who are non-Indians and those who are recruited in India and those who are recruited in England ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : With your permission, Sir, I will reply to questions Nos. 1132 and 1133 together.

The information asked for is being obtained from the Government of Bengal and will be supplied to the Honourable Member on receipt.

ANNUAL ADMINISTRATION REPORTS OF THE ORDNANCE AND CLOTHING FACTORIES.

1134. *Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Is it a fact that the annual administration reports of the Ordnance and Clothing Factories, under the control of the Army Department are considered to be confidential documents by the Government of India ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to explain why these reports are treated as confidential ?

(c) Will they be pleased to state whether they will treat these documents as public hereafter ?

(d) If these documents contain any information which must be treated as confidential, are Government prepared to issue annual reports of the administration of these factories omitting such information as must be treated as confidential ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) Yes.

(b) Because they contain information about military equipment and preparations

(c) I am afraid that would be impossible.

(d) The administration reports of these military establishments necessarily consist of information from which readiness for war can be gauged.

Mr. N. M Joshi : May I ask whether these reports are printed or not ?

Mr. G. M. Young : They are, Sir.

Mr N. M. Joshi : May I ask whether it is very difficult for any people to secure these reports ?

Mr G. M. Young : I hope so, Sir.

INDIAN ORDNANCE FACTORIES LISTS OF ESTABLISHMENTS.

1135. *Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Is it a fact that the Indian Ordnance Factories lists containing the names of the persons engaged in these factories are treated as confidential documents by Governments ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to explain why they are treated as confidential ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to state whether they propose to treat these documents as public ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) The answer is in the negative.

(b) and (c). Therefore do not arise.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : I hope, Sir, the Honourable Member will supply me with a copy. When the Honourable Member wrote to me a few days ago he said that the report was confidential.

Mr. G. M. Young : No, Sir, when I wrote to the Honourable Member I drew a distinction between the documents referred to in this question and the documents referred to in the previous question. I shall be happy to supply him with copies.

ESTABLISHMENTS OF ORDNANCE AND CLOTHING FACTORIES.

1136. *Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to give a statement giving the following information regarding the Ordnance and Clothing Factories :

(a) Names of the factories,

(b) Number of permanent establishment in each,

(c) Number of temporary employees in each,

(d) Number of what are called extra temporary employees on monthly salaries,

(e) Number of extra temporary employees on daily wages,

(f) The privileges regarding pension, provident and gratuity allowances to each of these classes of employees,

(g) privileges allowed to each of these classes of employees regarding casual, privilege and sick leave ?

TEMPORARY EMPLOYEES IN ORDNANCE AND CLOTHING FACTORIES.

1137. *Mr. N. M. Joshi : Will Government be pleased to give a statement showing for each of the Ordnance and Clothing Factories under the Army Department, the number of temporary employees and the number of extra temporary employees, who have served more than 20 years, more than 10 years and more than 5 years ?

Mr. G. M. Young : With your permission, Sir, I propose to answer this question and No. 1137 together.

I will furnish the Honourable Member separately with statements giving the information which he desires.

ESTABLISHMENT OF A PROVIDENT FUND FOR, AND GRANT OF GRATUITIES TO, TEMPORARY AND EXTRA TEMPORARY STAFF EMPLOYED IN THE ORDNANCE AND CLOTHING FACTORIES.

1138. *Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether they propose to provide (i) provident fund, and (ii) gratuity to the temporary and extra temporary establishments employed in the Ordnance and Clothing Factories under the Army Department ?

(b) If so, will Government be pleased to state when such provision will be made and whether all the workers will be benefited by it ?

Mr. G. M. Young : The question of establishing a provident fund, to include a contribution by Government, is under consideration.

POSITION OF THE CLERICAL ESTABLISHMENT OF THE ORDNANCE AND CLOTHING FACTORIES.

1139. *Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether they had made any inquiries either through a special officer named Coburn and a Committee presided over by General Kenyon regarding the position of the clerical establishment employed in the Ordnance and Clothing Factories controlled by the Army Department ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state whether the reports on the inquiries have been received and whether they propose to publish these reports ? If not, why ?

(c) Is it a fact that the Government of India had recommended to the Secretary of State the adoption of the proposals of the Kenyon Committee and that the Secretary of State had sanctioned the proposals in March 1924 ; if so, will Government be pleased to state what effect they had given to the recommendations of the Kenyon Committee as approved by the Government of India and sanctioned by the Secretary of State ?

(d) If so far no action has been taken, will they be pleased to state whether they will do so at an early date, and if not, why not ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) No inquiry about the position of the clerical establishments in Army Factories was made either by Mr. Coburn or by the Kenyon Committee. The latter investigated the condition of Ordnance Factories after the war.

(b) Government do not propose to publish the report of the Kenyon Committee, mainly because it contemplates the establishment of Factories of a size and type which would be far more expensive than the present needs of the army could justify.

(c) Such recommendations of the Kenyon Committee as apply to the existing Factories have been adopted and given effect to with the sanction of the Secretary of State.

(d) Does not arise.

THROWING OPEN OF CERTAIN GAZETTED APPOINTMENTS TO THE CLERICAL ESTABLISHMENT OF ORDNANCE AND CLOTHING FACTORIES.

1140. Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether they had received in 1924 a memorial from the clerical establishment of the Ordnance and Clothing Factories under the control of the Army Department ?

(b) Is it a fact that in the Ordnance and Clothing Factories controlled by the Army Department there are no posts of gazetted rank generally open to the members of the clerical establishment ?

(c) Is it a fact that the members of the clerical establishments in the Ordnance and Clothing Factory Department had asked in their memorial that certain posts of gazetted rank be thrown open to them ?

(d) Will Government be pleased to state whether they propose to accede to this request and, if not, why not ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) Yes.

(b) All posts in the Factories are open to qualified men, but none are open to unqualified men.

(c) Yes.

(d) No. The attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the reply given on the 18th February 1924 to questions Nos. 351 and 353, and on the 2nd September 1925, to question No. 510.

CREATION OF POSTS OF PERSONAL ASSISTANTS TO THE CHIEF OFFICERS OF ORDNANCE FACTORIES.

1141. Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Will Government be pleased to state if the Kenyon Committee recommended the creation of a post of Personal Assistant to the Chief Officer of each of the Ordnance Factories ?

(b) Has this recommendation been given effect to ?

(c) If not, will Government be pleased to state when they mean to do so ?

(d) If the reply to (b) is in the affirmative, will they be pleased to state how many of these posts are held by men who have risen from the clerical position ? Was not this recommended by the Kenyon Committee ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) Yes.

(b) No.

(c) Not until the army is so increased as to justify the appointment.

(d) Does not arise. But I may mention that the Kenyon Committee specifically recommended the appointment of men with qualifications not to be found in the clerical establishments.

APPOINTMENT OF CHIEF CLERKS IN ORDNANCE FACTORIES.

1142. Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Will Government be pleased to state if the Kenyon Committee recommended the appointment of a Chief Clerk in each of the Ordnance Factories ?

(b) Are Government aware that the recommendation of the appointment of a Chief Clerk was meant for centralising the administrative work in the Ordnance Factories ?

(c) If so, will they be pleased to state whether the recommendation has been acted upon ? If not, why not ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) Yes.

(b) No. The Committee stated that they were unable to make any detailed recommendations, but they desired to attract a higher class of men who would work initially as Production Staff.

(c) The Honourable Member is referred to the answers given to parts (c) and (d) to question No. 1139.

REVISED SCALE OF PAY FOR SOME CLASSES OF THE SUBORDINATE ESTABLISHMENT IN ORDNANCE FACTORIES.

1143. Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Will Government be pleased to state if sanction was received for a revised scale of pay in 1920 for some classes of the subordinate establishment in Ordnance Factories ?

(b) If so, will they be pleased to state if the revised scale is found satisfactory ?

(c) If the reply to (b) is in the affirmative, will Government be pleased to state whether the increase granted to clerks is commensurate with the increase in the pay of other ranks ?

(d) Will they be pleased to state if they propose to revise the scale in the near future ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) and (b). Yes.

(c) There is no uniform standard of comparison. I understand that the average increase in clerical establishment was approximately the same as the average increase all round.

(d) The Honourable Member is referred to my answer to part (d) of question No. 1140.

PENSION AND PROVIDENT FUND FOR SECTION CLERKS IN ORDNANCE FACTORIES.

1144. Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Will Government be pleased to state if the section clerks in the Ordnance Factories are entitled to pension and provident fund ?

(b) Are Government aware that they are classed as permanent ?

(c) If the reply to (a) is in the negative, will they be pleased to state why they are not entitled to pension and provident fund as in other services ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) No. But if promoted to higher grade, they count their service as permanent section clerks for pension.

(b) No. A minimum nucleus sufficient to keep the Factories in existence if there is no work are classed as permanent. The remainder are on the extra temporary establishment and are taken on as required by the state of work.

(c) Clerks of various other departments in similar positions are not so entitled, but Ordnance Factory clerks get the special concession referred to in the answer to part (a) of this question.

PROVISION OF QUARTERS FOR CLERKS OF ORDNANCE AND CLOTHING FACTORIES.

1145. Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Will Government be pleased to state if most of the permanent establishment of the Ordnance and Clothing Factories is provided with quarters by Government ?

(b) If so, are Government aware that the clerks are not provided with quarters by Government ?

(c) If so will Government be pleased to state why such distinction is made ?

(d) Will Government be pleased to state if they are thinking of providing quarters or paying separate allowances, in view of the fact that the Ordnance and Clothing factories are generally situated at a long distance from cities ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) There is a shortage of quarters for all staff, and quarters are being built as funds permit.

(b) Some clerks are provided with quarters.

(c) Does not arise.

(d) Quarters are being built as practicable. Government takes into account the travelling facilities existent within a reasonable distance of the factories.

WORKING HOURS OF CLERKS IN ORDNANCE FACTORIES.

1146. Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Will Government be pleased to state what is the number of working hours for clerks in Ordnance factories ?

(b) Have they at any time ruled that the maximum number of hours should be six ?

(c) If so, will they be pleased to state whether it is not a fact that a certain number of clerks have to work from 7-30 a.m. to 4-15 p.m. ? If so, why ?

(d) Do Government propose to inquire into the matter ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) The ordinary production working hours of the factory.

(b) The answer is in the negative, because a factory is not a secretariat office.

(c) Yes. These are the ordinary factory working hours.

(d) Does not arise.

GRANT OF OVERTIME TO ALL THE CLERICAL ESTABLISHMENT IN ORDNANCE FACTORIES.

1147. Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Will Government be pleased to state if overtime work is paid extra in Ordnance Factories ?

(b) If so, will they be pleased to state why it is allowed only to clerks in a particular branch ?

(c) Will they be pleased to state if they are prepared to extend it to all the clerical establishment in the Ordnance Factories ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a), (b) and (c). Overtime work is paid for as laid down in the Indian Factories Act, with certain extra concessions. It is restricted to men actually employed on systematic overtime, ordered on account of a rush of production and Government do not propose to extend it beyond this restriction. The limit above which overtime pay is admissible in Ordnance Factories is only 44¾ hours a week.

COUNTING OF TEMPORARY SERVICE TOWARDS PENSION BY TEMPORARY EMPLOYEES OF THE PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT WHO ARE SUBSEQUENTLY MADE PERMANENT.

1148. Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether in the P. W. Department a large number of people are employed only in a temporary capacity, sometimes for as long a period as 20 years continuously ?

(b) Is it a fact that when the temporary men are made permanent, the period of temporary service is not counted either for pension or for provident fund ?

(c) Are Government aware that this practice causes a great loss to the employees of the Department ?

(d) Are Government aware that the practice gives rise to much discontent among the employed ?

(e) Are Government prepared to consider the question of modifying the practice by giving some benefit of long temporary service to the employees of the Department at the time of retirement ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : So far as the temporary staff employed under Provincial Governments is concerned the subject matter of the questions is not primarily the concern of the Governor-General in Council. As regards the temporary staff paid from the central revenues the replies are as follows :

(a) The temporary staff employed is by no means large.

(b) Yes, but exceptions are made in deserving cases.

(c), (d) and (e). The replies are in the negative.

REPORT OF COLONEL NEEDHAM, I.M.S., ON THE REORGANISATION OF MEDICAL ARRANGEMENTS ON THE NORTH-WESTERN RAILWAY.

1149. Lieutenant-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : (a) Will the Honourable Member please state whether the Report submitted to the Government of India on the Railway Medical Service by Colonel Needham, I. M. S., has been approved and whether it has been submitted for the approval of the Secretary of State for India ?

(b) If the answer to (a) is in the affirmative, will Government please state :

(a) when the service will commence to function, and

(b) if the Government intend to place the Report before the Legislative Assembly for its opinion before it commences to operate ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Colonel Needham submitted a report not on the Railway Medical Service but on the reorganisation of medical arrangements on the North-Western Railway. His recommendations have been accepted in the main and proposals to give effect to them will be placed before the Standing Finance Committee for Railways. Colonel Needham also gave certain advice in regard to the Railway Medical Service generally, but no decisions have yet been arrived at on this advice.

UNDESIRABLE ADVERTISEMENTS IN THE BENGAL NAGPUR RAILWAY TIME TABLE.

1150. Pandit Nilakantha Das : Referring to Bengal Nagpur Railway Time Table No. 110 from 1st April 1927 onwards and numbers before and after :

(a) Has the attention of the Railway Board been attracted to the undesirable advertisements specially on the first and fourth cover pages of the Time Table ?

(b) Have they noticed the advertisement of the Tipsy John Haig with a whisky glass and the almost naked girl with Imperial Special Cigarette in hand attracting the attention of the passengers and the public by their gay colours and appearance ?

(c) Are they prepared to take steps to put a stop to such advertisements ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) and (b). They have seen the advertisements.

(c) They do not consider any action necessary.

Pandit Nilakantha Das : I hope they have got a copy of the advertisement and they will show it for the inspection of the House.

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : If Members of the House like to see the advertisement, they can for 2 or 4 annas purchase a copy of the time table.

Pandit Nilakantha Das : I have got a copy. Is this not the book (showing the advertisement) ? This is John Haig clad in bright colours with a bottle of whisky and this is the gay girl with Imperial Special cigarettes in her hand. Will they like.....

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Did the Publicity Department draw the attention of Miss Mayo to this advertisement ?

Pandit Nilakantha Das : May I know if this is the indication of the way in which our railway companies are making money ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I doubt myself if this advertisement has added to the sales of the time table.

Mr. B. Das : Will the Honourable Member consult the puritanic element of this House in future advertisements on railway time tables ?

EXPENDITURE INCURRED BY THE SELF-GOVERNING DOMINIONS ON NAVAL ESTABLISHMENT.

1151. Mr. M. R. Jayakar : (a) Will Government be pleased to state the expenditure incurred by each of the self-governing Dominions under the Empire such as Canada, Australia and the Union of South Africa on naval establishment ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state the strength of the Navy of each Dominion and whether it is officered by the colonials or by British naval officers ?

(c) What facilities for naval education are provided by the Colonies to their subjects ? What expenditure is incurred by each ? How many naval cadets are trained each year, at what cost and in what institutions ?

(d) What control is exercised over this Colonial Navy by the Army Council of Great Britain or by the British Government ?

Mr. G. M. Young : The Government of India have no official information on these subjects, but I will endeavour to find out what works of reference are likely to contain such information, and communicate the result to my Honourable friend.

ADMISSION OF INDIANS FOR TRAINING IN ROYAL NAVAL ESTABLISHMENTS AND COLONIAL TRAINING ESTABLISHMENTS.

1152. Mr. M. R. Jayakar : Are Indians freely admitted to naval and colonial centres such as Bristol, Plymouth, Devonport, etc., in England ?

Mr. G. M. Young : At present Indians are not admitted for training in Royal Naval Establishments. The Government of India have no information in regard to Colonial Training Establishments. On the inauguration of the Royal Indian Navy, Indians, who pass the necessary entrance examination, will be trained for that service for a period of about three years in Naval Training Establishments in England.

NUMBER OF INDIAN AND EUROPEAN OFFICERS IN THE ROYAL INDIAN MARINE.

1153. Mr. M. R. Jayakar : (a) Will Government be pleased to state how many Indian officers and how many European officers are employed under the Marine Department, in all ranks such as general supervision dock-yard marine, marine stores and coal ?

(b) What is the approximate expenditure incurred for the last 5 years on the Marine Service ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) The total number of commissioned and gazetted officers serving in the Royal Indian Marine is at present 121 including 30 in civil employment ; all these are Europeans

(b) The net expenditure on the Royal Indian Marine incurred during each of the last five years is about 107 lakhs, 72 lakhs, 63 lakhs, 52½ lakhs and 49 lakhs, respectively.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Have the Government ever considered the question of seeing that some Indians are included among these officers ?

Mr. G. M. Young : Yes, Sir.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : What is the result, Sir ?

Mr. G. M. Young : The result is the scheme of the Royal Indian Navy, by which 33-1|3 per cent. of the vacancies will be reserved for Indians.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : In view of the fact that all the officers of the Royal Indian Marine to-day are Europeans, will the Government consider the advisability of taking in future as apprentices only Indian cadets at 3 per year, so that in a short time we might have a decent amount of Indianisation ?

Mr. G. M. Young : Sir, I am afraid I do not understand the question. There is no such thing as apprentices in the Navy.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : May I repeat the question ? In view of the fact that all the officers of the Royal Indian Marine to-day are Europeans and further in view of the fact that it is the intention of the Government to transform the Royal Indian Marine into the Royal Indian Navy, will the Government consider the advisability of recruiting only Indians as cadets in future or providing training for them, so that we might have Indianisation at a rapid pace, simultaneously maintaining the British character because the European officers have no Indian colleagues to-day ?

Mr. G. M. Young : Sir, I really think that that question is long enough for me to ask to see it on paper.

Mr. M. R. Jayakar : Are there any political reasons for keeping this branch of the public service entirely in the hands of Europeans ?

Mr. G. M. Young : The Department is not being kept entirely in the hands of Europeans. There was never any actual bar to the appointment of Indians, but so far as I know none have ever applied.

Mr. M. R. Jayakar : Is there any particular reason for not having Indians in this Department ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I have explained that there is no such reason. A third of the vacancies are being reserved for Indians in future.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Have Government found out why Indians never apply ?

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Will the Honourable Member be good enough to tell us what the qualifications are ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I could not state all the qualifications in the compass of an answer to a supplementary question, but if my Honourable friend will give me notice, I can supply him with the information.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : May I ask what facilities have been offered to Indians for entering into this branch of the public service ?

Mr. G. M. Young : Does my Honourable friend refer to the new Navy or the Royal Indian Marine ?

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : The Royal Indian Marine.

Mr. M. R. Jayakar : Do Government ever advertise for any of these places ?

Mr. G. M. Young : No, Sir. I do not think Government have ever advertised for Indians for the Royal Indian Marine.

Lala Lajpat Rai : Have the Government shown any desire to find out why Indians have not applied for the Royal Indian Marine ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I do not know, Sir.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : Will the Government be pleased to take steps to see that some Indians get appointed to the Royal Indian Marine ?

Mr. G. M. Young : As I have already explained several times Government have taken steps in this direction.

Mr. M. R. Jayakar : My Honourable friend just now spoke of qualifications. Is the presence of a large amount of pigment in the skin a disqualification ?

CESSATION OF THE ANNUAL CONTRIBUTION TO THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT ON THE STARTING OF THE INDIAN NAVY.

1154. Mr. M. R. Jayakar : Will Government state if in the event of an Indian Navy being started the annual contribution of 10 lakhs to the British Government will cease to be paid ?

Mr. G. M. Young : The answer is in the negative. The Government of India agree with the opinion expressed by the Departmental Committee on the Re-organization of the Royal Indian Marine, that it would be premature to discuss this question until, at the earliest, the new Indian Navy is in a position to perform an appreciable portion of those services which are rendered to India by His Majesty's Navy, and in respect of which the contribution is paid.

ENQUIRY INTO THE LOCOMOTIVE INDUSTRY.

1155. *Mr. B. Das : (a) Referring to the answer given by Sir Charles Innes to question No. 406, dated 18th September 1924, will Government be pleased to state whether any official was deputed to the United Kingdom ?

(b) Has he submitted a report to Government ?

(c) Did Government place this report before the Standing Finance Committee ? If not, why not ?

(d) Was this report asked for by the Peninsular Locomotive Co., Ltd. ?

(e) Was this report asked for by the Tariff Board ?

(f) Will Government be pleased to place that report on the table ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) An officer on leave was deputed to prepare a report for the consideration of the Railway Board.

(b) Yes.

(c) No concrete proposals, which could be placed before the Standing Finance Committee, were found in the report.

(d) Yes.

(e) Yes.

(f) No. It is a purely departmental document and I may add that the Railway Board did not accept the conclusions arrived at in it as accurate.

CONSTRUCTION OF RAILWAY WAGONS AND UNDERFRAMES.

1156. *Mr. B. Das : Will Government be pleased to state what orders have been placed with each of the following firms for construction and delivery during 1927-28 indicating the value as well as quantity :

Messrs. Jessop and Company, Limited ;

Messrs. Burn and Company, Limited ; and Messrs. The Indian Standard Wagon Company, Limited ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : It is presumed that the Honourable Member is referring to construction of railway wagons and underframes, the figures for which are as follows :

	No.	Approximate amount of contracts.
Jessop and Coy.	393	30 lakhs.
Burn and Coy.	510	39¼ lakhs.
Indian Standard Wagon Company	1,268	34 lakhs.

Mr. M. S. Aney : Will the Honourable Member kindly say what was the date fixed in the agreement for the delivery of these wagons by each of these companies ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The Honourable Member, I am afraid, must put down the question. There are about 20 or 30 contracts for the construction of these wagons, etc., and he will hardly expect me to remember all the dates.

Mr. M. S. Aney : Will the Honourable Member supply this information some time later ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I must ask the Honourable Member to put down a question.

MANUFACTURE OF LOCOMOTIVES IN THE BOMBAY, BARODA AND CENTRAL INDIA RAILWAY WORKSHOP AT AJMER.

1157. Mr. B. Das : (a) Will Government be pleased to state the cost of each of the seventeen locomotives for the metre gauge, which were shown as having been built at Ajmer in the Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway workshop, in the statement given in answer to starred question No. 669 ?

(b) For how many years has Ajmer been manufacturing locomotives ?

(c) Is the work of manufacturing locomotives proceeding at Ajmer still ?

(d) If so, what was the objection to locomotive manufacture being started in India ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The information is being obtained and will be furnished to the Honourable Member on receipt.

PURCHASE OF LOCOMOTIVES IN THE YEARS 1920-21 TO 1927-28.

1158. Mr. B. Das : Will Government be pleased to give a statement corresponding to the statement given in reply to starred question No. 669 for locomotives obtained during the years 1920-21, 1921-22, 1922 23, 1923-24, 1924-25, 1926-27 and 1927-28, and state how many locomotives are on order for the current year on renewals account ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The information is being obtained and will be furnished to the Honourable Member on receipt.

TIMELY WARNINGS GIVEN BY THE METEOROLOGICAL DEPARTMENT REGARDING THE HEAVY RAINFALL IN GUJARAT AND ORISSA IN JULY LAST.

1159. Mr. B. Das : Will Government be pleased to state if the Meteorological Department did foreshadow the heavy rainfall in Gujarat and Orissa and if timely warnings were given in each case before the occurrence of floods in July last ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Timely warnings were given by the Meteorological Department in both cases and these warnings were much appreciated by the local officials.

Mr. B. Das : May I inquire, Sir, if these warnings were given only to Government officials or were they also supplied to the public ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : They were furnished by the Meteorological Department to Government officials. It was the duty of the latter to publish them if they considered that such publication was of any use.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Have the Government information as to whether in these cases the warnings were communicated to the people at large by the officials concerned ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I have no information on that point.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Does the Honourable Member's department consider itself concerned about this matter—as to whether the warnings reach the people at large at all ? Or is it only a matter for the local officials to decide ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : So far as the Meteorological Department is concerned, the communications have to be addressed to the local officials. It is the function of the latter to publish the information, if they consider that such publication is likely to be of any use.

Mr. B. Das : Is it not a fact that in England the Meteorological Department not only gives such warnings to the people and the Government but that their officials also visit the countryside where floods and heavy rains occur ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I have no information on that point.

Mr. K. Ahmed : In view of the fact that the Honourable Member's Department (the Meteorological Department) has failed to serve the purpose for which it is maintained and therefore it is a burden on the public revenue, does the Honourable Member propose to exercise his ability much more than he is doing so that the very object for which this Department is maintained may not be frustrated ?

DELAY IN THE RECEIPT BY MEMBERS OF THE CENTRAL LEGISLATURE OF THE SKEEN COMMITTEE'S REPORT FROM THE CENTRAL PUBLICATION BRANCH IN CALCUTTA.

1160. Mr. H. G. Cocke : (a) Are Government aware that Members of the Central Legislature are unable to obtain copies of the Skeen Report from the Central Publication Branch of the Government of India in Calcutta except after considerable delay ?

(b) Who is in charge of the Publication Branch ? What are his qualifications ? How many assistants has he ?

(c) Is the Honourable Member-in-charge prepared to consider the desirability of making enquiries into the management or mismanagement of this office ?

(d) Are Government once more prepared to consider the desirability of opening a branch of the Central Publication Branch at Delhi and Simla during the Sessions of the Legislature ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) No. Government are informed that only two indents were received directly from individual Members of the Central Legislature and that these were complied with on the dates of receipt. If the Honourable Member will give any specific instance of delay, the matter will be investigated.

(b) Mr. J. H. Golder the permanent incumbent of the post is on leave and Mr. B. U. N. Mazumdar, Assistant Manager, who has had experience of the work of the Branch from its inception, is at present in charge. As regards Mr. Golder's qualifications the attention of the Honourable Member is invited to the reply given by me on 15th February 1927 to question No. 415 by Diwan Chaman Lall. The ministerial staff of the Central Publication Branch consists of one Assistant Manager, eight assistants and fifty-five clerks.

(c) This has already been done. Government increased substantially the strength of the Branch in October last and other steps have been taken to improve its efficiency.

(d) The question is under the consideration of Government.

Mr. M. Ruthnaswamy : Is it a fact that quite a number of Honourable Members of the Legislative Assembly are not put on the free list of the Central Publication Branch because I received a reply from the Director of the Central Publication Branch that my name was not on the free list of the Branch ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I have no information on that point. If the Honourable Member will kindly put down the question on paper, the Secretary of the Legislative Department will answer it.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Is the Honourable Member aware that the state of the accounts books in the Central Publication Branch is chaotic ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I have no information on that point.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Will the Honourable Member make inquiries ? I think the auditor of the accounts has drawn the attention of the Honourable Member to it.

Mr. H. G. Cocke : Is the Honourable Member aware that orders that were placed with the said Book Depôt of Calcutta through Messrs. Thacker, Spink and Co., were not executed at all in one case and in another case they took three to four weeks to be executed ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I am not aware of that, Sir. As I have already stated, if the Honourable Member will kindly bring to the notice of my department these specific cases instead of making general statements, I shall be quite glad to help him in securing a settlement of these matters.

APPLICATION FROM MAULVI MUHAMMAD SHAFEE, M.L.A., TO KEEP A RETAINER FOR HIS GUN.

1161. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Is it a fact that Maulvi Muhammed Shafee, M.L.A., applied to the District Magistrate, Muzaffarpur, for being allowed to keep a retainer for his gun in January last and that the said District Magistrate referred the matter to the Local Government concerned ?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state the decision arrived at by the Local Government of Bihar and Orissa and the reasons for the same ?

(c) Is it a fact that in the Patna District some College Professors and others of the same status have been allowed to keep retainers for their guns without the least objection on the part of the Bihar and Orissa Government ?

(d) Do Government propose to consider the question of issuing a notification which may make explicit provision that the Members of the Indian Legislature are entitled to keep retainers for their arms ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a), (b) and (c). The Government of India have no information on the subject.

(d) Government do not propose to extend the exemption to cover retainers, but they will consider whether the present rules cause any avoidable inconvenience.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Are Government aware that the District Magistrate, Muzaffarpur, subsequently informed Maulvi Muhammad Shafee that he was not entitled to have any retainer's licence ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I am not in possession of that information, but, as I said in reply to the Honourable Member himself, Government propose to make inquiries in the matter.

QUESTIONS NOT PUT AT THE MEETING, WITH ANSWERS TO THE SAME.

Transfers and Promotions of Assistants and Clerks between the Attached Offices and the Government of India Secretariat.

1077. Sir Hari Singh Gour : (a) Is it a fact that assistants and clerks holding permanent appointments in the Attached Offices are employed on the selection of the Public Service Commission and that their qualifications are the same as those employed in the Imperial Secretariat ?

(b) If so, are there inter-transfers and promotion of employees between the two classes of offices ?

(c) If not, why not ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) The assistants and clerks in question are recruited on the results of an examination held by the Public Service Commission. The qualifications required are, and since 1922 have been, the same as those of assistants and clerks employed in the Imperial Secretariat.

(b) Transfers and promotions between the Attached Offices and the Secretariat are permitted.

(c) Does not arise.

Scales of Pay in the Attached Offices.

1078. Sir Hari Singh Gour : Is it a fact that the scale of pay in the Attached Offices is lower than that of the Imperial Secretariat, though the employees are required to possess identical qualifications and are selected by the same authority, viz., the Public Service Commission ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Yes.

Promotion of Qualified Assistants and Clerks in the Government of India Secretariat and Attached Offices who have not passed the Requisite Examination.

1079. Sir Hari Singh Gour : (a) Is it a fact that before the institution of examinations for recruitment to the Secretariat or Attached Offices a number of assistants and clerks were employed and their names are borne on the permanent lists, but in regard to promotion their claims are overlooked on the ground that they have not passed the requisite examination ?

(b) Is it a fact that some of these permanent employees are not now eligible for passing the examination on account of age or University qualifications ?

(c) Is it a fact that departmental rules absolutely prohibit the promotion of such clerks from the lower to the upper division, even though they may be otherwise efficient and fully experienced and capable of discharging the duties of assistants ?

(d) Do the Government propose to see that these old servants are not prejudiced by the mere failure to pass the examination if their qualifications otherwise are considered sufficient for promotion ?

(e) Is it a fact that the Public Service Commission do not treat such unpassed permanent hands on the same footing as passed ones for purposes of promotion and that the Heads of Departments under the present rules treat them likewise, the result being that they are being superseded by new entrants ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) The reply to the first part is in the affirmative. All persons employed in departments at the time of the institution of examinations by the late Staff Selection Board were given an opportunity of qualifying themselves by examination, and promotion to a higher division ordinarily depended on success at the examination. In certain cases for very special reasons exemption from appearance at the examination has been granted.

(b) The facts are probably as stated.

(c) It is a general rule that clerks are not promoted from the lower to the upper division without passing the qualifying examination. As I have stated in answer to (a) above in certain cases for very special reasons exemption from appearance at the examination has been granted.

(d) I am not at present in a position to make any statement in the matter, but the point will be considered.

(e) Yes.

DISCHARGE OF LABOURERS FROM THE WORKSHOP OF THE SOUTH INDIAN RAILWAY AT TRICHINOPOLY.

1083. Mr. M. S. Sesha Iyengar : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state if it is a fact that nearly 400 labourers were sent out from the Engineering Workshop of the South Indian Railway at Trichinopoly on the 16th and 17th August this year ?

(b) If so, what are the reasons ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) and (b). 293 temporary hands who applied for work on the dates were turned away as there was no work for them.

EXEMPTION OF POSTAL EMPLOYEES WITH 20 YEARS' SERVICE FROM THE EXAMINATION FOR PROMOTION TO SELECTION GRADE APPOINTMENTS.

1084. Mr. M. S. Sesha Iyengar : Will the Government be pleased to state if they propose to exempt officials, with 20 years' service and over from the examination, newly devised for promotion to selection grade appointments, under Director-General's (of Posts and Telegraphs) G. O. No. 5, dated 19th July 1927 ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : No, Sir.

EXCLUSION OF EUROPEANS FROM THE NON-MUHAMMADAN ELECTORATES FOR THE COUNCIL OF STATE IN BENGAL.

1091. Colonel J. D. Crawford : (a) Are Government aware that Europeans in Bengal having the necessary qualifications are excluded from non-Muhammadan electorates for the Council of State whereas they are included in all other provinces ?

(b) Will Government please state the reasons, if any, for this differentiation ?

(c) Will Government consider the desirability of amending the electoral rules to remove this racial discrimination ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Government are aware of the facts brought to notice and they will be taken into consideration when the electoral rules are next revised.

TERMS OF EMPLOYMENT OF MR. MACKAY IN THE ARCHÆOLOGICAL DEPARTMENT.

1092. Kumar Ganganand Sinha : With reference to the reply given to starred question No. 762, on Thursday, the 1st September, will Government be pleased to state :

(a) Whether Mr. Mackay has been engaged on a short term contract ?

(b) If so, what are the terms of the contract ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to state whether Mr. Mackay will take precedence in the seniority list according to his pay ? If so, why ?

(d) If Mr. Mackay is engaged on a permanent footing, will Government be pleased to state how the seniority rights of those engaged before him will be safeguarded ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : (a) Mr. Mackay has been engaged for a period of two years in the first instance.

(b) A copy of the Agreement with him is placed in the library.

(c) No.

(d) Does not arise.

DUTY ON STEEL BARS OF $\frac{1}{8}$" THICKNESS.

1100. Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether steel bars $\frac{1}{8}$" thick are rolled by the Tata Iron and Steel Company, Limited, at their Jamshedpur works ?

(b) If not, are they liable to the protective duty of Rs. 37 per ton when imported from non-British sources ?

(c) What was the rate of duty on these bars after the Steel Industry Protection Act of 1924 ?

(d) What is the duty on them according to the Act of 1927 ?

(e) If the duty of 1927 is higher than that in 1924 will Government state the reason for the higher duty ?

(f) Have Government received any representation from the iron merchants against the increase ?

(g) If so, have Government referred the matter to the Tariff Board for opinion, and if so, with what result ? If not, are Government prepared to do so now ? If not, why not ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : (a) As far as the Government of India are aware steel bars $\frac{1}{8}$th inch thick are not rolled by the Tata Iron and Steel Company.

(b) Non-British bars of this thickness are liable to the protective duty of Rs. 37 per ton provided they are not under one inch wide.

(c) If of common merchant quality or designed for the reinforcing of concrete steel bars of all sizes were liable to duty at Rs. 40 per ton ; if of other qualities at 10 per cent. ad valorem.

(d) The current rates of duty on steel bars will be found in Nos. 62 and 152 of the Statutory Tariff Schedule as amended by the Steel Industry (Protection) Act, 1927.

(e) As my replies to parts (b) and (c) show, the protective duty on steel bars of $\frac{1}{8}$th inch thickness, where leviable, is less in 1927 than it was in 1924.

(f) The Government of India have received a representation from certain iron merchants on this subject.

(g) The Government of India have not referred the matter to the Tariff Board, nor do they propose to do so. I would invite the Honourable Member's attention to paragraph 112 of their last Steel Report, in which they say that one of the principles by which they were guided in making their recommendations was that the scheme of protection should include those forms of iron or steel which, though not manufactured in India, might be used in substitution for protected classes of steel unless the duty was sufficiently high to make the substitution unremunerative.

RECRUITMENT OF CHEAPER CLERICAL STAFF IN THE POSTAL DEPARTMENT.

1101. Mr. B. P. Naidu : Will the Government please state whether the cheaper clerical staff they intend to employ in Post Office work, would be recruited from efficient postmen only ? If so, do they propose to issue strict and explicit instructions in the matter ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The matter is still under consideration and suitable orders on the subject will be issued as soon as a decision is reached.

POSTAL ACCOUNTANT'S EXAMINATION.

1102. *Mr. B. P. Naidu : Is it a fact that the Postal Accountants' examination, though a public one, has not been thrown open during the last two years to all servants of the Department, but only to the nominees of the Divisional Superintendents ? Why ? Are the Government prepared to change this rule ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The examination is open to all servants of the department with not less than 3 years' service. Permission to appear is given as a matter of course, unless the Superintendent or first class Postmaster has any objection, in which case a reference to the Head of the Circle is necessary. Government have no information that this procedure is not followed and is not prepared to cancel the rule.

EXAMINATION FOR INSPECTORS OF POST OFFICES.

1103. *Mr. B. P. Naidu : Is it a fact that the Departmental Examination held for the selection of officials for the posts of Inspectors and Postmasters is not thrown open to all officials without any restriction ? Are the Government prepared to remedy this grievance ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : No examination is held for the selection of postmasters. The examination for Inspectors is not open to all officials without restriction. Government do not admit that there is a grievance.

EVENING TURN CLASSES IN THE COMMERCE DEPARTMENT.

1120. *Mr. Rafi Ahmad Kidwai : (a) Is it a fact that in the Commerce Department of the Government of India an " evening turn class " is maintained and that consequently the assistants and clerks have to wait in office till very late in the evening and cannot leave office till all the officers of the Department have left ?

(b) Is it also a fact that in no other Department of the Government of India is such a turn class maintained ? If so, will Government please state why it is not possible to do without a " turn class " in that Department ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : (a) The Commerce Department Manual of Office Procedure requires that one responsible clerk should remain in charge of each branch until all the officers have left office. If, however, any officer sits very late, the men on turn may ask him after 6-30 P.M., if they are likely to be required and may leave office with his permission. The practical effect of this rule is that a clerk may be required, at times of pressure, as when the Legislature is sitting, to remain until 6-30 P.M. on not more than one evening in the week.

(b) It is understood that other Departments have no regular rule on the subject, but that in practice clerks do remain in office to attend to requisitions from officers who are working late. The Honourable Member will doubtless realise that an officer who is detained in office to dispose of urgent work might be in considerable difficulty if the office were altogether closed, and papers to which he wished to refer were inaccessible.

SHORT NOTICE QUESTION AND ANSWER.

RIOTS AT NAGPUR.

Mr. Abdul Qadir Siddiqi : Will the Government be pleased to state :

(a) Is it a fact that in the recent Nagpur riots hundreds of Mussalmans had to run away from their houses to save their lives leaving their belongings behind and are lying in places of security ?

(b) What is the number of such refugees ?

(c) What arrangements if any have been made to supply them with food and clothing ?

(d) What action if any have the Government taken to settle the refugees in their houses and safeguard their life and property ?

(e) Has the investigation been started and will the Government state who is actually conducting the investigation ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) and (b). The total number of houses evacuated by Muhammadans during the recent riots at Nagpur was approximately 640. Some of these persons took refuge in the Gond Raja's fort and in the Muhammadan quarters while some left Nagpur.

(c) A shop was opened in the Gond Raja's fort to sell food to refugees. In the northern part of the town no such shop was necessary, but the Tahsildar of Nagpur was deputed to enquire in Mominpura and arrange for the supply of food to persons who had difficulty in obtaining it. Very little assistance was found necessary.

(d) Refugees are steadily returning of their own accord.. Military and police pickets were posted and confidence was restored. Police pickets are still posted at places where they are considered necessary.

(e) Investigation is being undertaken under the direction of the Deputy Inspector General of Police into cases in which useful results are anticipated.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Are Government aware that people were not allowed to go out of their houses and that on account of this difficulty they could not purchase their provisions and they were thus compelled to starve in their houses ?

12 NOON.

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum : Will the Government please state if any Muslims were assaulted or injured while under the protection of the police ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I am afraid that I cannot add to the information contained in my reply and in the communiqué which has been issued by the Local Government and which contains full details.

Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan : Is the Government aware that Mr. Natique, who was a Member of the Assembly during the last Session, was confined to his house for 48 hours and that the police could not rescue him till then ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I have no information on that point.

Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan : Will the Government please make enquiries ?

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum : Is there any truth in the statements published that just before the riots, the Government were warned of the impending riots and that there was an idea in the minds of the non-Muslim population in Nagpur that they would not be fired on even if the riots took place ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I am not aware that there was any reason to apprehend a disturbance of this character which arose on what appeared to be an entirely insignificant incident.

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum : Were any preparations made by the Hindus and, if so, whether they had come to the knowledge of the Government ? What steps did the Government take when these matters were brought to their notice ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Perhaps the Honourable Member did not hear the reply I gave. I said that Government had no original reason to apprehend so serious a disturbance which arose out of what was apparently an insignificant incident.

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum : Do I understand, Sir, that the Government were not approached by the Muslims and warned of the impending riots or of the possibility of serious riots breaking out ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I must point out that while I was prepared to give all such general information as is in my power, the matter is really one which is primarily the concern of the Local Government. I have no information on the particular point raised by my Honourable friend.

Mr. B. Das : Will the Honourable Member say whether he is satisfied that a peaceful atmosphere has been restored ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Yes ; I am satisfied that the report of the Local Government in that matter is correct.

Mr. K. Ahmed : What steps did the Government take with regard to the inability of the Mussalmans to have egress out of or ingress into their houses ? Are the Government aware that on account of this difficulty many of the Mussalmans had to starve in their houses for want of food ? What steps did the Government take in this matter ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The answer to the Honourable Member's question will, I think, be found in the original answer I have given.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Are the Government aware that detailed accounts of the riots at Nagpur have appeared in the newspapers ? The newspaper cuttings must have been submitted to the Department of the Honourable Member. What steps has he taken in the matter ? (Laughter.)

UNSTARRED QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

CONSTITUENCIES OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY, ETC.

129. Mr. Satyendra Chandra Mitra : Will the Honourable the Home Member be pleased to lay on the table a statement showing :

(i) the names of constituencies of the Legislative Assembly ;

(ii) the number of voters on the Electoral Roll of each constituency ;

(iii) the number of votes polled at the last election in each constituency ;

(iv) the number of candidates at the last election in each constituency ;

(v) the election expenses incurred by the successful candidate ; and

(vi) the average amount spent as election expenses in each constituency at the last election ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (i) to (iv). The Honourable Member is referred to the report on the results of the 1926 elections a copy of which is in the Library.

(v) In pursuance of rule 19 (b) of the Electoral Rules records are prepared and maintained in the Legislative Department showing the names, constituencies and election expenses of all candidates at every election. The records are open to public inspection and any Member may see them at any time during office hours.

(vi) I must leave the Honourable Member with the assistance of these records to work out the average referred to in this part of the question.

VACANT MILITARY BUILDINGS AT SATARA.

130. Mr. Fazal Ibrahim Rahimtulla : (a) Is it a fact that the military buildings at Satara are lying vacant ?

(b) What was the cost to Government in removing the Small Arms School from Satara in the Deccan and accommodating it at Pachmarhi, Central Provinces, in the year 1925-26 and 1926-27 ?

(c) Is it likely in any near future date for the military buildings lying vacant at Satara being utilized for any military purpose ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) Yes.

(b) The amount so far spent in providing accommodation at Pachmarhi as a result of the amalgamation of the two schools is about 2½ lakhs. I have not the figures of the actual cost of the move from Satara to Pachmarhi, but the measure as a whole results in a saving of about 1 lakh a year.

(c) A proposal for utilizing the buildings is under consideration.

PAY OF GRADUATES AND UNDER GRADUATES IN THE POST OFFICE.

131. Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state if it is a fact that graduates and under graduates recruited in the Post Office after the introduction of the time-scale of pay were entitled to the 5th and the 3rd stages of the scale of pay respectively ?

(b) Are they still entitled to the same benefit after the introduction of the recent revision of pay ? If so, what starting pay is granted to those who entered the service after the 1st March 1927 ?

Mr. H. A. Sams : (a) and (b). Graduates and undergraduates recruited for clerical service in the Post Office after the introduction of the time-scales of pay are entitled to draw as initial pay that of the 5th and 3rd stages, respectively, of the time-scales in force at the time of their recruitment. This rule is still in force.

PAY OF GRADUATES AND UNDER GRADUATES IN THE POST OFFICE.

132. Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Is it a fact that graduates and undergraduates with two years' service at their credit are drawing less pay than those recruited after the 1st March 1927 ? If so, will the Government be pleased to state why these officials should be deprived of even the minimum pay fixed for them ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The Honourable Member is referred to the answer given to unstarred question No. 100 asked by Mr. V. V. Jogiah in the Assembly on the 6th September 1927.

PAY OF GRADUATES AND UNDER GRADUATES IN THE POST OFFICE.

133. Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Is it a fact that graduates and undergraduates with three and four years' service at their credit are drawing equal pay with the new entrants ? If so, will the Government be pleased to state whether their long experience in the departmental rules and work will be taken into consideration in fixing their pay ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The matter is under the consideration of the Government of India. The Honourable Member is refered in this connection to the reply given to unstarred question No. 100 asked by Mr. V. V. Jogiah in the Assembly on the 6th September 1927.

RESOLUTION NO. 90 PASSED AT THE 7TH SESSION OF THE ALL INDIA POSTAL AND R. M. S. CONFERENCE HELD AT NAGPUR.

134. Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Has the attention of the Government been drawn to Resolution No. 90 passed at the 7th session of the All India Postal and R. M. S. Conference held at Nagpur on the 11th, 12th, 13th June 1927 ? If so, will the Government be pleased to state whether they propose to take any action as suggested in the Resolution ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Yes. The matter is under the consideration of the Government of India.

APPOINTMENT TO THE FIRST DIVISION OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA SECRETARIAT OF CANDIDATES SUCCESSFUL AT THE 1920 AND 1922 EXAMINATIONS.

135. Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : (a) Is it a fact that a number of departmental candidates as well as outsiders who passed the prescribed test of the late Staff Selection Board in 1920 and 1922 for appointments to the first division in the Government of India Secretariat still remain unprovided for with appointments in that division ?

(b) Is it also a fact that while these men remain unprovided, others who qualified for the first division appointments at later examinations have been appointed in that division ? If so, will Government please state the reasons for doing so ?

(c) Are Government aware that this has caused great discontent amongst the men of category (a) above ? How many of such men are awaiting confirmation in the first division and how many of such outsiders have since accepted lower division appointments for paucity of vacancies in the first division ?

(d) Are Government considering the question of absorbing these men by inter-departmental transfer or by any other suitable method ? If not, why not ?

(e) Do Government propose to hold further examinations for recruitment to the first division pending the absorption of these ? If so, why ?

(f) What is the generally accepted principle for determining relative seniority for confirmation in the first division other things being equal ? Is the length of service as well as War service taken into account in determining relative seniority ? If not, why not ?

(g) Is the principle of determining relative seniority uniform in all Departments of the Government of India ? If not, why not ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) to (d). I would refer the Honourable Member to the replies given on 1st March last to Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh's questions Nos. 678 and 679. As then explained the detailed information asked for in regard to departmental candidates is not readily available. Such candidates can ordinarily look to promotion only in their own departments, though there is nothing to prohibit inter-departmental transfers, provided the Department in which a man is employed permits him to seek an appointment in another Department. Vacancies are very often of short duration and it is not always possible for a Department to spare the services of a man for short term vacancies. As regards outside candidates, of those who passed for the upper division of the Secretariat in 1920 and for the upper division of Attached Offices in 1922 and whose names are at present on the list of waiting candidates maintained by the Public Service Commission, only one man remains to be provided for in the upper division of the Secretariat and 4 men in the upper division of Attached Offices. In addition there are 8 men who are temporarily employed in the grades for which they passed. Of those outside candidates who passed the upper division test in 1920, 12 candidates have accepted permanent lower division vacancies. The names of these men have been removed from the Commission's list. Certain candidates, who qualified for the upper division at the examination held by the Public Service Commission in November 1926, have been nominated for temporary vacancies of short duration, for which it was not possible to consider candidates who passed in 1920 and 1922 owing to their unwillingness to accept such vacancies.

(e) There is no proposal at present to hold a further examination for recruitment to the first division.

(f) and (g). I am not sure that I quite understand the Honourable Member's question. Confirmation in the first division must depend on whether a man has passed the necessary examination or not, and on such factors as merit and capacity, position on the establishment list, age, and length of service, including war service, if any. Much must necessarily rest in matters of this sort on the discretion of the Department concerned, and absolute uniformity cannot be expected.

REMOVAL OF THE ARSENAL AND FORT ON THE SLOPES OF THE SHWEDAGON PAGODA AT RANGOON.

136. U. Khin Maung : Will the Government be pleased to state on what date the removal of the arsenal and fort on the slopes of the Shwedagon Pagoda at Rangoon will be effected ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I am inquiring from the local military authorities and will let the Honourable Member know as soon as possible.

As I stated in my answer to question No. 1128 on the 23rd March 1927, it is hoped to make the move before the end of 1927.

GRIEVANCES OF EMPLOYEES OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA PRESSES.

137. Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Will Government be pleased to state if they have received a copy of the proceedings and resolutions of the All-India Press Employees Conference, which was held in Calcutta in August 13th and 14th, 1927 ?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state what action, if any, Government intend to take on these resolutions ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Yes.

(b) None. It is open to any employee in a Government of India Press to put forward a memorial in respect of any grievance and, as a matter of fact, memorials are constantly received and considered. It is also open to press employees to secure recognition for any trade union which conforms to the rules governing trade unions of Government servants, and to bring grievances to the notice of the proper authority by means of such trade unions. The Government of India are not prepared to accord consideration to grievances put forward by press workers through other channels.

MEMORIAL FROM THE EMPLOYEES OF THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA PRESS, CALCUTTA.

138. Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Is it a fact that the employees in the Government of India Press, Calcutta, submitted in December 1926 a memorial to the Honourable Sir B. N. Mitra, Member in charge of the Department of Industries and Labour ?

(b) If the reply to (a) is in the affirmative will Government be pleased to state what steps, if any, have been taken regarding this memorial ?

(c) If nothing has been done as yet, will Government kindly state when they mean to do so ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Yes.

(b) and (c). The memorial has necessitated a detailed examination of the various points raised and is receiving the careful consideration of Government. As the memorialists were informed at the time, it is unlikely that any action can be taken before the commencement of the financial year 1928-29.

PURCHASE AND SALE OF MACHINES BY THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA PRESSES IN CALCUTTA, DELHI AND SIMLA.

139. Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement of the number of machines bought by the Government of India Presses at Calcutta, Delhi and Simla from 1909 to 1926, year by year ?

(b) Will Government be pleased to state the amount, if any, realised as discount on the purchase of each machine ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement showing for the years from 1909 to 1926, year by year :

(i) the number of machines and presses sold by the Government of India Presses at Calcutta, Delhi and Simla ; and (ii) the amount for which each was sold, together with the original price for which each was bought, as well as the date of purchase and sale of each ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : The collection of particulars of the purchase and sale of every machine in each of three presses for each of eighteen years would involve a very large amount of labour, even if the necessary records are available and the Government do not feel justified in undertaking this enquiry. Particulars for the last two or three years could probably be furnished without an undue amount of labour and difficulty, and if these will serve the Honourable Member's purpose I shall endeavour to have them supplied to him.

SALE OF WASTE PAPER BY THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA PRESSES IN CALCUTTA, DELHI AND SIMLA.

140. Mr. N. M. Joshi : (a) Will Government be pleased to state whether the Government of India Presses at Calcutta, Delhi and Simla call for tenders with regard to the sale of old papers ?

(b) If the answer to (a) is in the negative, will Government be pleased to state the reason for not doing so ?

(c) Will Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement showing, year by year, from 1915 to 1926, the amount realised from the sale of waste paper ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Information is being collected and will be supplied to the Honourable Member when available.

MESSAGE FROM THE COUNCIL OF STATE.

Secretary of the Assembly : Sir, the following Message has been received from the Secretary of the Council of State :

"I am directed to inform you that the Council of State has at their meeting held on 17th September 1927 agreed without any amendments to the following Bills passed by the Legislative Assembly on the 7th and 8th September 1927 :

A Bill further to amend the Indian Tariff Act, 1894, in order to protect the manufacture of cotton yarn in British India ;

A Bill further to amend the Indian Tariff Act, 1894."

Mr. President : The House will now resume further consideration of the Bill to amend the Indian Penal Code and the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, for a certain purpose, as reported by the Select Committee, clause by clause.

The clause which the House was discussing on the last occasion was clause 3.

The question is :

" That clause 3 do stand part of the Bill."

to which Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava has moved the following amendment :

" Delete sub-clause (ii) of clause 3 and re-number sub-clauses (iii) and (iv) as (ii) and (iii), respectively ".

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava (Ambala Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, the other day I moved the amendment standing in my name. Now, I propose to submit some of the grounds on which I submit that this amendment should be supported. In the first place, I maintain that it is quite wrong in principle to deprive a subject of the liberty of prosecuting a person who transgresses the law. The vindication of the law and the punishment of the offender is not the sole concern of the State. It is clearly to the greater advantage of the individual or the class concerned that an offender who has been guilty of an offence against an individual or any class should not be allowed to persist in his activities and thus continue to injure either the individual or the class. It is therefore that the general law of the country lays down that any person is entitled to initiate a prosecution in respect of offences except such as have been exempted by certain sections of the Code of Criminal Procedure. I need not quote any authorities for such a patent proposition like this. If any authorities were needed, I would quote 13 Bombay, page 600 and 43 Calcutta, page 1043. All the authorities are agreed that the right of initiating proceedings is a very valuable right and I should say that it is really one of bulwarks of individual freedom and liberty. If any person brings a complaint, the court cannot refuse to entertain that complaint and the court is incompetent to enquire into the motives which actuate that person or the objects with which that person brings that complaint. This being the general law of the land, there is a very heavy onus on the Government to prove that in this particular case an exception is justified. This right of initiation of prosecution is a very great safeguard and is in the nature of a safety valve to all human instincts of retaliation and revenge. At the same time, it constitutes a very serious restraint on the wrong doer because he fears that any individual in the land can bring him to book. In fact, Sir, the right to petition the King, the right to bring a complaint, these are the very essence of liberty of action and of freedom of any individual. I would therefore submit that unless very strong reasons can be advanced by the Government for a reservation of this nature, the House should not be a party to a deviation in that respect.

Mr. K. Ahmed (Rajshahi Division : Muhammadan Rural) : What is the object of the Government then in introducing this Bill ?

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : Sir, you will be pleased to see that there are certain sections of the Code of Criminal Procedure which are at present on the Statute-book and which constitute the only exceptions to this rule. These sections are sections 195 to 199. The perusal of those sections will establish, Sir, that the law has made an exception to the general rule in respect of several kinds of offences but there is one clear principle which is, I submit, of universal application. It underlies all those sections, and passes as it were like a string through them. Now sections 198 and 199 deal with defamation and offences against marriage, breach of contract : all offences of a private character ; and section 199 deals with sections 498 and 497 in the Penal Code. Now, Sir, I would submit that public policy requires that in private matters like these nobody need poke his nose into. Moreover, this principle will appear even from those sections, that the persons injured have got a perfect right of action, even to this extent that the Government cannot deprive the person injured of his right and the Government itself have no right to initiate a prosecution in respect of those matters. Apart from those two sections, section 195 is also one of the exceptions ; but you will be pleased to see that section 195 deals with three kinds of offences. Those dealt with in 195 (a) constitute in substance contempt of the authority of a public servant and it is public servants who by the fiction of the law are thought to be injured by those offences. Public servants so injured are given the right of initiating proceedings. Similarly, in section 195 (b) particular courts are by fiction of the law regarded as the injured party, and the courts concerned are given the right to initiate prosecutions. Similarly, again, in section 195 (c), the courts in respect of whom such offences are committed, are given the right of initiation of proceedings. In section 196 you will be pleased to see that the offences are against the State and it includes certain offences which are peculiar to the State. Chapter VI and Chapter IX-A and section 505 are such offences. Section 294-A is also mentioned and in that case an exception is made in respect of an offence against public morals. An exception is also made in the case of section 153-A, for the reason that it is an offence against public tranquillity and public tranquillity is the special concern of the State. In section 196 also that particular exception which I have already indicated is found to be of universal application. That is, the State, taken as a legal person, is the person who in contemplation of law is injured by the offences enumerated in that section. Section 197 deals with public servants of a special dignity. As regards these persons also, the law regards that in certain cases sanction can be given as it is the Government who employs them which is injured by the action of those persons. So in all these sections the principle is that the person injured has got the right to initiate proceedings.

Sir Hari Singh Gour (Central Provinces Hindi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan) : Who is injured ? A class.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : In this particular case either a class or a member of a class is injured. To take an example, supposing an offence is committed against the Hindu community, it may be that the whole community is injured or only particular persons belonging to that class. So that either individual members of the class or the class as a whole can be regarded as victims. In this case my humble submission is that logically speaking there is absolutely no reason why this power should be reserved to the State and not be enjoyed by individuals or the public. A perusal of section 295A in the present Bill will establish that this is an offence relating to religion ; this new offence is not an offence relating to public tranquillity. Such considerations as that there is clamour, that there is a particular agitation for something, that a person is politically important, that it will be in the public interests other than those based upon justice—all such considerations are not germane to the subject. When this particular offence has been classed under the heading " Offences relating to Religion ", my humble submission is that this particular section has been given a sacrosanct place in that Chapter ; and I would submit again, as I submitted on the last occasion, that offences under sections 295 and 296 are not less heinous in their character than an offence under section 295A. But in the offences coming under Chapter XV there is no reservation on behalf of Government with regard to the initiation of proceedings ; and I for one do not know what reason there is for meting out special treatment to this section. So far as this section is concerned, this section has in many ways been treated more favourably than the other sections in the Penal Code under that Chapter. Offences under this section are triable by the Sessions Judge, whereas offences under section 295, which deals with such things as the breaking of idols and defiling other objects held sacred by certain sections of the community, are triable by a second class magistrate. Anyhow, Sir, so far as the individuals of a class are concerned, it is clear that so far as these two sections are concerned, my humble submission is that if sections 295 and 296 are not more important and heinous than 295A, still they are equally important and heinous, and therefore no distinction should have been made, and when there is no reservation in the Government for proceeding under those sections, there is absolutely no reason why there should be any reservation in regard to this section. Further, Sir, it will be very difficult for the Government to decide in many cases whether a particular insult is one in which the Government should interfere. The Government are taking a very heavy responsibility on themselves and in fact it will appear that the Government will be taking the place of the injured party in the real sense, and will assume to themselves the powers which should be given to the head of those religions or the associations of those religions or the members of those religions. In fact, Sir, it appears to me that this kind of reservation is a serious interference with the religious liberties of the members of the particular communities concerned. This Government of India being quite irreligious in their nature—I mean secular—must realise that in many cases their action would give rise to resentment and heartburning. And, Sir, if there is a private prosecution the Government need not bear the expense as otherwise they shall have to. In the Rangila Rasul case, where several counsel appeared, the Government had to pay Rs 1,500 a day to one counsel alone. Those persons who feel aggrieved will be able to bring the best evidence before the court and in case the evidence is not put forward by the Government then the people will have a very genuine cause of grievance. So that my humble submission is that on principle and logic there is no reason why this Government should arrogate to itself the powers which in all ordinary cases belong to the public.

Mr. K. Ahmed : It is just the other way round. The logic is on this side.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : The other argument which I will submit before you is that the Government as such should never be allowed to interfere in these matters. It is not merely a question whether the power should be reserved to an individual or a class of individuals or the Government. The question in reality is whether this particular Government should be allowed to have a monopoly of initiation of proceedings in regard to offences of this nature.

Mr. K. Ahmed : You want to abuse a section of the people.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : If the Honourable Member wants to have a reply from me, let him kindly speak up and in a manner which is intelligible to me. I do not generally understand his interruptions, and I can reply to those interruptions only if they are intelligible. Sir, the question is whether this Government whose past conduct we have been seeing is one which should be granted the power of monopoly in this connection. We know that the effect of the act of a fanatic is of a two-fold nature ; firstly, it attacks a particular religion and wounds the susceptibilities of that religion, and secondly, as my Honourable friend, Mr. Jayakar pointed out the other day, to an extent it disturbs the public peace also and to that extent, in so far as that act alienates the sympathy between the different classes, it produces a sense of insecurity and at the same time it produces an element of discord and jealousy. My humble submission is that this Government is doing the same thing by its conduct. Government divides all the jobs in this country in such a fashion, it gives the loaves and fishes of office in such a fashion, that it divides all the classes into watertight compartments, so much so that it recognises the birth principle also in crystallising the classes in this country. The Government has divided the people into martial and non-martial races, into agriculturist and non-agriculturist classes and in many other ways. The most potent weapon of this Government is divide et impera, exactly the thing which is sought to be brought about by the fanatic. When this is so, may I ask whether this Government can be entrusted with a power like this which will affect 300 millions of His Majesty's subjects ?

Mr. K. Ahmed : How can you be trusted by the Government and by the other section of the people ?

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : Unfortunately, it is not in the power of the other section of the House to stop me from speaking, and I base my right to speak not on the indulgence of my Honourable friend who has just interrupted me, but on my right itself I do want to make such submissions before you on the basis of my privilege to speak from my place in this House. I want to place before you practical illustrations of the fact which I have submitted. On the last occasion, Sir Abdul Qaiyum was pleased to call into question the activities of the Arya Samaj, and he told the House that since the advent of that body, whom he was pleased to call a new sect, the relations between the two communities have grown more and more bitter. I do not want to enter into a discussion, but though I have not the fortune of being an Arya Samajist, I want to repudiate that charge and to submit that this allegation is grossly baseless and most unjustified.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Who has charged you with that ?

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum (North West Frontier Province : Nominated Non-Official) : On a point of personal explanation, Sir. I never said that the Arya Samaj was a new sect. I said that I was not sure whether it was a new religion or the revival of an old religion, but that the movement had newly sprung up.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : I am not concerned here whether the Arya Samaj is a new sect or not. I may inform the Honourable Member that the Arya Samaj claims to represent the most ancient culture perhaps in the world.

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum : That may be so.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : No doubt, this is not a matter.....

Mr. K. Ahmed : I rise to a point of order. Is my Honourable friend speaking on the amendment ?

Mr. President : The Honourable Member is not in order in referring to the Arya Samaj and its ancient culture on this amendment.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : Before we can decide whether a power of this nature should be entrusted to Government, I want to submit before you how the present position has arisen and under what circumstances this Bill has come before you. Unless and until we understand how matters stand to-day and how the Government has been conducting itself in the past, we cannot come to a conclusion whether this power ought to be entrusted to Government My submission is that the past conduct of Government is the only criterion by which we can judge whether this power should be given to Government or not. In the present discussion the Rangila Rasul case has figured prominently, but if you consider the history of that case and how Government treated those who first came into the field and aroused bitter feelings between the two communities, you will certainly appreciate the argument of mine that Government should not be entrusted with any such power. Now, previous to the publication of Rangila Rasul, a book was written known as " Unisvi saddi ka Maharishi " and it is admitted, and quite correctly, and I thank my Honourable friend, Mr. Abdul Haye for saying that it is a very objectionable book.....

Mr. President : I cannot allow the Honourable Member to go into the origin and history of the Rangila Rasul case and the subsequent ramifications thereof. The Honourable Member has taken nearly 20 minutes over this amendment, and I would like him now to conclude his observations.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : It is far from me to enter into the history of the Rangila Rasul case.....

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum : You intentionally use the words " Rangila Rasul case " instead of the words " Rajpal case ".

Mr. President : Order, order. The Honourable Member must conclude his observations.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : I was only submitting that the Government in initiation of proceedings so far have not been quite impartial. That is my first point, and with your permission I would like to illustrate it by one or two examples. If you think those examples are not in point, then I would proceed to my second point. If the House thinks that the past conduct of Government has been such that it can place full reliance in it in a matter like this, then I would proceed to my other point. I therefore request you either to allow me to go on or to give me a ruling on the point.

[Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava.]

(The Honourable Member resumed his seat.)

Mr. President : Sir Abdul Qaiyum.

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum : Sir, I want.....

(At this stage Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava rose in his place.)

Mr. President : If the Honourable Member (Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava) wishes to proceed, he could not do so by resuming his seat. The Chair will allow him to continue so long as he is relevant.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : Then, Sir, I will come to the instances. On the day on which Swami Shraddhanand was murdered, on that very day another gentleman was murdered and a book was written.....

Mr. President : Order, order. The Honourable Member is not relevant.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : So far as the other instance is concerned, it relates to the Risala Vartman case which was also a reply to the other publications appearing in other papers. My complaint is that up to this time the authors of those books, in reply to which these later publications were written, are still free and the Government has not touched them. The reply which the Government gives is that, inasmuch as there was no sufficient agitation in the country and there was no clamour, those persons were not prosecuted. If that is the way in which this Government is going to start prosecutions against offenders of religion, we should not give this power to Government with a view to strengthen its hands so that it can dole out mercies in the way in which it chooses to do. These are the two examples I wish to give, but since I have taken more time than I should have taken I hesitate to give other examples. Still I submit before you that these two examples are not the only two examples. I could give scores of other examples. I could quote many instances in which Christians and Muhammadans have been vilifying and flouting the most cherished beliefs of the Hindus and the Government have stood by and not raised their little finger. Now, Sir, the question arises what would happen to the other small communities living in this country. This is not a measure for Hindus and Muhammadans alone. The smaller communities will not be able to exercise that influence with the Government which the more influential communities can. Unless the only consideration which the Government should have in the initiation of proceedings is justice and justice alone, I fear these smaller communities will never be protected.

Now, I come to the third point. It has been said that if this power is not given to the Government there will be a flood of prosecutions and there will be frivolous accusations. May I point out that the existing provisions in the Act are quite sufficient and that they provide sufficient safeguards. Sections 182, 211 and 250 are quite ample and there is no occasion for finding out more protection. Barring that, the Select Committee has been pleased to devise a very good protection for offenders of this class. As you know, this offence is triable by a Sessions Judge. All proceedings in the Court of Session have to pass through the commitment stage. All cases in which there is no reasonable chance of conviction will be arrested in the scene of the commitment stage and the only cases that will go up to the Court of Session will be those in which there will be a reasonable probability of conviction. Further, there is even now a section in the Criminal Procedure Code, section 196A, which says that the Government are authorised to make a preliminary inquiry or investigation made by a police inspector. Instead of a police inspector's report we have an ordinary court of law armed with powers of commitment, and therefore I submit that the safeguards provided in this Bill are clearly more protective in their nature than those contemplated in section 196A. There is one point which I want to bring to your notice specially. If prosecutions are initiated by the sanction of Government, there is an unconscious bias in the mind of every judge that since the thing comes from the Government, there is a primâ facie case. There are greater chances of conviction than in others. I am not suggesting that the judges consciously do it, but I submit that every person will be affected in that way. Every person will think that it has been done with due care and caution.....

Mr President : Order, order. The Honourable Member seems determined to disregard the hint given to him by the Chair that he should conclude his observations.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : Then this is all I have to submit. I move my amendment.

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum : I do not want to make a long speech. I only want to touch a few points raised by the last speaker. In the first place I am very sorry to hear in this debate that the Rajpal case is still referred to as the Rangila Rasul case. I thought we had got rid of that word " Rangila " by the decision of the High Court.

Mr. President : All references to the Rangila Rasul case are out of order.

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum : Inasmuch as it injures the feelings of Mussalmans I thought the Honourable Members would refer to the case as the Rajpal case instead of the Rangila Rasul case. That is all I want to say on this point.

Then, Sir, the speaker said that Government were trying to create divisions among the various communities in India. The Government find all these divisions existing in the country and are simply trying to keep the balance and safeguard the interests of the minority. My Honourable friend was trying to prove a grievance against the Government on the part of his community. May I point out to him that in the North-West Frontier Province there is a small community of 5 per cent. whose rights are as vigilantly safeguarded and protected by Government as the rights of the Muslim minority in certain parts of India. (Lala Lajpat Rai : " Question ? ") You have only to go there and see. (Lala Lajpat Rai : " I know it ".)

Mr. M. K. Acharya (South Arcot cum Chingleput : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : May I ask, Sir, if this is in order ?

Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum : Then, Sir, if the right of prosecution were allowed to be exercised by individuals, I fear that what we are trying to avoid will be more definitely encouraged. Instead of fighting over their grievances in the open streets in the form of riots, the masses will be carrying on a warfare in the law courts. (Lala Lajpat Rai : "Will it not be better ?") The result will be the same. If this right is allowed to individuals, the better organised sections of the communities, instead of fighting matters in an open way, will be simply carrying on a warfare in the courts. I know there are individuals among the Hindu community, who can spare a good deal of money for such litigation. As a matter of fact I am told that there are individuals, who are already spending a good deal in this way—thousands and thousands of rupees in the form of allowances and passage moneys, and in the form of presents to men, who are carrying on a regular campaign for them in what they call a constitutional way. If this is allowed to proceed, then rich men can easily save their skins and injury to their persons, by raising funds to enable people to institute cases and carry on a warfare in the law courts. I wish I could put this point a little more clearly, but I do not think I can do it more effectively. I thought the new offence which was going to be added to the Penal Code, was a more serious offence and that it was being enacted for the sake of avoiding trouble and disorder in the country. It is certainly for Government to take action in cases in which there is the possibility of a general disturbance of the peace because of insults to religions or the religious feelings of a class of persons—it is not a question of insult to the personal feeling of an individual, for which he is, I am sure, always entitled to seek redress. It is really a matter of the insult to the whole community or class of persons, as it is worded in the section, that has to be defended ; and in such cases it is only the Government which ought to take action. I do not see why individuals should be burdened with the expenses of bringing law suits when this can more conveniently be taken up by Government. This is not the concern of individuals, it is a class or communal affair, and as the Government has guaranteed the protection of the religious beliefs of the public and the liberty to perform their religious practices, it is also the duty of Government to defend those beliefs and practices whenever the same are violated and the freedom of thought and action in matters religious is interfered with by anybody in this country.

In short, Sir, this measure is practically the creation or outcome of the misplaced sympathy of certain members of the last speaker's community in the Rajpal case.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar (Home Member) : Sir, I rise to oppose the amendment. When I first asked that this Bill be referred to Select Committee I made it quite clear to the House, and I think the House at that time accepted the view, that this provision which requires the authority of the Government for the institution of a prosecution was, next after the clause creating the offence, the most essential part of the Bill. That point of view was carefully examined by the Select Committee, as will be fully apparent from their Report. In the Select Committee this matter was regarded as a matter of the greatest importance and the conclusion arrived at is embodied in the Report.

Now, Sir, I will examine in the first place some of the grounds which have been alleged by the Honourable gentleman opposite in moving his amendment. He suggested in the first instance that this provision was a serious interference with liberty, and secondly, that it was a serious infringement of a general rule of law. Now, as regards the first question, serious interference with liberty, I point out that the offence which this Bill would create has not yet been created—that in point of fact no right to prosecute in respect of such an offence is in existence and consequently this provision requiring the authority of Government cannot conceivably be represented as making any inroads upon the liberty of the subject. Secondly, the general rule of law which the Honourable Member referred to really is this, that where a particular individual is injured by a criminal offence he should have his own remedy. In this case the offence is not an offence which is directed against or is suffered in particular by any one individual. The offence is of a totally different nature ; and when the Honourable Member instances the sections of Chapter XV in the Code, he will, I think, if he examines them a little bit more carefully, find that there in nearly every case they are offences committed either against a specific individual or against a specific and ascertainable group of individuals. I contend therefore that on the two points of principle on which he moves his amendment his grounds are erroneous.

But, Sir, the really important matter is the practical consideration. My insistence on the necessity of this provision was not merely a desire to add to the executive powers of Government. Any one who considers carefully the object of this Bill and the circumstances in which it has been brought to the judgment of the House will realize at once that to pass the Bill and to put it into operation without this particular provision would be tantamount to taking a barrel of gun-powder and exposing it in an open space where sparks from a smouldering fire are still flying round. That, Sir, is a proposition which Government would never submit to this Legislature, and it is one, I hope, which this Legislature would never consent to agree to.

(Several Honourable Members moved that the question be put.)

Mr. President : The question is that the question be now put.

The motion was adopted.

Mr. President : Order, order. The question is :

"Delete sub-clause (ii) of clause 3 and re-number sub-clauses (iii) and (iv) as (ii) and (iii), respectively."

The motion was negatived.

Mr. Abdul Haye (East Punjab : Muhammadan) : Sir, I rise to move the following amendment that stands in my name :

"That in column 5 of the entry in clause 3 (iii) of the Bill, for the word 'bailable' the words 'not bailable' be substituted.

I believe, Sir, the House is aware that when this Bill was originally introduced in this Assembly by my Honourable friend, the Home Member, it provided that the offence should be non-bailable. Since then the Select Committee has by a narrow majority made it bailable, and hence my amendment. While moving this amendment I have in view only those specific cases for which we are providing by means of this legislation. We are here providing for cases where some unscrupulous persons, about whom I have no hesitation in saying that they are the enemies of society, take it into their heads to make scurrilous attacks against religion or against the founders of religions. When we bear in mind such cases I believe there can be no two opinions as regards the necessity of this amendment. Sir, I hope that for such persons there can be no sympathy in the minds of the Honourable Members ; and, Sir, we must also bear in mind what may quite naturally follow such scurrilous attacks. Once we have such attacks, or once we have such abusive publications, these publications and these attacks, I venture to submit, may lead to breaches of the peace, to riots, murders, arson, and what is still worse to chaos and even to civil war. We should bear in mind what happened in this country, what happened in the province from which I have the honour to come, what happened in the North West Frontier, over the publication of that vile pamphlet with a still more vile title which was written by Rajpal. Sir, when we bear that in mind, I for one feel surprised at the tone of the speech of my Honourable friend, Mr. Amar Nath Dutt. He seems to suggest that that agitation was a got up one or that it was a spurious one. I need only refer him to the speeches that my Honourable friend Sir Denys Bray made on this subject in this House as also in another place. Sir, those Honourable Members who do not see eye to eye with me have evidently in view the cases of those persons who bonâ fide and honestly want to criticise religious tenets and religious leaders. To them my answer is that they need have no misgivings on their account. (An Honourable Member : " Why ? ") Such writings and such criticisms do not come within the purview of this law. Why should you as legislators assume that they will be prosecuted ? Sir, do they not have sufficient immunity against prosecution in the provision to which we have just agreed, namely, that no prosecutions shall be launched except with the authority of a Local Government ? I would go a step further.....

1 P.M.

Lala Lajpat Rai (Jullundur Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Why do you assume that Local Governments are always infallible ?

Mr. Abdul Haye : I make no such assumption but why should you suspect the Local Governments ?

Mr. M. S. Aney (Berar Representative) : We have reasons not to feel confidence. Is it not a fact that the majority of State prosecutions have served to shake and undermine the confidence of the Indian people in British Justice more than any thing else.

Mr. Abdul Haye : Sir, I would go a step further and meet my friends on their own ground. Even assuming that the Local Governments go wrong, even assuming that the honest critic of religion or a religious leader would be hauled up in a criminal court, my submission is that there is ample provision in the existing law, i.e., in section 497 of the Criminal Procedure Code, to release that man on bail at once and there will be no difficulty in doing so. Those Honourable Members who practise the profession of law know perfectly well that the provisions of that section have been sufficiently enlarged and they are being freely used at present by the criminal courts.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : A new circular has been issued.

Mr. Abdul Haye : To what effect ?

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava : That bail should not be taken in ordinary non-bailable cases.

Mr. Abdul Haye : My submission further is that I cannot dream of a case which would be exclusively triable by a Court of Session and yet it would be bailable. It would be a departure from the existing arrangement of the Criminal Procedure Code. And the last word, Sir, that I have to urge before the House is that we are to-day by means of this legislation making scurrilous attacks on religion and religious founders a distinct and specific offence. And now, after the recent decision of the Division Bench of the Lahore High Court there are no two opinions on this point that such scurrilous attacks would also come within the purview of section 153A, let it be remembered that an offence under section 153A is non-bailable. So, if you make this present offence bailable, the position would be this, that an offence which would come merely under section 153A would be non-bailable, whereas another offence which would be an offence under the new law as well as under 153A would be bailable.

Sir, I move my amendment.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt (Burdwan Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I rise to oppose this amendment, and in fact when I was listening to the speech of my Honourable friend Mr. Abdul Haye I thought that I was in a magistrate's court listening to the argument of a prosecuting counsel not to allow bail to the prisoner before him. One other aspect of the controversy that has arisen in this House seems to me that a certain section of the community thinks that these prosecutions are safe in the hands of the Government, and in spite of their political creed being not to co-operate with the Government, they went to the same lobby with the Government, thinking that these matters are not safe in the hands of their own countrymen, but safe in the hands of an alien bureaucracy. I was pained to see many Honourable friends going to the same lobby as the Government in this matter. Now, Sir, I am very sorry that my friend Mr. Abdul Haye has taken exception to my speech. I do not know wherein I said anything which might be construed to have been anything to cause pain in the minds of my friend. If I have uttered any such thing, although after a careful perusal of my speech when it was sent to me, I did not find anything of the type, still I express my regret, if any words of mine unconsciously have caused him pain. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. Abdul Haye : The tone of your speeches and the mischievous amendments proposed by you have caused a great deal of pain in the minds of Mussalmans.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : I am very sorry. I honestly believed that I was advancing the cause. But I have found worse things than this in this House about the two communities. In fact, I will not be justified in saying what I feel about religions as they are practised in this world. For myself I may tell this House that my opinion is that these religions are at the root of all the mischief in this world. (Hear, hear.) The sooner religion vanishes from this world the better. Whatever may be my individual opinion, I beg to submit that the more we want to strengthen the hands of the Government in these matters, the more we give the foreign bureaucracy more powers in their hands to create a servile class amongst us. In fact, arguments in this House have proceeded on the line as if a certain section is the favourite of the foreign bureaucracy, while the other is not, (An Honourable Member : "Question ?") (An Honourable Member : "Child wife.") Those friends who now have so much faith in the bureaucracy, and go to the Government lobby, should remember that others may also imitate the same trick and they may also join hands with the bureaucracy, and where will they be then ? They may be in the minority, and I warn them against such a contingency in the future. In this view of the case, Sir, I think the offence should not be made non-bailable, but it should be made bailable.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Sir, I rise to support this amendment (Applause), and the reasons which prompt me to do so I shall place very briefly before the House. In the first instance, we have to consider what the law in the matter is. Broadly speaking, my own opinion is that an offence of this character, in view of its gravity, in view of the serious public consequences that might flow from it, is an offence which per se ought to be a non-bailable offence.

Mr. K. C. Neogy (Dacca Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : What about section 295 ? Read that section and compare.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : That is a somewhat different matter, because the offence there is a purely local offence committed against a particular individual.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Not at all, any class of persons.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : A local offence committed by a person at a particular spot. (Mr. K. C. Neogy : "Where do you get that ?") Apart from that, Sir, the House must, I think, be disposed to give a certain amount of credit to the discretion of the courts. The law in the matter is perfectly clear, perfectly simple and full of safeguards. This offence is not an offence for which the police can arrest without a warrant. Proceedings therefore can only be instituted when a warrant is issued by a duly authorised court. That court has complete discretion under the Criminal Procedure Code whether the warrant it issues shall be a warrant with bail or without bail. Now, the suggestion has been made that the kind of persons likely to commit offences under this Bill are persons whose sense of responsibility will be such that they would not attempt to evade the process of the court but would come and justify their conduct in the court. These are circumstances of which the court can take cognizance and it can exercise its discretion and issue a bailable warrant. But, as a matter of fact, I think it will be generally recognised that the kind of person most likely to commit an offence under this Bill will be some obscure and scurrilous scribler writing from some obscure den or pot-house in a bazaar, whose appearance in the court could by no means be relied upon. As soon as the law is set in motion against him, he will set himself in motion. Those are the considerations which, I think, so far as the safeguards and the necessary security and also the practical requirements of the case are concerned, are such as to render this amendment a desirable amendment of the Bill.

(Several Honourable Members moved that the question be put.)

Mr. M. R. Jayakar (Bombay City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) Sir, I rise to oppose this amendment.

[Mr. M. R. Jayakar.]

This question was considered very carefully and in a very dispassionate manner by the Select Committee and the balance of opinion was that, having regard to the special circumstances of this Bill, this offence should be made bailable. I am very sorry, Sir, that a non-official Member should have moved this amendment. My reasons for opposing this amendment are briefly as follows. Many of us, Sir, are supporting this Bill as a necessary measure, as a necessary evil, and we are anxious that we should not make this Bill more drastic than the necessities of the case require. It is on that principle that Honourable Members will find some of the amendments tabled, for instance, an amendment that this Act should be in operation for three years only. The point of view of some of us on this side of the House is that it will be a part of wisdom not to make this Bill more drastic than is necessary. Now, what are the facts ? This Bill contemplates a crime which ex hypothesi will be committed by some one who writes or speaks words attacking a religion. In the majority of cases the offender will be connected with some newspaper, some press or some organisation and therefore he will not be a solitary individual who will run away pending his trial. He will have a location and an organization ; he will have a basis which he cannot obliterate by his personal absconding. That is one principle to be borne in mind. The second principle by which questions of bail are generally determined is whether by being at large he is likely to tamper with the evidence. I want Honourable Members, who are not lawyers, especially to remember the two principles by which questions of bail are generally determined. The first principle is : Is the offender likely to abscond ? About this point, I have already stated my views. He will not abscond, because his press, his newspaper or his organisation are all there ; they cannot be wiped out. Therefore, there is very little chance of his running away pending his trial. The second principle is : Is he likely to tamper with the evidence ? I submit he is not, because it is purely a question of construing his speeches as reported or interpreting his writings as written. It is not a question in which oral evidence is very material or witnesses are likely to be tampered with. The main question which this Bill involves for the court to find out whether the words of the infringing article or speech constitute an attack on religion. The next question is whether there is the necessary intention of insulting the religion. The third question is whether that intention is deliberate and the fourth question, which is a very complex question, is whether it is a malicious intention. These are all questions in which oral evidence is of very little value. On the contrary, these are such complex questions that it is desirable in the interests of justice and fair play that the man should be at liberty to instruct his counsel and his vakil and prepare his defence, because these are all complex questions of intention in which his personal explanation and criticism outside the prison house is material for his defence. I do not want Honourable Members merely to vote on this question on party lines, but I want them to apply their mind as to whether it is really necessary in the interests of justice that we should put the offender in prison from the very start so that his counsel, solicitor, or vakil would lose the benefit of a personal explanation or efforts in preparing the case. The offence here is unlike waging war or rebellion. The offender here has made a speech of which there is a report somewhere or has written an article of which there is some record. His press is there and his organisation is there ; and he is not likely to run away. A fanatic is not likely to abscond. He is often a courageous man. Therefore, I submit there is not much risk in allowing the man out on bail. Remember, Sir, the offence in this Bill is a very difficult one to try and determine. What the court has to try is a series of important and complex psychological questions. I do not envy the position of the judge who will have to determine these questions. He has three conundrums set to him to answer. What is the intention ? This in itself is a very difficult question and lawyers know how difficult it is to prove intention apart from the words conveying it. The difficulty increases when proof is further needed that the intention is deliberate and malicious. Having regard to the complexity of these questions, I think that it is desirable that the man should be outside the prison house to prepare his trial rendered unusually difficult by this complexity. The Honourable Member Mr. Abdul Haye said that the Bill relates to unscrupulous offenders. But let him note that the Bill is not confined to unscrupulous offenders, but, as many Honourable Members have shown, the chances are that the even honest-minded men may come under it. Therefore we must not judge of this question merely by considering as if in all cases this Bill will be set in motion against unscrupulous offenders. Further, Mr. Abdul Haye said that even if the offence is made non-bailable, the judge has authority to give bail. My experience, Sir, is this that it is very difficult to obtain bail in non-bailable cases except from the highest tribunal. I am not speaking with any disrespect of the lower judiciary, but I am stating the truth when I say that they are generally overcautious in such questions, being perhaps afraid of superior courts. Generally they do not give bail. Is it desirable that the man should be put to the expense in all cases of going to the High Court ? Even the High Court often goes upon the opinion of the lower court and does not give bail.

I submit that having regard to all these considerations, the balance of convenience requires that the man should be allowed to remain outside prison. There is a danger the other way. The Honourable the Home Member remarked that serious public consequences are likely to follow from such an offence. Assuming, for the sake of argument, that it is so, how is the seriousness increased by allowing the offender to remain at large after the offence was committed ? What is the reason for locking the man in the prison immediately the article is indicted ? What difficulties are likely to arise if he is at large ? As said above, there are only two possible difficulties that may arise. Is he likely to run away or is he likely to tamper with the evidence ? These contingencies are not very possible in this case. Besides, in such cases, oral evidence is not very material. The only oral evidence which may at times be material is that of his listeners, as to what impression was created on their mind by the speech or writing. But that evidence will be given only in very rare cases where the words are not clear. Where the words are not clear, I submit there is not likely to be a conviction and it is no use locking the man in jail before his fault is proved. I submit, therefore, that the balance of convenience which weighed with the Select Committee is that this should not be made a non-bailable offence.

(Several Honourable Members moved that the question be put.)

Mr. President : The question is that the question be now put.

The motion was adopted.

Mr. President : The question is :

" That in column 5 of the entry in clause 3 (iii) of the Bill, for the word ' bailable ' the words ' not bailable ' be substituted ".

The Assembly re-assembled after Lunch at Half Past Two of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That clause 3 do stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That clause 1 do stand part of the Bill."

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Sir, I beg to move :

"That clause 1 be re-numbered as sub-clause 1 (1) and the following new sub-clause be added :

'(2) It shall remain in force up to the 31st day of December, 1930'."

I feel, Sir, that not many words are needed from me in support of this amendment. It is admitted on all hands that the situation that has necessitated the enactment of this special legislation did not exist a few years back, and we all hope, we are optimistic enough to hope, that in course of time the necessity for putting into operation legislation like the present one will be gone. Sir, it is principally with this view that I gave notice of my amendment. I understand that on a recent occasion it has been admitted by some leading Muhammadan gentlemen that there is some connection between the present communal unrest and the Reforms, particularly the forthcoming revision of the Constitution. I find, Sir, that speaking in the House of Lords in July 1926, the Secretary of State himself admitted that there was some such connection. This is what Lord Birkenhead stated :

[Mr. K. C. Neogy.]

" It would in my judgment be untrue, for the reasons that I have given, to deny all connection between the Reforms and the present state of tension between Hindu and Moslem."

I therefore very much hope that when the necessary Parliamentary enquiry has been held and the revision of the constitution made, calm will be restored in the political atmosphere of this country and we shall have seen the end of these communal troubles.

Sir, the reason why I fixed the 31st December 1930, as the last date up to which it should remain in force is that it is expected that the report of the next Parliamentary enquiry will have been considered by that time, and whatever necessary legislation may be undertaken in Parliament to give effect to it will also have been passed.

Sir, having said this much, I cannot altogether keep from this House another reason which prompted me to give notice of this amendment. On the last occasion I made it quite clear that by reason of the prosecution under this new section being made dependent on the sanction of the Local Government, apprehensions are entertained in very many quarters, particularly in the province from which I come, as to whether this new law will be administered in an impartial manner. The speeches that have been made this morning by Members from some other provinces also go to substantiate that fear. On the last occasion I referred to the evidence which a District Magistrate in Bengal gave in connection with a communal case as showing that what the Government take into consideration in coming to a decision in regard to such matters is the numerical strength of the people to whom any offence may be given. Since then I have received the full text of the evidence of that District Magistrate and I want to place two sentences from his evidence before the House. This is what he states :

" The Muhammadan feeling is more important, as they are more numerous, less educated, less cultured and less self-restrained. If the Muhammadan got out of hand the result would be horrid ".

That is to say, when you consider the advisability of proceeding in a particular direction, say, under the proposed new legislation which we are considering, if you were to take all those factors into consideration, factors which have been mentioned by a very responsible officer in Bengal very recently, then certainly there is ample justification for entertaining apprehensions about the manner in which the law may be administered.

Sir, let us consider what would happen if people belonging to the Hindu community were to insult the religion of the Christians. The Christians in every province are in a minority. Let us assume that the Christians are possessed of all the Christian virtues and that particularly they follow that precept which requires them, if they are smitten on one cheek, to turn the other for similar treatment. The Hindus are of course more numerous ; supposing moreover that they were less educated, less cultured and less self restrained than the Christians, I ask the Honourable the Home Member to say whether that would be a consideration in coming to a conclusion as to whether this particular section should be put into operation against the Hindus or not. Yet, that is exactly the position which was taken up by the District Magistrate of Barisal.

Now, Sir, on the last occasion as also in connection with the amendment of section 99A in 1926, I made a complaint that the Government of Bengal had not made sufficient use of the powers which the existing law gave them for the purpose of putting down or rather preventing those communal outbreaks. I particularly mentioned the fact that on the occasion of the last Calcutta riots a large number of inflammatory pamphlets were in circulation which were held to be the primary cause of those riots. Sir, I hold in my hand a copy of the Indian Law Reports, Calcutta series, dated January 1927, in which there appears a judgment of the Calcutta High Court, and with your permission I will read out just a few sentences to show that the charge which I brought against the Government of Bengal is fully substantiated. This judgment was delivered by Mr. Justice Rankin and another Judge. Mr. Justice Rankin now being the Chief Justice of that High Court. The title of the case is P. K. Chakravarti v. Emperor. It is reported on page 59 of the Calcutta series of the Indian Law Reports for last January, Volume 54. Sir, this is what the present Chief Justice states in this particular case :

"In this case the appellant Mr. P. K. Chakravarti has been ordered to enter into his own recognisance in the sum of Rs. 500 to be of good behaviour under section 158 of the Criminal Procedure Code. The order has been made in respect of an article in the issue for the 27th April of this year of a newspaper called the Forward which is a newspaper printed in English and circulated in Calcutta."

"The circumstances at the time of the publication are shortly these. An outbreak of rioting having occurred some little time before in parts of this city, it was after some time brought to notice that one of the causes of this outbreak, or, at least of its continuance, was the fact that certain people were circulating inflammatory leaflets in the vernacular in the streets—leaflets calculated to incite members of different communities to violence against one another. The particular pamphlet, which is animadverted on in the article in question, was a pamphlet in Urdu printed on yellow paper and circulating apparently for the benefit of the Mahomedans. What the appellant has done as editor in this. He has printed the pamphlet in an English translation. He has also given a transliteration in English letters of the original Urdu; and what he says is that this pamphlet was being circulated and that it is not difficult to trace the source from which it emanated. Then he adds 'Let us wait and see what steps the guardians of 'law and order' take in the matter'."

For having committed this offence the editor of the Forward was hauled up on a charge under section 153A, the Government of Bengal did not care to find out the author of the original Urdu pamphlet which was circulated in the streets of Calcutta ; and for merely drawing pointed attention to that pamphlet in the columns of the Forward, this editor was tried under section 153A. It was lucky, of course, that he got off in the Calcutta High Court, but that shows the manner in which section 153A has been in operation in Bengal for some time. I do not want to dilate on this point any further, but as I said, one of the reasons why I gave notice of this amendment was that I wanted to see whether the action of the Local Governments to whom we are entrusting the administration of this new clause will justify the confidence which this Legislature is called upon to repose in them.

Sir, I move the amendment.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Sir, I rise to oppose the amendment.

[Mr. J. Crerar.]

I observe the arguments by which my Honourable and learned friend supported his amendment are really designed to deal with the question of the sanction of Local Governments. I wish to point out that that point has already been decided by this House and it is not a question with which the House is at present concerned. Whatever the obiter dicta of the District Magistrate of Barisal may have been, divorced as they are from their context, I submit they would have nothing whatever to do with the question now before the House. Nor has the question raised by the Honourable Member as to the extent to which members of particular communities might conceivably come within the danger of this Bill—neither has that point any relevance to the duration of the Act if and when the Bill is passed.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : We want Government to be placed on probation.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The essential point is this. The suggestion that this Bill was designed merely in order to conclude a current controversy is incorrect. The Bill was designed to establish beyond any question of doubt a legal principle. That principle is in my opinion a sound one. It has already been twice affirmed by this House, and if it is a sound principle, it is one of permanent value and validity. I say, Sir, that the House has already pronounced twice on that question of principle. I venture to say that we ought in this particular matter to have not only the courage of our opinion but consistency in our decisions.

Mr. President : The question to put is :

"That clause 1 be re-numbered as sub-clause 1 (1) and the following new sub-clause be added :

'(2) It shall remain in force up to the 31st day of December, 1930'."

The motion was negatived.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That clause 1 do stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill :

The Title and Preamble were added to the Bill.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Sir, I move that the Bill, as amended, be passed.

As the House has already considered the principle of the Bill at length and has twice affirmed its view on the subject, and as the details of the Bill have been considered at length, I do not propose to say anything more in commendation of the motion which I now make.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That the Bill, as amended, be passed."

Colonel J. D. Crawford (Bengal : European) : Mr. President, I feel that this is an issue upon which we Europeans should be very largely influenced by the views of our Hindu and Mussalman friends. We belong to a religion so small in numbers that it is as regards the protagonists in this miserable communal strife—where men hate one another for the love of God—a mere bystander. Yet we cannot escape the reactions arising from so much bitterness.

The opinion of my group is that this Bill, which is supported—as it seems—by most of the members of both communities and which we welcome as an instalment, is hardly likely to prove adequate to the task. The scurrilous organs which foster communal hatred in this country are already well-prepared to evade the provisions of this Bill. We are concentrating our attention on the individuals ostensibly responsible who are made liable to fine or imprisonment or both. Now that may have the effect of making editors of reputable papers very cautious in the articles and news they publish ; we know that it is the opinion of a number of Members of this House who are Journalists and therefore competent to judge that it may impose a heavy burden on editors who make an error of judgment or whose news-editors make an error of judgment. I hope that may not be the case, and I think the wording of the measure, since amendment by the Select Committee "Deliberately and Maliciously" will have made that danger remote.

But what I am uncertain about is whether the individuals whom this measure is designed to catch—those who with deliberate and malicious intent outrage religious feelings will be caught in the meshes of our net. Those malicious individuals may not be the ostensible editors or proprietors of the paper : they may not ostensibly control its policy.

As a matter of fact it is by no means an uncommon event that the nominal editor of a paper is not the true editor and still more often he does not control the policy of the paper. A dummy editor may be paid to run the risk of imprisonment and it may be agreed that his fines are to be paid by the real controlling power. Some Honourable Members may say that such cases are not common : perhaps they are not, but it is precisely against those exceptional individuals, those few propagators of communal hatred, that this Bill is directed. I know that the average newspaper in India is not edited by a nonentity whose function it is to be ready to go to jail—but then I am glad to think that it is not the average newspaper, pamphlet or book that we are legislating against.

My remedy for this problem is that this Bill should have been or another should be directed against the press itself. The guilty party may be difficult to find ; your editorship may be, as I have suggested, nominal ; responsibility for the offence may be divided, but your press is always there. It is my belief that if we provided that the penalty for printing inflammatory propaganda should be the confiscation of the press used, you would make the suppression of this kind of offence simpler and more effective. By a legal fiction and action may be brought for damage against a ship herself for the offence which she is held to have committed : I would treat a press in the same way. I agree that the owner of the press may not in every case be the original conspirator, but you cannot attempt to find, even if it were right to punish, the individual in whose mind the idea first occurred of committing the offence. You will be wise to confine yourself to dealing with the overt act.

3 P.M.

I make this suggestion because I feel that the Government of India is not taking sufficiently active measures to suppress the forces of discord. His Excellency the Viceroy made a very fine and a very moving appeal, and I believe that the leaders to whom he then addressed himself are prepared to do their best to bring about that atmosphere of conciliation and compromise which is essential. It is they alone who can—if anyone can—make the right atmosphere for peace. But they are entitled to ask of Government that it shall maintain order and suppress disorder while they are striving to establish the spirit of peace. Suppression is obviously not enough in itself but it is a first essential and is the particular task of Government.

So far from there being at the moment any improvement in the communal situation, it appears to an outsider to be getting worse. Since the Viceroy's recent speech we have had serious riots in Nagpur and Bareilly and Sholapur, in this mornings telegrams I read that the authorities had to take special measures at Ahmedabad and Karachi. Until now the trouble has been in the main confined to the towns, but with so much inflammable material lying about it might at any moment spread to the villages. I confess to an anxiety lest at any moment a general outbreak may occur involving a whole province, and should that province be anywhere near the Frontier the consequences might be extremely grave.

I hope that this suggestion will appeal to the responsible leaders in this House. I read that the unity board in Cawnpore proposes to take upon itself the duty of censoring the local papers. Although I can hardly approve on principle to the usurpation of one of the functions of Government by an unauthorised body, however responsible and high-minded, I welcome it as a genuine effort on the part of communal leaders to remove one of the causes and sources of unrest, and I feel that this action on the part of the Cawnpore Board implies a rebuke to the Government of India for not having adopted sterner and severer methods to maintain, or rather I might say, to re-establish that peace in India which is so earnestly desired by all men of good will.

Maulvi Badi-uz-Zaman (Bhagalpur Division : Muhammadan) : Sir, I thank you for this opportunity. I have listened to the speeches delivered by the Honourable Members of this House but I have not found any cogent reason against the passing of this Bill. Some Honourable Hindu Members do not want the Bill because it is the result of a demand on the part of Muhammadans. (An Honourable Member : " That is not so.") That was apparent from the speech delivered by my Honourable friend Mr. Amar Nath Dutt, and some others characterised it as a Muslim Bill. But my submission is that this Bill is not a Muslim Bill. It seeks to protect the honour not only of Islam but of all other religions also, and it is therefore a protection for all communities and not for the Muhammadans only. Therefore, I think that this argument has no foundation ; I am rather inclined to think that it is a wholly sentimental argument inspired by communal bias.

* Speech not corrected by the Honourable Member.

[Maulvi Badi-uz-Zaman.]

Then, Sir, some Honourable Hindu Members of the House, who support the decision of the Lahore High Court as delivered by Justice Dalip Singh, are of opinion that the existing law is inadequate to deal with cases of the nature with reference to which this Bill is being passed. I do not understand this mentality. If the existing law is inadequate then it is all the more necessary that another law ought to be passed to deal with such cases. Sir, I share the view of some Honourable Members who are of opinion that the existing law would be quite adequate but for the curious judgment of the Lahore High Court in the case of Rajpal delivered by Justice Dalip Singh.

Then, Sir, it has been said that the proposed measure tends to affect the liberty of the Press. I do not understand how it affects the liberty of the Press. The scope of the Bill has been sufficiently narrowed down in the Select Committee and it now gives fair and adequate protection to fair criticism. There must be some limit to the liberty we can allow. If the liberty of the Press results in dishonest and mischievous activities, if the Press does anything wrong, if it dishonestly or maliciously attacks any religion or the founders or saints thereof, there is no reason why the press should not be punished. Sir, if villification of the Prophet and other sacred personages means fair criticism I would not tolerate it to that extent. But I submit that that is not fair criticism but a vicious and abominable crime which must be stopped at once.

Sir, the object of this legislation is to deter dishonest and malicious attacks on religion and religious beliefs which may lead to serious consequences. Therefore, in view of the serious situation which has been created in the country I think it is the duty of the House to pass the Bill without further delay. With these remarks, Sir, I support the motion of the Honourable the Home Member that the Bill be passed. (Applause.)

Khan Bahadur Makhdum Syed Rajan Bakhsh Shah (South-West Punjab : Muhammadan) : Delivered a speech in Urdu, a translation of which will be published as an Appendix to the proceedings of the 20th September 1927.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh (Muzaffarpur cum Champaran : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, I do not want to give a silent vote on this Bill. At the outset, I must make my position perfectly clear, by stating that as a true Hindu I am opposed to any scurrilous speech or writing being indulged in by the followers of one faith against the founder or holy personage of any other faith or religion. It pains me, Sir, to see that a man professing the same religion which I hold so dear to myself, should have so far lapsed from his sense of culture as to revile the founder of Islam. In this connection, I have no hesitation in endorsing whole heartedly the Resolution which was passed by the Working Committee of the Hindu Mahasabha at Benares in August last. The Resolution was as follows :

" The Working Committee of the Hindu Mahasabha strongly condemns the attacks made by followers of one religion on Avatars, prophets, founders and objects of worship or reverence of another religion, and calls upon leaders of public opinion of all communities and well-wishers of the country to use their influence to discourage such attacks and prevent their circulation to the full extent of their power. The Committee wishes to draw the attention of all concerned to the fact that a person who attacks either a religion or any outstanding personality connected with the religion sets an evil example and provokes counter-attacks upon his own religion or religious heads."

Sir, I should also like to refer to the statement which was made by Rajpal when he came to know that the feelings of our Muhammadan friends had been greatly outraged by his pamphlet. This is what he said :

"If any words of mine can soothe the feelings of my Moslem brethren, I assure them that I respect their sentiments no less than I do mine. I have no idea of bringing out another edition of the Rangila Rasul, even though the law does not stand in the way of my doing so. In fact I stopped selling it as soon as I was told that some Moslems felt offended at its publication. This was done before any action was taken or even contemplated by Government."

Sir, it will be conceded that this was the only honourable course left to the author of the pamphlet to undo his mischief, and it ought to have been accepted by our Moslem friends. But a spirit of vindictiveness was abroad ; and an agitation was set afoot whose virulence did not spare even the Bench of the Punjab High Court. (An Honourable Member : "No, no"). Mr. Justice Dalip Singh came in for a good deal of adverse and undeserved criticism for having done what he conceived to be his duty according to the light of his judicial conscience.

Sir, the Bill as it was originally introduced by Government was a very unacceptable measure, and I am surprised to see that some of the non-official leaders in this House should have given their unstinted support to it even in that form. But I gladly recognize that the Bill as it has emerged out of the Select Committee is shorn of much of its objectionable features. There are, however, still one or two points in it which I am unable to accept. The Bill creates a new offence, and acts as a menace to the liberty of thought and expression. Its net is cast too wide, and it may also include within its scope many innocent men, such as the printer or publisher of a pamphlet. Sir, I will refer to one quotation from the Statesman of Calcutta, which in its issue dated 9th September speaks as follows :

"No measure more out of harmony with the Viceroy's speech, none more difficult to justify in the light of modern thought, could well be placed on the Statute-book. The plain fact is that the Government has lost its head in face of a riotous agitation, and has been followed in that course by a hasty Assembly, which in this matter is plainly misrepresenting any Indian opinion that finds voice in the most influential organs of the native owned Press. It would be a tragedy without measure if at the beginnings of popular government in India, the Legislatures, under the encouragement of the Government, were to use their powers to suppress liberty of thought, speech and writing, and were to crowd the Penal Code with new offences conceived in the spirit of the Spanish Inquisition."

Sir, these are not my words. I regret that the amendment to make it a temporary measure, to remain in force for a limited time, say three years, has failed. The present phase of communal trouble which gives rise to such writings or speeches may be, after all, a passing phase. It may be followed, as we all hope and trust, by an era of peace and good will. (Applause). I am opposed, Sir, to the permanent retention of this measure on the Statute-book. I also do not agree with the provision that the offence should be made non-bailable, and the right to initiate proceedings should rest exclusively with the Government; for in the words of my Honourable friend Mr. Kelkar in his minute of dissent :

"some sections of society who are less clamorous and turbulent are likely to be denied the use of the remedy under this Bill, and their virtue may be penalized, though they would be equally entitled to judicial relief with any other section of the society."

I am afraid, Sir, that this power is likely to be abused ; and in actual practice, it is neither the Hindus nor the Muhammadans that are likely to benefit, but the Christian missionaries who vilify both the Hindu and the Muhammadan religions and their holy personages in unmeasured terms with impunity (cries of "No, no").

With these few words, I beg to oppose the passage of this Bill.

Maulvi Abdul Matin Chaudhury (Assam : Muhammadan) : I rise, Sir, not to discuss the merits or the demerits of this Bill, but to condemn the manner in which certain amendments have been moved in this House. One particular Member in trying to make an exhibition of his sense of humour or the want of it, did not spare even what he referred to as "the Prophet of the Muhammadans." This fling at the Prophet, this attempt at buffoonery at his expense, reveals a mentality which is, to say the least, most deplorable. It betrays a taste which is more reminiscent of slums and gutters than of decent society.

Mr. President : Order, order. We are dealing with the Bill, not with the particular Member.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : Let him have his full say.

Mr. President : If the cap fits the Honourable Member he might wear it.

Maulvi Abdul Matin Chaudhury : Sir, it is a matter of gratification that this House treated these vapourings with the contempt that they deserved. But, Sir, I would say at the same time that it is a shame and disgrace that the President of the Congress, for whose fairness and sense of justice I have got the highest respect and admiration, should have permitted a Member of his Party to move an amendment like that. It is a pity that it escaped your vigilant eye, Sir.

Munshi Iswar Saran (Lucknow Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I do not wish to speak about this Bill from the .....

Mr. President : Then, the Honourable Member need not rise. It is the Bill that is under consideration. The Honourable Member said that he does not wish to speak on this Bill ; if that is his position, he need not rise.

Munshi Iswar Saran : May I say, with the most profound respect, that if I had been allowed to complete the sentence, the Chair would not have been put to the inconvenience of getting up to reprimand me. (Laughter.)

Sir, I do not wish to speak about this Bill from the point of view either of a Hindu or of a Muhammadan. Unfortunately the issues have been clouded and a great deal of heat has been introduced into this controversy. When you will find this Act on the Statute-book it will have to be administered against a Hindu, against a Muhammadan, against a Christian, against a Parsee. The religion of the person will not matter ; what will matter will be the offence that will be committed by him.

Before I proceed further, I wish to say that there was one remark of the Honourable the Home Member which I was unable to understand. The Honourable the Home Member, in his speech which was more short than sweet, said that the House having accepted the principle of this Bill on two occasions it should now pass it. I venture to think that he referred to the reference of this Bill to the Select Committee and then he referred to the question that the Bill be taken into consideration. Both these propositions having been accepted by the House, the Honourable the Home Member has told us—and we have to accept his authority, because his authority is great—that we cannot after that reject the Bill. Are we to understand, Sir, that if a Bill is referred to a Select Committee and if after that it is taken into consideration, the House then is divested of its right to reject it ? (Some Honourable Members : "No".)

Mr. President : The Honourable the Home Member is not entitled to lay down the law on the subject. The Honourable Member is perfectly entitled to oppose the Bill.

Munshi Iswar Saran : If I had not made this submission, we would not have been fortunate to get this authoritative ruling from the Chair. (Laughter.)

Sir, Colonel Crawford spoke on behalf of the European community ; he might have disappointed anybody else, but he did not disappoint me. What Colonel Crawford said was "We want more stern measures in order to maintain peace in this country." If Colonel Crawford and others of his way of thinking had their own way, I suppose we would have "martial law and no d——d nonsense." Colonel Crawford represents that class and it is very good that from time to time he reminds us of the existence of his class in this country.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Does not the country require him and his class ?

Munshi Iswar Saran : My country may not require him, but my Honourable friend Mr. Kabeer-ud-Din Ahmed does. Colonel Crawford unconsciously supported those of us who are not enthusiastic about this Bill. He said in effect, "Yes, the honest editor, the cautious editor, may have very good cause to fear the consequences of this measure, but as far as the dummy editors are concerned, the men who are put up for a few rupees to insult either this religion or that, will remain untouched". I submit, Sir, that is exactly the position which we take. What I submit is that a man who is deliberately out to insult any religion or to insult any religious teacher, would not care very much for the measures that the House is about to pass to-day. It is only the expression of honest opinion on religious questions which in my humble opinion will be greatly hampered by the existence of this measure on the Statute-book. If you will be pleased, Sir, to refer to the law in England, you will find that it has undergone various changes, and now it has been authoritatively held in England in a case which is reported in 48 Law Times at page 739, the name of the case being Rex v. Ramsey and Foote, where Lord Coleridge distinctly laid down this rule :

"If the decencies of controversy are observed, even the fundamentals of religion may be attacked without a person being guilty of blasphemous libel."

[Munshi Iswar Saran.]

I submit, Sir, that we shall only get the true perspective of this Bill if we divest our minds of a great deal of prejudice that has been created. It is not a Hindu attacking a Muhammadan or a Muhammadan attacking a Hindu. I shall ask the House to bear in mind the case of a Hindu expressing views about the faith of the vast majority of his own co-religionists. Take, for instance, the case of an Arya Samajist who attacks idol worship. His attack may be right or it may be wrong. Please do not imagine that this measure will come into operation only when the trouble is between one religion and another. This Bill may come into operation even when a man of the same religion expresses views about certain doctrines with which he does not agree. Taking the Muhammadan religion, there are certain Muhammadan dissenters who may express views which may be unpalatable to the vast majority of their co-religionists. What will happen then? Take the Shiahs and the Sunnis. I submit to this House with all respect that this question has to be looked at not from the point of view of the Hindu religion or the Muhammadan religion. It should be remembered that it is a piece of legislation which is being enacted and which will apply not only when there is a question between a Hindu v. a Muhammadan or vice versa, but which will apply to any case where there is attack on any religion, either by a man who professes that religion or some other religion The House will notice that this measure has been disapproved of not only by Hindus—unfortunately it has become a Hindu-Muhammadan question—but even by non-Hindus, by Christians and by those who cannot be accused of any Hindu bias. Now, if you accept the submission which I have made, then I venture to hope that the House will agree with me that this is a very severe, a very drastic—I shall not use a stronger word—measure which is being put on the Statute-book.

Take, now, Sir, the provision that the Select Committee rightly incorporated in one of the clauses, namely, that this was a bailable offence. The House has made it non-bailable. It is rather difficult to understand the distinction between this measure and section 295 of the Indian Penal Code. I submit that if you look at it dispassionately, not from the point of view of a Muhammadan or a Hindu or from the point of view of a partisan, you will find that in substance there is no difference between the two provisions. Section 295 of the Indian Penal Code runs as follows :

"Whoever destroys, damages or defiles any place of worship or any object held sacred by any class of persons with the intention of thereby insulting the religion of any class of persons or with the knowledge that any class of persons is likely to consider such destruction, damage or defilement as an insult to their religion, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both."

This is a bailable offence. As I have already submitted, there is no difference in principle between the two offences.

I shall only express the hope that very soon our feelings will become normal and we shall bring in a measure not to amend but to remove this objectionable measure from the Statute-book. And I do sincerely hope that the Local Governments will administer this measure in the spirit in which it ought to be administered. I do also hope that my Honourable friend Mr. Neogy's apprehensions that Local Governments will not be guided by just considerations will prove unfounded.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : They have not been in the past !

Munshi Iswar Saran : I do hope that Local Governments will hold the balance even and will see that prosecutions are very seldom launched under this Act, because it has to be remembered that in order that our thought may advance and in order that there may be no impediment to the progress of religious ideas, there should be no bar on free thought and discussion. It will be useful if this measure will be used as sparingly as possible.

Mr. T. Prakasam (East Godavari and West Godavari cum Kistna : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I rise to oppose the passing of this Bill. At the very outset I may say that the opposition to this Bill is not with a view to prevent redress which my Muhammadan brethren are anxious to get by way of punishing those who had attacked in the past the Muhammadan religion or the founder of the religion, the Prophet. If, as I thought, the object of the Bill was to give redress by way of providing penalties against such attacks, I should have expected the Government to make the provisions of this Bill more clear and more definite. They abandoned that course altogether and they have framed a section which applies not only to such specific cases, but to so many other general bona fide criticisms that might be brought under the Act. That is the chief complaint of mine before the House. This is an extraordinary piece of legislation undertaken by the Government, no doubt under difficult circumstances, when communal riots are going on and when they, as well as the leaders of the communities concerned, are anxious to put a stop to these disturbances and bring about a unity between the warring communities.

Now, Sir, there is section 298 of the Indian Penal Code. My contention is that that section would have been quite sufficient to bring all the offenders within the clutches of the law and punish them. Of course, one of the learned Judges of the High Court of Lahore pointed out that the law was defective as was understood by him. My submission is that that learned Judge is one of so many Judges who have erred in interpreting the law. My Honourable friend Mr. Kaberuddin Ahmed is always happy and he always laughs. I can only point out that section 298 of the Indian Penal Code lays down that whenever anyone deliberately wounds the religious feelings of any person or any class he should be tried and sentenced to one year's imprisonment. That is the section. (Official Members : " No ".) I hear the cries of " No ", but perhaps the word " class " is not there. I take it, Sir, that the word " religion " is not there ; I take it that the word " prophet " or the " founder of any religion " is not to be found in the section. But how else can religious feelings of individuals be wounded, if it cannot be done by attacking the religion or the founder himself. It is a matter of ordinary common sense with regard to the interpretation of law ; one need not know much of law. Whoever attacks a religion or a founder wounds the religious feelings of that society. He is guilty under section 298. With regard to that section, my submission is that the Government has been during the last five years, ever since these communal riots started, between the devil and the deep sea. They did not know what to do. Interference in these matters would perhaps make the public feel that they were interfering in religious matters. They were not able to lay their hands upon the provisions of law with courage and approach the matter and get at the offenders and put them on their trial and convict them. As I said on another occasion, these communal riots started just at a time when it was very helpful to Government with regard to putting a stop to the great non-co-operation movement. Four years have elapsed now. Day after day, month after month, year after year, there have been riots, but what steps had been taken with regard to prosecutions under section 298 or section 153A of the Indian Penal Code ?

Sir, no doubt prosecutions have been launched under the general provisions of riot, murder and other offences, and people had been sentenced. Not one step had been taken by the Government with regard to this matter of wounding religious feelings at least to the extent to which they could have gone. Of course, the question of insulting the Prophet came only very recently, and I do not say that they were not justified in attempting to remedy the defect in the law as was pointed out. But the law as it stands has been quite sufficient to meet these cases also. Now, what is it that they have marked out in new section 295A ? They have added the word " religion ", they have added the word " class ". The singular includes the plural in law. Now, by merely adding the word " religion " or the word " class ", you have not in any way improved the position at all. Again, Sir, the Select Committee, on which many of my distinguished friends sat, have added the two words before the word " intention ", namely, " deliberately and maliciously ". I spent a good part of my life in the jugglery of the law in the law courts. The word " intention " is a plain honest word. Whoever intends to commit a crime comes within the purview of the law. The words " deliberately intends with malicious intention " are added. What is " malice " ? Where is it defined ? You have to go back only to civil law to know what is meant by " malicious ". " Constructive malice ", " legal malice ", " actual malice " and all sorts of speculation have been gone through by the learned Judges who were called upon to interpret that word and any indirect motive was held to constitute a malice. How does it make any difference from intention, I am not able to understand. I do not understand the difference between intention and deliberate intention. Having made that provision, they satisfied themselves that this section would cover only those cases where a prophet is attacked or a religion is attacked, maliciously and deliberately with dishonest intention. My submission is that it is not only such class of cases that would be brought within the mischief of this section. From my 25 years' experience as an advocate or pleader, I could tell you that so much mischief was done on the interpretation that was put by the great, great judges or learned advocates like my Honourable friend Mr. S. Srinivasa Iyengar on the word " intention ". How many people had been hanged, how many innocent people had been hanged—(Laughter)—how many guilty persons had been acquitted ?

Mr. S. Srinivasa Iyengar (Madras City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : On a point of personal explanation, Sir. I never had to construe the meaning of the word " intention " in any case.

Mr. T. Prakasam : I did not mean any offence to my leader. I thought he would take it in the spirit in which I mentioned it.

Mr. S. Srinivasa Iyengar : I never had to appear in that class of cases where it was necessary to construe the meaning of the word " intention ".

Mr. T. Prakasam : As has been pointed out by my Honourable friend who spoke before me, this section might apply to so many other classes of offences, not as between Hindus and Mussalmans alone, but it may be as between Hindus and the Christian missionaries. Allow me to tell the Honourable Members of this House that in the hamlet of one village in one of my districts nearly as many as 300 people who belonged to the panchama class and who formed all the population of that hamlet had been converted in one moment by one Christian missionary. Conversions to Christianity are going on on a very large scale in the southern part of India. May I point out to my Honourable Mussalman friends, who seem to be labouring under a misapprehension, that they are very much mistaken in thinking that those of us who are opposing this measure are having any idea against their own beliefs or ideas ? That is not so. This section is a very mischievous measure. As this measure is worked out in future—I only hope I will live to see it—you will find that this section will be applied in a most mischievous manner as regards the granting of sanctions for prosecution and with regard to prosecution itself.

Mr. K. Ahmed : You can amend the Act later on

Mr. T. Prakasam : My Honourable friend says we can amend this Act later on. We are all sent here to legislate laws for our countrymen. Why not prevent instead of amending ? I hope my Honourable friend will be able to amend the law before it is too late. I submit that this is a measure which would apply not only as between Hindus and Mussalmans, as is very much misunderstood now, but it would also apply to every other community. Who are the persons after all that would accord sanction for prosecution ? There was an amending clause tabled here that the authority to accord sanction for prosecution should not vest solely in Government. That was voted down. Who are the persons that grant sanctions generally ? We know who would be approached in Local Governments for sanction to prosecute. Who is the officer approached ? What is the judgment of that officer ? Again, Sir, who are the Judges that hear these cases ? In India, one cannot say that a Hindu would be a Judge to hear disputes relating to Hindus alone. When communal differences and dissensions arise, when prosecutions are started under the existing law, an Englishman might be the Judge, a Hindu might be the Judge, a Mussalman might be the Judge, a Christian might be the Judge or a person belonging to any other community might be the Judge. What is it that this Judge can possibly understand with regard to these disputes as between two different religions ? The Judge belongs only to one faith, one religion. It would be very difficult for the Judge to decide aright. If it is a bailable offence or if it is an offence which is compoundable, it will be a matter as between the communities affected. Certainly there must be a prosecution. If there is no provision in the law for compounding, there will necesssarily be a conviction. But my submission is that it must be left to the leaders of the communities ultimately to decide whether it is a case in which the man should be convicted or whether the matter should be adjusted between the communities themselves. I suggest this course because it is a matter which relates to criticism against a religion or against religious feelings of any particular individual or the founder of a religion.

Mr. K. Ahmed : In the meantime we will murder each other.

Mr. T. Prakasam : As regards killing each other, my Honourable friend has been on very safe ground. He has never killed another, nor has he got himself killed. He has never been in the fighting line where these riots take place. He has never given one blow, nor has he received any. According to my conception, the manner in which these riots should have been approached by ourselves or by the Government is quite different. According to me, at the very first instant of an outbreak of a riot, the Government or the leaders should jump into the breach and should take the necessary steps to put a stop to the whole thing. They must also attempt to settle disputes from time to time. If only the Government had done this, there would have been no trouble at all. You will pardon me, Sir, when I refer to the incident at Multan where you were also present. You were present at that time when the first riot occurred. You went from door to door, you yourself heard the tales of woe narrated by some of the ladies from within closed doors. What happened in Multan ? My Honourable friend Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya and my friend Hakim Ajmal Khan went to Multan and tried their best to bring about a compromise in the first instance. All of us were present at the first trip. But the second time when they were there with a view to bring about a settlement between the Hindus and Mussalmans, who was responsible for not allowing that to be done ? It was one of the Government officers who was responsible for the break down. They were prevented from bringing about a compromise. That was the first attempt in which they failed. Since then so many riots have occurred. Sir, I would like to point out that these riots, these disturbances, could have been quelled completely if the Government had had a heart and if the Government had had a soul and had jumped into the breach between the two communities and had done their best to give relief to those who suffered and endeavoured to settle the differences. What suffering there was, what losses there were ! And what redress was given by the Government by way at least of temporary relief to those who had suffered ? Nothing has been done up till now, and that is why I submit the question of disturbances ought to be approached both by the Government and by the leaders of the country in quite a different spirit. I now see after living to this stage that the Government have at last realised their past error and that they are anxious to bring about a better state of things. Anything that they do will be welcome in the country and also by the leaders of the communities who have been so anxious to give full co-operation to the Government with regard to these matters. Therefore, Sir, this measure is unnecessary. It really interferes with the freedom of speech, with the freedom of the Press, with the liberty of person and the liberty of property also. That has been pointed out by my Honourable friend Mr. K. C. Roy, but because it is a journalist's opinion it was considered not to be of sufficient importance. And my Honourable friend Colonel Crawford wants to have another piece of legislation specially against the Press. Well, I have been in charge of a press also during the last 6 years and I know what trouble we are having even without your Acts and your legislation, without these prosecutions. What trouble are we having even to-day ? The press which I control is under the ban of the Madras Government even now. It is no good your enacting a provision which will cover the whole ground and bring about the prosecution of innocent people. I do not charge the heads of Government for all these prosecutions. I may say at once it is not the Governor, the Viceroy or the Honourable the Home Member that would be directly responsible for these prosecutions. We know who gives those opinions, how that gets the seal of the Government and the whole prosecution is started under the authority and in the dignified name of the State, and how poor individuals have to go through it all, and it is very rarely that a person escapes at the hands of the Magistrate or the Judge under the present constitution and the system of government in this country. So, Sir, I oppose the passing of this measure.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : I cannot permit this measure to pass out of our hands without informing this House as to the very great constitutional change that this law embodies. Frequent references have been made on both sides of the House, by the Honourable the Home Member in his opening speech as well as by Honourable Members on this side of the House, to the English law of blasphemy and blasphemous libel ; but may I remind the Honourable the Home Member and the Honourable Members who have followed suit that the English law cannot be compared to the Indian law, because under the English law the King is the Defender of the Faith and under the Established Church it is the duty of King and Parliament to protect the Protestant Church, and all the laws that have been made with that object in view ? But is that the position of the Government of India ? Are the Government of India the defender of the faith or of any faith in this country ? I submit, Sir, they are the defender of peace and not the defender of faith, and consequently the law that they are entitled to enact should have been directed against the breach of public peace.

Even in England with the growth of the Constitution and the multiplication of the dissenting sects the English law, which was originally intended to protect the Protestant Church, has been widened so as to protect the people against cracking each other's heads. In the numerous Statutes which Honourable Members will find regulating the course of religious debates in England, all that the English law aims at at the present moment is the preservation of public peace. I have in my hand, Sir, a reference to no less than eight English Statutes, and what is the summary of them all ? The summary of them all is that these Statutes have all been enacted with the object of preventing disturbances in churches, disturbing dissenting congregations, obstructing or assaulting a clergyman or other minister in the discharge of his duties, protecting church windows, and quarrelling , chiding or brawling, smiting or laying violent hands on a consecrated place. That is the present English law. My submission, therefore, is that when the Honourable the Home Member refers to the English law in support of this Bill, I submit he is referring first of all to a wrong system of law because that law is radically inapplicable to the Indian constitution ; and in the second place, even if it were to furnish any analogy for the enactment of a law in this country, that law is now limited and confined to the preservation of public peace. If, Sir, the Honourable the Home Member had come here with a Bill to preserve the public peace in matters religious and spiritual, I am perfectly certain that this side of the House would not have offered the opposition at every stage to which this Bill has been subjected. Sir, I regret that the Honourable the Home Member did not think it right to add a small clause to section 108 of the Criminal Procedure Code which deals with cognate offences. We have there the offence of sedition, that is, seditious libel. We have there an offence punishable under section

[Sir Hari Singh Gour.]

153A, that is, offences of one class against another. If a clause had been added there for the purpose of bringing in religious disturbance of public peace, I have no doubt that that section would have amply met the requirements of the present case and nobody would have had any serious objection to the Government introducing a clause in the Code of Criminal Procedure. But as it is we are asked to add one more offence to the substantive criminal law of this country, and I am certain that those who feel that the immediate cause of this legislation will be satisfied will very soon discover that either this law is a dead letter or that it will be applied in cases to which it was never intended by the Legislature that it should be applicable. Let me give an instance. No doubt the Select Committee have greatly improved the language of section 295, but what remains ? I will ask any Honourable Member to give me in very clear and intelligent language the meaning of the following words. What is the meaning of the words " religious belief " ? Now, Sir, so far as Hindus are concerned their social structure and religious system are interwoven, and what is a social matter to an Englishman is a matter of religious belief to a Hindu. The result is that matters of social reform, matters in which a person directs criticism against a purely social institution, are apt to come within the four corners of section 295A ; and then, as I pointed out on the last occasion, it is not merely a case of Hindus versus Muhammadans, but it is a case of Muhammadans versus Muhammadans and Hindus versus Hindus.

4 P.M.

We have in our community no less than 200 odd sects, and the Muhammadans have got half as many. And what will be the result ? The result would be that small sub-sects. attacking the other sub-sects. on a purely religious controversy, though it may not endanger the public peace, because endangering the public peace is not a part of the offence, but it is merely the carrying on of a religious controversy with the malicious intention described in section 295A that is germane to the constitution of the offence—now, suppose that the two sub-sects, are carrying on a peaceful controversy, but each one is fired by religious rancour and we all know that there is such a thing as odium theologicum. In religious matters people lose their heads and they talk in a language which they may not in their cooler moments employ. Now, suppose we have controversies of that character. They do not endanger the public peace. Would not the Local Government be justified—any Local Government that reads the Act, would be justified in prosecuting one sect. against the other. And whom will it prosecute ? Both classes are fighting with each other, we will assume, for the possession of a banner, or for the right of precedence in a religious procession, each one claiming to receive that precedence from the founder of the faith or from one of the spiritual vicegerents of that faith upon the earth. What will be the position ? The position would be that both these classes which are fighting with each other for a purely civil right of precedence and possession, will be prosecuted under this section.

Mr. K. Ahmed : No, under section 144.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : I therefore submit that this section, enacted though it be for the purpose of preserving the public peace, will defeat the very purpose for which it has been enacted. Take the other side of the case. We have been referred to dummy editors. Well, Sir, we know these dummy editors. One comes in and the other goes out, and we have something like 10 or 14 editors in succession swearing to be the editor of a newspaper or the publisher of a newspaper. What will be the result ? Will you be able to deal with them ? You will not be able to deal with them at all, and the instrument or dissemination of objectionable literature would still remain in the possession of the mischief-makers, whereas if you resorted to the preventive procedure laid down in the Code of Criminal Procedure you would have immediately laid hand, your heavy hand, upon the printing press that is disseminating the objectionable literature or upon the conductors of that newspaper, and at the same time your action would have been justified, because it was preventive and not punitive. I therefore submit that on every ground –the ground of first principles, the ground of public expediency and the ground of impracticability—this piece of legislation is ill-conceived.

One word and I have done. I do hope that the Honourable the Home Member who has been all along supporting the recommendations of the Select Committee will stick to his guns and stand by the decision of the Select Committee. We find in section 295 of the Indian Penal Code, which has been read to the House, the offence, which is a far more serious offence, is bailable, and this new offence now intended to be created by section 295A is made non-bailable. The Honourable the Home Member interjected a remark when one of us spoke at an earlier stage of the debate, that section 295 dealt with individuals. May I ask the Honourable the Home Member to pay us the compliment of refreshing his memory by looking at that section once more, and he will find that section 295 deals with not only the disturbance of religious worship, but with the committing of a far graver overt act, such as the defilement of a place of worship, which is of course a far more serious offence than merely the use of words or the making of speeches which any Member of this House will admit is not so serious as a direct overt criminal act disturbing a religious place of worship or destroying some object of religious veneration. While a person who commits this far more serious crime is entitled to bail, yet a person who merely reviles another man's religion is to be laid by his heels and imprisoned before his trial. That, I submit, is a position which is intolerable, and I would ask the Honourable the Home Member to reconsider the decision and see that the offence is once more restored to the catena of bailable cases. Sir, I have stated what I wanted to say. I caution Government that they will find in the near future that this Bill will not serve the purpose for which it is being enacted, and very soon they will find that it will be necessary for them to come back to this House with an amendment of the Code of Criminal Procedure, or it may be, of the Press Act, or it may be of any other Statute of the Indian Legislature for the purpose of giving them power to attack the mischief which we are all anxious that the Government should possess the power to attack, but which we are equally anxious to see should not trench upon the right of speech and free discussion of the subject. It is upon that ground and not upon the narrow ground of communalism that I oppose this measure.

(Several Honourable Members : " Let the question be now put ".)

Mr. K. C. Roy (Bengal : Nominated Non-Official) : I shall not detain the House longer than two minutes and I shall give an early opportunity to the House to put the last motion to the vote. Before you do so, I wish to correct an erroneous impression which was created in this House by certain observations made by my Honourable friend, Mr. Farookhi. Mr. Farookhi told the House that the Urdu Press was unanimous in support of the Bill. That is not quite a correct statement. I will give you one or two examples from the Urdu Press to prove my statement. The Urdu Press in Northern India is divided into two sections, one controlled by the Mussalman leaders and another controlled by the Hindus. I ....

Mr. Abdul Latif Sahib Farookhi (North Madras : Muhammadan) : I did not say Urdu Press ; I said the Mussalman Press.

Mr. K. C. Roy : I will take the Mussalman Press first. The Siasat says :

" The proposed Bill will give endless disputes not only among the various communities in India but among the various sects of a single community ".

I shall give you another paper. The Inqilab says :

" The drafts of the new law that we have seen are all absurd and will bring to the country calamities which were not brought by any other law excepting perhaps the Press Act."

I will not cite the Urdu Press run by the Hindus or the Sikh Press run by the Sikhs. The Sikh Press in particular is very anxious that the right of initiation of a case should be vested in the communities and individuals along with Government. I congratulate the House on not accepting the amendment of my Honourable friend Mr. Bhargava. If that amendment had been accepted, it would have been impossible to run any press or newspaper, particularly, the big Anglo-Indian papers. Now, Sir, this Bill has been piloted with the help of my Muhammadan friends. I am glad they have honestly voted with the Government. (Mr. Yamin Khan : Also Hindu Members.) I am giving my views. You can give yours. But, Sir, there is a very large and influential section of Moslem opinion which does not share the views of the Muslim Members of this House. I have received numerous telegrams and letters. One which I value most is a telegram which I have received from the Honourable the Maharaja of Mahmudabad. Every Muslim in this House knows the service he has rendered to the Muslim community and to the country at large. I oppose the Bill.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Sir, an Honourable Member opposite reproved me on a ground which I think was not entirely just. He reproved me for not making a longer speech and he reproved me for suggesting that this House was not at perfect liberty to vote as it pleased on this motion. That, Sir, is not what I said. What I said was that the House has already affirmed the principle of the Bill on two occasions, and that consequently it was unnecessary for me to deal with that matter at very great length ; and in truth the course of the debate this afternoon on this motion has added little to what was already before the House. Most diverse criticisms have been made on this Bill. In some quarters it has been represented as an extremely drastic measure. Mr. K. C. Roy in his first speech quoted, I think, the opinion of some person with whom he had been discussing the matter—that the Bill went to the Select Committee as a small thing and emerged as nothing. Well, the Bill can hardly be a very formidable measure and nullity at the same time. Government have been accused of doing things which they ought not to do and of not doing things which they ought to do. My Honourable and learned friend on the opposite side, Mr. Prakasam, has argued that section 298 of the Indian Penal Code amply covered all possible cases of that kind. Now, Sir, I venture to reply that I am in disagreement with that opinion. Section 298 would not as a matter of fact cover the cases which we wish to cover by this Bill. I will not follow the Honourable gentleman's argument further. I will only say that another Honourable Member, the leader of his party, found it unintelligible and I may be pardoned for finding it equally unintelligible. What I would like to remind the House is that the issue before it which has been somewhat clouded in the course of the debate is really very simple. The real issue is this—if you have a scurrilous and deliberate insult to religion or religious beliefs, can it be directly penalised under the existing law ? It cannot be directly penalised under the existing law and the object of the Bill is, as pointed out, to make deliberate and malicious and scurrilous insult to religion a substantive matter. I venture to say that the grave apprehensions that have been expressed as to the comprehensiveness of this Bill, as to the character of the actions, by speech or writing, which can conceivably come under this Bill, have been greatly exaggerated. Indeed I am myself somewhat inclined to believe that the language of the amended Bill is in some respects too narrow, though on that subject I am prepared to accept the verdict of the House. But, Sir, before I sit down there is one appeal which I wish to make to the House. It has been suggested that this Bill has been directed either to placate or to penalise particular interests. It has been suggested that particular interests are liable to be specially penalised by this Bill. I appeal to the House to look at this Bill, its intention and its consequences without any sectarian consideration whatsoever. The Bill is universal in its application. It will not penalise nor will it carry any special advantage to any one community as distinct from any other. The intention of the Government in bringing forward the measure is to do something, however inadequate, to deal with, at any rate, one aspect of what every one agrees is a very grave and serious problem. It has been suggested that this Bill does not really go to the roots of the matter. No one ever contended that the Bill really goes to the roots of the matter. It is obvious that moral remedies must be more potent and penetrating in this matter than any legal remedies, but that is no reason why we should refrain from adopting such legal remedies as are in our reach. In moving this motion, that is what I am asking the House to do.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That the Bill further to amend the Indian Penal Code and the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, for a certain purpose, as reported by the Select Committee, and as amended, be passed."

APPOINTMENT OF MEMBERS TO THE COMMITTEE TO CONSIDER THE QUESTION OF RESIDENCE AND ACCOMMODATION FOR MEMBERS OF THE INDIAN LEGISLATURE.

Mr. President : I have to announce that, in pursuance of the motion that was carried in the House on the 14th September, I have appointed the following six Members to serve on a Committee to consider the question of residence and accommodation for Members of the Indian Legislature, namely :

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra,

Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar,

Mr. M. R. Jayakar,

Mr. H. Cocke,

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub, and

Mr. K. C. koy.

THE HINDU CHILD MARRIAGE BILL.

Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda (Ajmer-Merwara : General) : Sir, I rise to move that the Select Committee to which the Bill to regulate marriages of children amongst Hindus was referred do consist.....

Mr. K. C. Neogy (Dacca Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : On a point of order, Sir. The Honourable Member who is about to make this motion, moved for consideration of the Bill, and it was another Honourable Member who moved for reference of the Bill to a Select Committee. I submit that it is the duty and the privilege of that other Honourable Member to propose the names of that Select Committee.

Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda : Either of the two, the Mover of the Bill or of the amendment, can make the proposal.

Mr. President : To which particular Standing Order does the Honourable Member (Mr. Neogy) refer ?

Mr. K. C. Neogy : The motion that the Bill be referred to a Select Committee is not complete in itself.....

Mr. President : I wish to know from the Honourable Member the particular Standing Order on which he relies ?

Mr. K. C. Neogy : I have not got the Standing Orders with me.

Mr. President : I know the practice of this House is that the Member who moves that the Bill be referred to a Select Committee also moves that the Committee do consist of such and such Members. But I do not know if Mr. Harbilas Sarda is debarred by any Standing Order from making this motion.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : As a matter of fact the motion he made was actually defeated by the House. The motion that was carried was for reference to a Select Committee, which was moved by another Member, and it really remains now for that Member to complete his otherwise incomplete motion.

Mr. President : I think we better stick to the practice we have followed so far in such cases. Kumar Ganganand Sinha.

Kumar Ganganand Sinha (Bhagalpur, Purnea and the Santhal Parganas : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, I beg to move :

"That the Select Committee to which the Bill to regulate marriages of children amongst the Hindus was referred do consist of the following persons, namely : Lala Lajpat Rai, Mr. M. R. Jayakar, Mr. M. A. Jinnah, Maulvi Muhammad Yakub, Colonel H. A. J. Gidney, Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya, Lala Rang Behari Lall, Sir Hari Singh Gour, Mr. K. C. Roy, Mr. W. A. Cosgrave, Rai Sahib Harbilas Sarda, the Honourable Mr. J. Crerar, Diwan Chaman Lall, Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar, Mr M. Ruthnaswamy, Dr. Moonje and the Mover; and that the number of members whose presence shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the Committee shall be seven."

The motion was adopted.

THE ADEN CIVIL AND CRIMINAL JUSTICE (HIGH COURT JURISDICTION AMENDMENT) BILL.

Sir Denys Bray (Foreign Secretary) : Sir, I beg to move that the Bill further to amend the Aden Civil and Criminal Justice Act, 1864, in order to make further provision for the jurisdiction thereunder of the High Court of Judicature at Bombay, as passed by the Council of State, be taken into consideration.

Sir, in this Bill we seek to put the finishing touches to the judicial reforms we have recently been introducing into Aden. We began some months back by appointing to Aden a Bombay civilian of standing and considerable judicial experience as District and Sessions Judge. A further step forward was made by the passing in the Bombay Legislative Council of a Bill amending the Aden Civil and Criminal Justice Act, 1864. The main purpose of the Act that was passed in the Bombay Council was the virtual transfer of the judicial administration at Aden from the Resident to the Judicial Assistant. Under that Act the Judicial Assistant is empowered to exercise all the powers that are exercisable by the Resident. In this Bill, Sir, we seek to make provision for appeals to the High Court of Bombay. I may simply emphasise two things. First, the provisions in this Bill were framed by a Select Committee of the Bombay Legislative Council. They sought indeed to introduce these provisions in their own Bill, but they were found to be ultra vires. The provisions before us have, moreover, the backing not only of the Bombay Government but also the general support of the High Court of Bombay.

Mr. B. Das (Orissa Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, I do not want to make a speech but I want certain information in respect of one or two points either from my Honourable friend Sir Denys Bray, or the Finance Member. Sir, this Bill refers to certain legislative measures, but what I understood during the last Budget Session was that India has to pay £250,000 to the British Government and that India has no further commitments with regard to Aden. I would like to know whether we have still any executive or administrative responsibilities in connection with Aden, and whether we have any financial commitments either in the matter of administration or judicial administration or in any other directions, such as railways, and so forth, and whether India is committed to any further expenditure.

Sir Denys Bray : Sir, I fail to see myself how this question arises out of the Bill before the House. But I may say in a word that Aden remains part of India ; that is to say, the Aden settlement proper remains as much a part of India as it did before. India is responsible for everything on the civil side connected with the actual settlement of Aden—administratively, executively, judicially and in respect of everything else I can think of. What has been transferred from India is merely the political arrangements connected with the Aden hinterland, the Aden protectorate, and the various political commitments that arise from and through the protectorate. Similarly, India has been relieved of the external defence of Aden, and it is for this purpose, and in consideration of the fact that His Majesty's Government have taken on the defence of Aden, that India naturally has to make a contribution towards the defence of Aden. Perhaps I may add this ; that the settlement in respect of Aden that has been arrived at is the settlement which was placed before the Inchcape Committee, and which that Committee enjoined on me as Foreign Secretary to promote.

* Speech not corrected by the Honourable Member.

" This solution would in our opinion have several advantages and we recommend that it be examined with a view to its adoption ".

The solution that has actually been adopted is the solution which earned this warm commendation from the Inchcape Committee.

Mr. B. Das : Sir, may I ask.....

Mr. President : Order, order. This is not question time.

The question I have is :

" That the Bill further to amend the Aden Civil and Criminal Justice Act, 1864, in order to make further provision for the jurisdiction thereunder of the High Court of Judicature at Bombay, as passed by the Council of State, be taken into consideration."

The motion was adopted.

Clauses 2 and 3 were added to the Bill.

Mr. President : Clause 4.

Mr. S. Srinivasa Iyengar (Madras City : Non-Muhammadan Urban) : I should like to know, Sir, whether the Bombay High Court will have power of revision in respect of those cases in which there is no right of criminal appeal.

Sir Denys Bray : Sir, the present provisions still stand, that is to say, the provisions of section 29 of the Aden Civil and Criminal Justice Act, 1864. It will still be at the discretion of the Resident to reserve any point or points of law for the opinion of the said High Court in criminal cases which are not covered by appeals.

Mr. S. Srinivasa Iyengar : What about the power of revision of the High Court ?

Mr. President : Order, order.

The question is :

" That clause 4 do stand part of the Bill."

The motion was adopted.

Clause 4 was added to the Bill.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The Title and the Preamble were added to the Bill.

Sir Denys Bray : Sir, I move that the Bill, as passed by the Council of State, be passed.

The motion was adopted.

THE INLAND BONDED WAREHOUSES (AMENDMENT) BILL.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett (Finance Member) : Sir, I move for leave to introduce a Bill further to amend the Inland Bonded Warehouses Act, 1896, for certain purposes.

The purposes for which this Bill is introduced are fully given in the Statement of Objects and Reasons, and I confine myself to making my motion.

The motion was adopted.

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : Sir, I introduce the Bill.

THE INDIAN DIVORCE (SECOND AMENDMENT) BILL.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar (Home Member) : Sir, I move that the Bill further to amend the Indian Divorce Act for a certain purpose, as passed by the Council of State, be taken into consideration

In making this motion I hope I shall have the support of my Honourable friend, Sir Hari Singh Gour, because as a matter of fact it is largely due to his representations that this Bill has been submitted to the House. The point is a short one. While the House was engaged in discussing an earlier Bill to amend the Indian Divorce Act, it was pointed out by Sir Hari Singh Gour that the Indian Christian Marriage Act, which was passed about three years after the Indian Divorce Act itself was passed, permits of valid marriages being contracted between Christians and non-Christians. On the other hand, the Indian Divorce Act as it stands permits no relief to be granted except when the petitioner is a Christian. Sir Hari Singh Gour pointed out that that was in itself anomalous and that as a matter of fact a good many cases of hardship have occurred. He pointed out that it would be an equitable provision that relief should be granted under the Indian Divorce Act where either the petitioner or the respondent is a Christian. This will be the effect of the present Bill, which I ask the House to take into consideration.

The motion was adopted.

Clause 2 was added to the Bill.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The Title and Preamble were added to the Bill.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Sir, I move that the Bill further to amend the Indian Divorce Act for a certain purpose, as passed by the Council of State, be passed.

The motion was adopted.

THE ASSAM LABOUR AND EMIGRATION (AMENDMENT) BILL.

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra (Member for Industries and Labour) : Sir, I beg to move that the Bill further to amend the Assam Labour and Emigration Act, 1901, for certain purposes, as passed by the Council of State, be taken into consideration.

This is a very simple Bill of a purely formal character. Our reasons for bringing it before the Legislature have been fully explained in the Statement of Objects and Reasons, and it is hardly necessary for me to add anything to what has been stated therein. In short, some doubt has been expressed recently whether we had any legal authority to collect certain cesses which in fact have been collected ever since 1915 from employers in the tea industry for the purpose of the Assam Labour Board, and we want to regularise the position. That is the sole object of the Bill.

Sir, I move

Mr. N. M. Joshi (Nominated : Labour Interests) : Sir, I do not wish to make a long speech, except to say that Government have neglected the amendment of this old Act for a very long time. When they decided to amend the Assam Labour and Emigration Act, I think they ought to have amended the whole Act and brought it up to date. That Act requires modification in various respects for the protection of the workers on the tea plantations of Assam. I hope, Sir, that Government will not be satisfied with this Bill in which the workers of Assam are not very much interested, but they will soon bring forward a Bill to amend the Assam Emigration Act, which is now a very old and obsolete Act.

Mr. President . The Honourable Member has got the power to do so.

The question is :

"That the Bill further to amend the Assam Labour and Emigration Act, 1901, for certain purposes, as passed by the Council of State, be taken into consideration."

The motion was adopted.

Clauses 2 and 3 were added to the Bill.

Clause 1 was added to the Bill.

The Title and Preamble were added to the Bill.

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Sir, I move that the Bill, as passed by the Council of State, be passed.

The motion was adopted.

RESOLUTION RE RATIFICATION OF THE DRAFT CONVENTIONS CONCERNING (1) SEAMEN'S ARTICLES OF AGREEMENT, AND (2) REPATRIATION OF SEAMEN.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy (Member for Commerce and Railways) : Sir, I beg to move the following Resolution :

"This Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council that the question of the ratification of the Draft Conventions concerning—

(1) Seamen's Articles of Agreement, and

(2) The Repatriation of Seamen,

adopted by the General Conference of the International Labour Organisation of the League of Nations at its Ninth Session held at Geneva from the 7th to the 24th June

[Sir George Rainy.]

1926, should be considered at a later date, when the amendments necessary to bring the existing law into conformity with these Draft Conventions have been further examined in consultation with parties interested."

I should like to explain briefly, Sir, why it has been found necessary to bring these Resolutions before the House. Under Article 405 of the Treaty of Varseilles, which deals with the International Labour Organisation, the Member Governments have bound themselves within a period of 18 months to bring any Draft Convention adopted by the International Labour Conference before the competent authority which has power to take action, at latest, within 18 months of the date when the Draft Convention was adopted. In this case the period of 18 months will expire on the 24th of December next, and as legislation will be necessary before the Government of India can ratify these Conventions it was necessary, in order to comply with the provisions of the Treaty, that the Draft Conventions should be brought before the Indian Legislature as the competent authority at this Session, because before the next Session begins the period of 18 months will have expired. I should like to explain also the reason why we are not in a position at present to place legislation before this House. Some Honourable Members are perhaps aware that our merchant shipping law is closely interlocked with the merchant shipping law of the United Kingdom, and it is sometimes a matter of great difficulty to ascertain whether a particular matter is regulated by Indian law or by the British Statute. It has been found, as regards these two Conventions, that legislation by the Imperial Parliament will be necessary before the Government of India can implement the provisions of the Convention, and it would not be correct for the Government of India to ratify until such legislation has been passed. The points on which legislation in the Imperial Parliament are necessary are not of anything like first class importance. Take first the Convention about the repatriation of seamen. So far as Indian seamen, engaged in India are concerned, the provisions of the Indian law already give greater protection than is required to be given by the Convention, and so far as that is concerned, there is no difficulty in ratifying. But in one small point, namely, the repatriation of foreign seamen employed on a ship registered in India, but engaged in their own country, we have been advised that that is beyond the power of the Indian Legislature to deal with. Therefore for the moment we are not in a position to ratify the Convention. We hope that the British Government will decide to ratify and will pass the necessary amendment to its own Statute and thereafter it may be necessary to have some subsidiary legislation in India, but in that case there will be no real difficulty about ratification. As regards the other Convention, namely the seamen's articles of agreement, there are three clauses in the Convention which will require legislation in India, but I do not think that any of them will give rise to much difficulty. There is however, another article, in the Convention—article 5—about which there may be some difficulty and which it will be necessary to discuss with the parties interested. It is this. Under the Draft Convention the seamen's discharge certificate shall not contain any statement as to the quality of the seamen's work or as to his wages ; under the British law the discharge certificate may contain such a statement, if expressly asked for by the seaman while the Indian law, such a statement is neither required nor forbidden. We do not know at present what the British Government may decide to do about this Article ; and it is very desirable before we undertake any amendment of the law in this matter that we should know exactly what their position is, because if we legislated without doing so, a very difficult legal position might subsequently arise owing to a doubt as to which law in a given case ought to prevail.

I think these are the main points that arose in connection with these Conventions. I should like to make it plain that the difficulty about ratification at present arises entirely over these legal points and not over any large question of substance because our law in the main is quite as advanced in these two matters as the Convention, and on certain points it is even more advanced.

Sir, I move.

Mr. N. M. Joshi (Nominated : Labour Interests) : Sir, I move :

" That in that Resolution the words ' the question of the ratification ' be omitted and that for the words beginning from ' should be considered at a later date ' to the end of the Resolution, the words ' be ratified ' be substituted."

Sir, the object of my amendment is to request this House to recommend to the Government of India to ratify these Conventions at this meeting. The object of the original Resolution is to ask the House to postpone the consideration of this question. Sir, I want to show to the Members of this House that there are good reasons why we should not agree to the request made by the Honourable Member in charge of this Department. The attitude of the Government of India towards the question of improving the conditions of life and service of seamen is that of indifference and I am going to prove in a very brief speech that the Department does not deserve the trust which it asks this House to put in it. Sir, the life of seamen generally is very hard. Their life is full of risk and they have to work for a long time away from their homes and their families. It is, therefore, necessary that any Government which claims to be a Government caring for the working classes of that country should devote more than ordinary care to the welfare of seamen, and all over the world the Governments have done so. Unfortunately, our experience in this country is that the Government of India have not bestowed sufficient attention to this subject. For many years the Indian Merchant Shipping Act, which has some provisions for the welfare of Indian seamen, has not undergone any change. But since the International Labour Conference began to consider the question of labour and since the first Conference regarding the question of seamen was held at Genoa, the question of the conditions of service of seamen has begun to come before the Government of India and before the Legislature. But, Sir, the attitude of the Government of India towards the question of improving the conditions of seamen has been that of indifference. I remember very well when the Conventions and Recommendations of the Genoa Conference were placed before this House, the Government of India threw away almost all the Conventions and Recommendations. They, however, decided to enquire into some questions and they also promised to take some action on some others. But, Sir, the experience of the past six years shows that the Government of India have taken no action. I shall give you only a few instances. The Government of India appointed a Committee to go into the question of recruitment. When this House agreed to the recommendation of the Government of India that the Convention regarding recruitment of seamen should not be ratified, they promised to appoint a Committee. They appointed a Committee and the Committee found that there was much bribery in the work of recruiting the seamen. The Committee also made certain recommendations, but the Government of India have not yet carried out any of those recommendations.

Sir, I shall give you another instance. The Government of India promised to make an inquiry as to whether the amendment of the law was necessary in order to provide compensation to workmen whose contract of service was terminated on account of shipwreck. Sir, I have not heard anything about that inquiry and no result has yet followed.

Sir, there is another case. The Government of India have ratified certain Conventions. They have ratified the Convention regarding the age of admission of children to employment on the sea. They have taken no action to give legislative effect to the Convention. Then, Sir, the Convention that they ratified as regards the age of admission for the work of trimmers and stokers has not yet been given effect to.

Mr. President : And yet the Honourable Member wants Government to ratify this particular Convention ?

Mr. N. M. Joshi : I want to recommend to this House that Government's Resolution should not be accepted because the Government do not deserve.....

Mr. President : The Honourable Member's case is that this Convention should be ratified and curiously enough he argues that Government have not given effect to certain other Conventions after ratifying them.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : That is unfortunately true. But it is to some advantage of the seamen of this country that they should ratify this Convention immediately, so that we can at least go on agitating and telling this House that the Government of India do not keep their word. Now, Sir, the Conventions that they ratified as regards the age of admission for the work of trimmers and stokers and for compulsory medical examination of children have not yet been carried out. Then they had also ratified a Convention.....

Mr. President : I fail to understand why the Honourable Member should go on enumerating his grievances regarding other Conventions in speaking to this Resolution which refers to one particular Convention. The conduct of Government in the matter of other Conventions has got absolutely nothing to do with the question which the Honourable Member has raised by his amendment.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : Sir, with your indulgence I wish to bring to the notice of the House that the Government have been indifferent in this matter. It is therefore better that this House should not accept the Resolution of the Government of India and should accept my amendment.

Now, Sir, the conduct of the Government of India as regards this question does not entitle them to ask this House to wait till they bring forward legislation on this subject. The Conventions which we are considering to-day are important from the point of view of Indian seamen. Sir, the first Convention is regarding the agreements of seamen. Now, if this Convention is ratified immediately, Government are bound to give effect to the terms of that Convention. If they ratify the Convention, the seamen stand to gain in some respects. In the first place, the seamen of our country will gain as regards the continuous certificates given to them at the time of discharge. At present it is possible for the employers to include in the discharge certificate some terms regarding the quality of the work which the seamen do. It is a dangerous practice because, if you put in some words in the certificate regarding the quality of the work of the seamen, they are likely to lose. This Convention laid down that in the continuous discharge certificate no mention should be made of the quality of the work of the seamen. The seamen also have got the right to claim a separate certificate regarding the quality of their work. Then the Convention also gives the right to the seamen to get their pay when they get discharged before the termination of their contract if they provide a substitute. There are several other smaller items in which seamen stand to gain by the ratification of this Convention. I therefore think that this Resolution should not be accepted.

5 P.M.

There is one other point on which I wish to say a word especially when we are discussing the Convention passed at the Ninth Session of the International Labour Conference. At this Conference the question of recruitment of seamen came up for discussion through a speech made by my friend Mr. Davood who represented the Indian seamen at that Conference. In reply to that speech a representative of the Government of India made a statement which in my judgment was quite inaccurate.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : This does not seem to have any relevancy to the Draft Convention that we are discussing now.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : We are discussing the Convention passed at the Ninth Session of the International Labour Conference.

Mr. President : Not all the Conventions. We are only discussing the Convention which is under consideration and which is the subject matter of this Resolution. The question is whether this Assembly should ratify this Convention to-day or at a later date. We have nothing to do with any other Conventions. The conduct of the Government may be blameworthy in the matter of those other Conventions, but the reference to it is hardly relevant in dealing with this Resolution.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : What I am contending is that this Assembly has now got an opportunity to discuss certain Resolutions and Conventions passed at the Ninth Session of the International Labour Conference. It should be the ordinary parliamentary practice that, if certain statements have been made at that conference which are not accurate, we should have an opportunity of correcting them in this House on this occasion.

Mr. President : I cannot allow the Honourable Member to utilise this occasion for that purpose.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : With your indulgence, I want to point out that this is the only opportunity when we can discuss that point.

Mr. President : Order, order. The Honourable Member is not entitled to discuss that point on this Resolution.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : If that is your decision, Sir, I cannot point out at the present time the mistake or the inaccuracy of the statements made by the representative of the Government of India.

Mr. President : If it refers to this particular Convention the Honourable Member will be in order.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : It refers to this particular Convention only indirectly and not directly.

Mr. President : It is no use persisting. The Honourable Member knows it.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : There is only one other point to which I wish to refer and it is this. That statement refers to what had happened in this House. I am sure the House would be surprised to know that a false statement had been made at the Conference as regards what had happened in this House. If you will give me one minute, Sir, I shall explain what it was.

Mr. President : I am afraid that the Honourable Member is not at all in order in referring to that subject in dealing with this Resolution.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : I do admit that. But, with your indulgence I wish to state that this House was absolutely misrepresented at that conference. (Several Honourable Members : "Order, order".) The statement was made at that Conference that this House unanimously threw out the ratification of that particular Convention. As a matter of fact my Honourable friend Mr. Kabeer-ud-Din Ahmed had opposed that Convention (Laughter). When one Member had opposed that Convention, certainly it was wrong to say that this House unanimously threw out the ratification of that Convention. You know, Sir, the ordinary practice in our proceedings when a Resolution is adopted.....

Mr. President : The Honourable Member must now resume his seat.

Mr. M. S. Aney (Berar Representative) : Sir, I only wish to point out one inaccuracy in the amendment, as the amended resolution would be meaningless, if it be adopted as it stands. If the amendment is adopted the Resolution would read thus.....

Mr. President : The Honourable Member may vote against the amendment.

Mr. M. S. Aney : If this amendment is adopted the Resolution would read miserably. If the words sought to be omitted by the amendment are omitted in the Resolution, the resolution would read :

"This Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council that of the Draft Conventions, etc., etc., should be ratified."

This is certainly meaningless. The word "of" after "ratification" has to be omitted.

Mr. President : The Honourable Member may vote against it.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : No doubt the word "of" also should be omitted.

Mr. M. S. Aney : The word "of" must go.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : Yes, Sir.

Maulvi Abdul Matin Chaudhury (Assam : Muhammadan) : Sir, I rise to support the amendment of my Honourable friend Mr. Joshi and in this connection I want to protest against the obstructive tactics that are usually adopted by the Government (hear, hear) whenever any Convention of the International Labour Conference comes up before this House for ratification. The past experience does not very much encourage us to give an entirely free hand to the Government in putting off the ratification of the Convention for an indefinite period. I wish to illustrate my point by only one example. In the year 1920 the International Labour Conference held at Geneva adopted a draft Convention for establishing facilities for finding employment for seamen. In the autumn Session of the Legislative Assembly, in 1921, the Honourable Sir Charles Innes came before the House with a Resolution that that draft Convention should not be ratified, but that an enquiry should be made about the existing evil. The Government appointed a committee of enquiry. That Committee made its report in 1922. The Committee found grave abuses existed and they condemned the present system of recruitment by means of licensed brokers. They recommended that an employment bureau should be established at the ports of Calcutta and Bombay just on the lines suggested in the Draft Convention The report of the Committee was so damaging that the Government in publishing that report suppressed the last three paragraphs of the report which dealt with the existing abuses

Mr. N. M Joshi : Sometimes, they suppress the whole of it.

Maulvi Abdul Matin Chaudhury : That was in 1922. Five years have passed. The Government know that grave abuses exist. The Government know that these poor seamen are being exploited These brave seamen who saved England from starvation during the War—(hear, hear)—have been left to their fate. This Convention has been ratified by Germany, by Holland, by Italy by Spain, by Norway, by Sweden, by Japan and by Finland.

Mr. K. Ahmed (Rajshahi Division : Muhammadan Rural) : They are all civilised countries.

Maulvi Abdul Matin Chaudhury : But for the last seven years, the Government of India have been incubating upon it. They have not ratified it. With this example of the non-ratification of the Geneva Convention of 1920 before us, the House will be very reluctant to agree to this Resolution of the Honourable the Commerce Member. Before we agree to this Resolution, I think the House may very pertinently ask the Honourable the Commerce Member what has been the fate of the Geneva Convention of 1920, what has been done with the report of the seamen's Recruitment Committee, which the Honourable Sir Charles Innes had promised to place before us, for discussion. Before we agree to this Resolution, we must have an answer to this question from the Government.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : Sir, my Honourable friend Mr. Joshi gave two main reasons in support of his amendment. The first of them was that there was a Convention, or possibly more than one Convention, which the Government of India had never ratified. I am afraid I do not see how that is relevant to the Resolution I have placed before the House. The Government of India may sometimes have to decide that they cannot ratify a particular Draft Convention. But here the position is that we are anxious to ratify though there are certain legal and technical difficulties. As I endeavoured to explain to the House, these difficulties are not large questions of substance but mainly legal and technical points.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Why did you not say that at Geneva and why do you say it here ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I may inform the Honourable Member that I have never been in Geneva. Now it may occur to some Honourable Member to ask " Why not ratify at once and legislate later on ?" ; but, Mr. President, if I were to propose that course to the House, I should immediately fall into the condemnation of the other precedents quoted by my Honourable friend Mr. Joshi when he said that the Government of India had, in the case of certain Conventions, ratified a long time ago but taken no action to give effect to them. If that be so, then it is a condemnation which I am anxious to avoid and it is precisely for that reason that the Government of India have put forward Resolution in this form, and not in the form of recommending ratification. We cannot put a Resolution before this House recommending ratification until we are sure that we shall be in a position, if we ratify it, to give effect to the Convention. I may mention that at the Tenth Session of the Geneva Conference this question of procedure was discussed. In a report which reached me within the last week there is a passage I should like to read :

" The Experts also mentioned a difference of practice among Governments with regard to ratification. Some Governments secure the passage of any necessary legislation before ratifying, others notify ratification before such legislation is actually on the Statute-book ; the Experts pointed to the disadvantage of the latter system, though they considered that such ratifications are of great value as signifying acceptance of the principle of a Convention and recognition of the obligation to legislate in conformity therewith as soon as possible ; they suggested, however, that when such ratifications are deposited it should be stated that they will take effect only on the expiry of a specified period. The juridical questions thus raised led to an interesting discussion in Committee, where Mr. Pfister (Swiss Government) and Mr. Oersted (Employers, Denmark) expressed the view that legislation, when necessary, should in all countries precede ratification, and this point was also urged in a speech in full conference by Mr. Thorsen (Norwegian Government). We think this matter worthy of the attention of the Government of India, as it has been the practice in India in most cases to communicate ratification before legislation has been passed."

We are trying in this case to follow the procedure approved by our own delegates and to make sure that we have full legislative power to carry out the Convention before we invite the Legislature to ratify it. That in substance, Mr. President, is my reply to the arguments used by my Honourable friend Mr. Joshi.

I should like, however, to refer briefly to two more points. Mr. Joshi said that the two Conventions were very important and that their ratification would do a great deal to improve the lot of Indian seamen. Now I do not underrate the importance of these Conventions, but I think my Honourable friend overlooked the fact that they only apply to foreign-going ships registered in British India, and that the number of such ships at present is extremely small. These Conventions, when we ratify them, as I hope we shall, will do something but, in the nature of the case, they cannot do a great deal to improve the lot of the Indian seaman.

The other point to which I wish to allude is this. I am sure the House will not expect me at this hour and without previous notice to say exactly what the Government of India did or did not do, or why they did it or did not do it, as regards the long list of Conventions to which my Honourable friend referred. I will look into those cases and see what the position is, but clearly it is out of the question that I should reply in detail to-day.

Mr. President : The original Resolution was :

" That this Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council that the question of the ratification of the Draft Conventions concerning

(1) Seamen's Articles of Agreement, and

(2) the Repatriation of Seamen,

adopted by the General Conference of the International Labour Organisation of the League of Nations at its Ninth Session held at Geneva from the 7th to the 24th June 1926, should be considered at a later date, when the amendments necessary to bring the existing law into conformity with these Draft Conventions have been further examined in consultation with parties interested ".

Since which the following amendment has been moved :

" That the words ' the question of the ratification of ' be omitted."

2. " That for the words beginning from ' should be considered at a later date ' to the end of the Resolution, the words ' be ratified ' be substituted."

The question I have to put is that amendment be made.

The motion was negatived.

Mr. K Ahmed : At this juncture I should like to bring to the notice of the Chair that it is now very late and important business is coming on.. .....

Mr. President : Will the Honourable Member resume his seat and allow the Chair to put the original Resolution to the vote of the House ? The question I have to put is :

" That the following Resolution be adopted:—

' This Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council that the question of the ratification of the Draft Conventions concerning

(1) Seamen's articles of Agreement, and,

(2) the Repatriation of Seamen,

adopted by the General Conference of the International Labour Organisation of the League of Nations at its Ninth Session held at Geneva from the 7th to the 24th June 1926, should be considered at a later date, when the amendments necessary to bring the existing law into conformity with these Draft Conventions have been further examined in consultation with parties interested '."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Sir, before taking up any other matter for discussion to-day in this Assembly, I should like to point out that, important subjects are still down in the agenda for to-day and many Members have already left the House, Sir, because it is not the custom of this House to remain here after 4-30—at least that has been our experience in this Session ; and I say, Sir, that on account of that and on account of the importance of these subjects, if these questions are taken up to-day and passed without giving an opportunity to the representatives of the people of this country.....

Mr. President : Order, order. The Chair has already taken all these matters into consideration.

RESOLUTION RE RECOMMENDATIONS CONCERNING (1) THE REPATRIATION OF MASTERS AND APPRENTICES, AND (2) THE GENERAL PRINCIPLES FOR THE INSPECTION OF THE CONDITIONS OF WORK OF SEAMEN.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy (Member for Commerce and Railways) : Sir, I move the following Resolution :

"That this Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council that no action be taken on the Recommendations concerning:

(1) the Repatriation of Masters and Apprentices, and

(2) the General Principles for the Inspection of the Conditions of Work of Seamen,

adopted by the General Conference of the International Labour Organisation of the League of Nations at its Ninth Session held at Geneva from the 7th to the 24th June 1926 until the amendments necessary to bring the existing law into conformity with these Recommendations have been further examined in consultation with parties interested."

I will try to deal with this matter very briefly, Sir. The reasons for bringing forward the Resolution are very similar to those which exist in the case of a Draft Convention but there is this difference, that here we are dealing with recommendations of the Labour Organisation and not actual Draft Conventions. In the case of a Draft Convention, if a Member Government proposes to adopt it, it must formally ratify it exactly as it stands without amendment. In the case of a Recommendation there is no question of ratification, and the Member Government can accept as much or as little as it pleases of the proposals included in the Recommendation. We are, however, bound exactly in the same way as in the case of a Draft Convention to bring Recommendations before the competent authority—that is, in this case the Legislature—within the specified period.

Now, as regards the first Recommendation, namely, the repatriation of masters and apprentices, the view of the Government of India is that in all probability no amendment in the law as regards masters will be found necessary. But as regards apprentices, it will be desirable to legislate in order to bring the law bearing on the repatriation of apprentices into line with the law bearing on the repatriation of seamen. That will mean legislation both in the Imperial Parliament and also in India. The other Recommendation is as regards the general principles for the inspection of the work of seamen. Here the necessity for legislation arises out of an Article in the Recommendation which expresses the desirability that, as far as possible, all the authorities charged with the inspection of the work of seamen should be brought under a single control. That is entirely in line with the policy of the Government of India, as I think I have explained more than once in this House. Our policy is to bring the administration of the merchant shipping law, which includes inspection of the work of seamen, under the direct control of the Central Government instead of leaving it largely to the Local Government as we do at present. In order that that may be done, it will be necessary to amend the Merchant Shipping Act, and I hope it will be possible to introduce a Bill dealing with that point in the cold weather Session. It has not been possible to introduce the Bill this Session, and therefore it became necessary to bring this Resolution before the House.

Sir, I move.

Mr. N. M. Joshi (Nominated : Labour Interests) : I move an amendment to this Resolution :

"That for the words 'no action' the words 'necessary action' be substituted.
That all the words beginning from 'until the amendments necessary' to the end of the Resolution, be omitted."

The Honourable Member in charge of the Department said that these Conventions and Recommendations are only applicable to seamen working on foreign-going ships registered in India, and there are very few such ships at present in India and so they are not of great importance to Indian seamen. Sir, in this world very little is done for the working classes and especially for the seamen. So I am prepared to admit that whatever is done by these Conventions and Recommendations is indeed very little. But the working classes receive so little that even when a little is done, they think that much is done for them. It is for that reason that I say these Conventions and Recommendations are useful to the seamen.

My amendment asks this House to recommend to the Government that necessary action on the Recommendations should be taken. One of these Recommendations is intended to ask the Government to establish a proper and regular system of inspection of the conditions under which seamen work on ships, conditions as regards health, safety and other matters. Under the Indian Merchant Shipping Act there is no provision for a regular system of inspection through special inspectors. The shipping masters have got certain powers to inspect ships under certain conditions, but the shipping masters have got their ordinary work to do and they cannot under ordinary circumstances find time to inspect the ships on which the Indian seamen work. If the Recommendation is given effect to at once, the Government will have to appoint inspectors to inspect the conditions on ships.

Sir, the Recommendation also insists that if the seamen have any grievances, they should have the right to bring them to the notice of the inspectors either directly themselves, or through their representatives. Under the present Indian Merchant Shipping Act every seaman cannot do this. It is necessary that three seamen should combine together to bring to the notice of the shipping master any grievances that they may have ; nor can they bring their grievances to the notice of the shipping master through their representatives. Again, this Recommendation insists that such inspectors should be appointed as will be acceptable to the seamen as well as to the employers. The Recommendation also insists that the inspectors should from time to time consult the organisations of seamen as well as the employers. You will thus see that if necessary action is taken on this Recommendation the Indian seamen stand to gain something, although I am not prepared now to say that they will gain very much. I therefore hope that the House will pass my amendment.

The Honourable Member while moving this Resolution stated that the necessary changes will take some time. He also stated that in some circumstances it is not within his power to take action, as our law as regards merchant shipping is interlinked with the English law. I hope the Honourable Member will take steps to see that the Indian Merchant Shipping Act is made independent of the British Merchant Shipping Act, so that if we want to make any changes in the law as regards the conditions of service of seamen we may be able to do so without being dependent upon the British Parliament.

I hope this House will accept my amendment.

Mr. K. Ahmed (Rajshahi Division : Muhammadan Rural) : I request that the discussion may be adjourned, as there is the Unity Conference sitting downstairs.....

Mr. President : Order, order. Sir George Rainy.

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : I will try to be very brief in replying to what my Honourable friend, Mr. Joshi, has said. He admits now that the benefit which the Indian seamen can derive from the adoption of these Recommendations is not very great ; but still he would like to see them put in force, and that, I may say, is also the desire of the Government of India. There may be one or two points on which they are not able to accept the Recommendations exactly as they stand, but the Recommendation about inspection to which the Honourable Member attaches most importance, has been examined in detail, and, as far as we can see legislation will be required only on two points one of which is a very small one. To give effect to the other parts of the Recommendation, we can proceed by executive action, and very largely it would be part of our reorganisation scheme for merchant shipping work generally. There was one other small point to which I wished to refer but it escaped my memory for the moment, and I do not know that I need add anything further.

Mr. President : The original Resolution was :

" That this Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council that no action be taken on the recommendations concerning

(1) the Repatriation of Masters and Apprentices, and

(2) the General Principles for the Inspection of the Conditions of Work of Seamen, adopted by the General Conference of the International Labour Organisation of the League of Nations at its Ninth Session held at Geneva from the 7th to the 24th June 1926 until the amendments necessary to bring the existing law into conformity with these Recommendations have been further examined in consultation with parties interested."

Since which the following amendment has been moved :

" That for the words ' no action ' the words ' necessary action ' be substituted.

That all the words beginning from ' until the amendments necessary ' to the end of the Resolution, be omitted ".

The question that I have to put is that that amendment be made.

The motion was negatived.

Mr. President : The question is :

" That the following Resolution be adopted :

' That this Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council that no action be taken on the recommendations concerning

(1) the Repatriation of Masters and Apprentices, and

(2) the General Principles for the Inspection of the Conditions of Work of Seamen,

adopted by the General Conference of the International Labour Organisation of the League of Nations at its Ninth Session held at Geneva from the 7th to the 24th June

1926 until the amendments necessary to bring the existing law into conformity with these Recommendations have been further examined in consultation with parties interested'.''

The motion was adopted.

RESOLUTION RE CENSORSHIP OF CINEMATOGRAPH FILMS.

Mr. President : The House will now resume further consideration of the following Resolution moved by the Honourable Mr. J. Crerar on the 14th September, 1927 :

''That this Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council that he be pleased to appoint a committee to examine and report on the system of censorship of cinematograph films in India and to consider whether it is desirable that any steps should be taken to encourage the exhibition of films produced within the British Empire generally and the production and exhibition of Indian films in particular.''

Sir Hari Singh Gour (Central Provinces Hindi Divisions : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, I move the adjournment of the further consideration of this question.

Mr. President : Does the Honourable Member really realise the effect of the adjournment motion ? The Governor General in Council has got the power to appoint the Committee referred to in the Resolution. If the Assembly does not express its opinion to-day it may be that the Government, without consulting the Assembly might appoint a Committee. In that event, the House will lose the opportunity of influencing the decision of the Government.

Sir Hari Singh Gour : I bow to what has fallen from the Chair but the Members are now fully jaded. It is past half past five and we have other engagements to meet, and I hope the Honourable the Home Member will realise that this Resolution is far too important to be discussed at this very late hour. We have a number of amendments on the paper and full justice cannot be done to these amendments unless we are prepared to sit till 9 or 10 at night. I therefore ask that, with the concurrence of the Honourable the Home Member, the further discussion of this motion be adjourned till Wednesday or till the winter Session in Delhi.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar (Home Member) : I have no desire whatever to detain the House if there is a common desire to adjourn, but I must point out that the position that will emerge is precisely what you, Sir, have indicated.

Mr. President : The question I have to put is :

''That the further discussion of this Resolution be adjourned.''

The motion was adopted.

The Assembly then adjourned till Eleven of the Clock on Tuesday, the 20th September, 1927.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Tuesday, 20th September, 1927.

The Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber at Eleven of the Clock, Mr. President in the Chair.

MEMBER SWORN :

Mr. Thomas Ryan, C.I.E., M.L.A. (Department of Industries and Labour : Nominated Official).

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Mr. President : Maulvi Badi-uz-Zaman.

Mr. Abdul Latif Sahib Farookhi : With your permission, Sir, I shall put the question on behalf of the Honourable Member.

Mr. President : The Chair regrets that it cannot grant the permission.

Mr. Abdul Latif Sahib Farookhi : He has told me about it.

Mr. President : He may have told the Honourable Member, but he has not intimated it to the Chair.

(b) After the adverse findings of the magistrate against Mr. Maclaren, have the Bengal Nagpur Railway authorities taken any action against Mr. Maclaren ? Have they recovered the cost of the suit from him ?

(c) Is Mr. Maclaren still in the service of the Railway Company ?

(d) What was his pay at the beginning of the year ?

† Not put at the meeting, but the question and answer thereto will be found at pages 4656—57 of these proceedings.

‡ Vide pages 4655—56 of these proceedings.

3. Have the railway authorities revised their order dismissing Mewaram ? Do the Railway Company think of recompensing him for the assault and dismissal to which he had been subjected ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : 1. Government have received no report of the case mentioned in the Honourable Member's question.

2. and 3. Government have no information, but enquiries will be made.

ASSAULTS BY EUROPEANS ON INDIAN WORKMEN IN THE BENGAL NAGPUR RAILWAY WORKSHOPS AT KHARAGPUR.

1167. Mr. M. K. Acharya : (a) Is it a fact that there had been several cases of assault similar to the one referred to in the preceding question on Indian workmen in the Kharagpur Workshops ?

(b) Were the following among several cases, brought to the notice of the Agent :

(i) Mr. W. N. Smith's assault on Madan Mohan Das :

(ii) Mr. A. L. Rhind's assault on Narayana Rao :

(iii) Mr. Harting's assault on Nayadhar : and (iv) Mr. Round's assault on Sukhlal ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Government have no information, but enquiries will be made.

CASE OF MR. A. HOLGUETTE, A COMMERCIAL INSPECTOR OF THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

1168. Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : (a) Has the attention of the Government been drawn to the case of Mr. A. Holguette, a Commercial Inspector of the East Indian Railway, who was forced to resign his appointment, because of a false charge brought against him, and who, after months of correspondence was reinstated by the Agent, with a complete acquittance on all the charges and was given a compensation of Rs. 10,000 ?

(b) Is it a fact that the Agent held that Mr. Holguette had not had a fair trial and that he had been punished without regard to the evidence and that there had been a gross miscarriage of justice, due entirely to incapacity or carelessness, or both on the part of the Divisional Superintendent, Mr. Rutherford ?

(c) Is it also a fact that the report against Mr. Holguette was submitted by two officers, Messrs. Kirk and Ghose ?

(d) Is it a fact that Mr. Rutherford in recognition of the fact that Mr. Holguette's activities stopped fraud at Howrah and gained for him the ill will of interested parties, granted Mr. Holguette a special bonus, and secured for him an extension of service, giving him a first class recommendation as a thoroughly qualified and reliable official ?

(e) Is it not a fact that the report against Mr. Holguette was such that the Agent immediately ordered Mr. Holguette's reinstatement as soon as he saw it ?

(f) Is it not a fact that Mr. Rutherford specially commended Messrs. Kirk and Ghose on their report ?

CASE OF MR. A. HOLGUETTE, A COMMERCIAL INSPECTOR OF THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

1169. Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : (a) Is it a fact that the party who brought the charge of bribery against Mr. Holguette, a Commercial Inspector of the East Indian Railway, has since confessed that the whole business was a put up job ?

(b) Is it a fact that the case was brought to the notice of the Railway Board who agreed with the Agent's action and directed that all responsible in the case should be dealt with from a disciplinary point of view ?

(c) Is it a fact that Mr. Holguette was not given a charge sheet showing what charges were against him and was not allowed to be present at the enquiry, so that he could cross-examine witnesses ?

SELECTION OF MR. RUTHERFORD FOR THE APPOINTMENT OF DIVISIONAL SUPERINTENDENT, HOWRAH, EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

1170. Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : Is it a fact that Mr. Rutherford was an officer junior to many others and was selected over the heads of other senior officers for the appointment of Divisional Superintendent ? Is it a fact that three of the four officers selected for these appointments were members of the same family ?

DISCIPLINARY ACTION TAKEN AGAINST CERTAIN OFFICIALS OF THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY IN CONNECTION WITH THE CASE OF MR. A. HOLGUETTE, A COMMERCIAL INSPECTOR.

1171. Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : (a) Is it a fact that the case against Mr. Holguette cost the Government a large sum of money approximating to Rs. 15,000 ?

(b) What action has been taken against Messrs. Kirk and Ghose for their incorrect finding against Mr. Holguette ? Is it a fact that these officers are now officiating in the senior grade ? Do Government propose to punish them ?

(c) What action has been taken against Mr. Rutherford ? Do Government propose to remove him or take any action against him ?

(d) Is it a fact that while Messrs. Rutherford and Robertson were persistent in forcing Mr. Holguette out of the service, they had before them the opinion of the Railway's lawyer, that the finding against Mr. Holguette was wrong in facts and unjust and untenable ?

DISCIPLINARY ACTION TAKEN AGAINST CERTAIN OFFICIALS OF THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY IN CONNECTION WITH THE CASE OF MR. A. HOLGUETTE, A COMMERCIAL INSPECTOR.

1172. *Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : (a) Will Government please state whether the Agent has taken any disciplinary measures against all those officers and men who were responsible for the miscarriage of justice referred to in the preceding questions, as ordered by the Railway Board ? If not, are Government prepared to institute an inquiry and insist on the punishment of all responsible for this treatment of a subordinate ?

(b) Will Government please state whether they are prepared to institute a committee of inquiry into all discharges and dismissals that are traceable to and for which Mr. Rutherford, Divisional Superintendent, Howrah, has been responsible since he was placed in his present important appointment ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : With your permission, Sir, I propose to reply to questions Nos. 1168 to 1172 together.

Government have received no report from the Agent on the matter mentioned in the Honourable Member's questions and do not propose to make any enquiries from him ; they can trust the Agent of the East Indian Railway to have taken such action as may be required.

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : Will the Honourable Member kindly inform me whether the Railway Board is in receipt of a report on this matter or has any words of it ; whether the entire file has been sent to the Railway Board and whether the Railway Board issued an order to the Agent of the East Indian Railway to punish those responsible or not ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I have already answered all these questions in the answer I gave to the main question. Government have received no report from the Agent on the matter and do not propose either to make enquiries or to issue any order on the subject.

EMPLOYMENT OF SOLDIER CLERKS IN THE ARMY HEADQUARTERS.

1173. *Mr. A. H. Ghuznavi : (a) With reference to the reply to starred question No. 1111, on the 22nd March, 1927, relative to the employment of 25 per cent. soldier clerks in the branches of Army Headquarters, will Government please give a definition of the term " military character " ?

(b) Is it a fact that the 75 per cent. civilian clerks employed in the branches of Army Headquarters also do the same nature of work as is done by a soldier clerk ?

(c) If so, wherein lies the difference in the nature of work performed by a civilian clerk and that of a soldier clerk ?

(d) Is it a fact that the work in the Equipment and Ordnance Directorate of the Q. M. G.'s Branch and that of the Artillery Directorate of the M. G. S. Branch is of the highest technical nature of all other work in the different branches of Army Headquarters ?

(e) Is it a fact that the civilian clerks employed in these directorates have been very highly spoken of by the different Directors from time to time ?

(f) If the answers to (d) and (e) above, are in the affirmative, wherein lies the justification to exempt soldier clerks from passing the prescribed test of the Staff Selection Board ?

(g) Is it a fact that soldier clerks in most cases do not even possess the minimum educational qualifications ?

(h) Are Government aware that there is a widespread discontent amongst the civilian clerks of the Army Headquarters that while they are required to qualify for the appointments in different divisions, soldier clerks are exempted from the necessary examination ?

(i) Is it a fact that on this account, civilian clerks apply very often for transfer and better appointments elsewhere ?

(j) Is it also a fact that soldier clerks are recruited above first division clerks already in the office ?

(k) If so, why ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) It is difficult to suggest a more comprehensive definition of work of a military character than is contained in those words. The phrase however includes work that requires military knowledge and an acquaintance with matters concerning the discipline, environment and conditions generally attaching to a soldier's life, as well as work which requires special knowledge gained, as a rule, in particular military services or departments.

(b) The answer is, broadly speaking, in the negative. Soldier clerks are more suitable for certain kinds of work than civilian clerks.

(c) Does not arise.

(d) No, Sir. No technical qualifications are required of clerks in these branches.

(e) Yes, Sir, but no more than in other branches of Army Headquarters.

(f) These soldier clerks must possess the First Class Army School Certificate, which Government have accepted as a sufficient qualification for such clerks.

(g) and (h). The answer is in the negative.

(i) I have no information to this effect, but civilian clerks in Army Headquarters may be trusted, like anyone else, to apply to better themselves if they see a chance.

(j) No, Sir, these soldier clerks are recruited on the same principle as civilian clerks and take their place, on entry, at the bottom of the officiating roll. After entry, promotion is governed by selection according to merit and suitability.

(k) Does not arise.

†1174*—1175*.

† Not put at the meeting, but the questions and answers thereto will be found at pages 4657—58 of these proceedings.

STARTING OF AN URBAN UNIT OF THE INDIAN TERRITORIAL FORCE IN CALCUTTA.

1176. *Mr. K. C. Neogy : (a) With reference to the Government Resolution on the Indian Territorial Forces Committee Report, will Government be pleased to state whether it is intended to start an Urban Unit in Calcutta ?

(b) Have Government received any representation from the Indian Association of Calcutta on the subject ?

Mr. G. M. Young : (a) The answer is in the negative, at present.

(b) The answer is in the affirmative.

REMISSION OF CUSTOMS DUTY ON SCIENTIFIC INSTRUMENTS AND CHEMICALS IMPORTED FOR THE USE OF EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS.

1177. *Mr. K. C. Neogy : (a) Have Government received any representation suggesting remission of customs duty on scientific instruments and chemicals imported for the use of educational institutions ?

(b) Are Government in a position to state approximately the amount of revenue involved in granting such a remission ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : (a) Yes.

(b) No.

ROUTE OF THE IMPERIAL AIRWAYS TO CONNECT INDIA WITH GREAT BRITAIN.

1178. *Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Is it a fact that the Government state the latest development, if any, in the plan of Imperial Airways to connect India with Great Britain, through Egypt and Iraq ?

(b) Is it a fact that there is a proposal of a line through Constantinople, which, if agreed upon, would shorten the journey by about 48 hours ?

(c) Has the Persian Government given consent to take the air route through Persian territory ? If not, what alternative route is in view ; and what progress has been made in the matter ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) and (c). Certain difficulties have arisen over the route originally selected, and the Company is investigating the possibility of an alternative route along the southern littoral of the Persian Gulf.

(b) I have no information.

CERTAIN LETTERS IN THE "VETERINARY RECORD" BY PROFESSOR GAIGER AND COLONEL A. K. WALKER.

1179. *Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to a letter in "Veterinary Record", dated 30th July, 1927, by Professor Gaiger as also to another letter in the same paper by Colonel A. K. Walker, I.V.S. (Retired), dated August 6th, 1927 ? If so, are the facts as stated in Colonel Walker's letter true ?

(b) If they are true, will Government be pleased to state what action it proposes to take to remedy this condition ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : (a) The Government of India have seen the letters. The only statement in Colonel Walker's letter the strict accuracy of which is admitted by the Government of India is the one referring to the abolition of the post of Inspector General, Civil Veterinary Department.

(b) Does not arise except in the case of the post of Inspector General. The Government of India are not prepared to consider the question of reviving the post, especially now that the subject is provincial transferred, unless the Royal Commission on Agriculture recommend it and adduce strong reasons in support of their recommendation.

REFUSAL OF PASSPORTS TO EMPLOYEES OF INDIAN FIRMS IN HONG KONG.

1180. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Will Government be pleased to state if they have refused passports to certain bona fide employees of Indian firms in Hong Kong, and to the families of Indian residents there ? If so, why ; and in how many cases have passports been refused this year ?

(b) Are Government aware that the merchants' agreements with many of their assistants in Hong Kong, have either expired, or are about to expire, and as the assistants cannot be detained there against their will, and others from India are not allowed to take their place by the refusal of passports, the Indian trading community in Hong Kong is subjected to great hardships ?

(c) Have Government received any representation on this subject either from the Hindu Merchants' Association of Hong Kong, or from any other quarter ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) No such case is traceable. If, however, the Honourable Member has any particular case in mind and will give me the facts, I will have enquiries made.

(b) and (c). No.

EMPLOYMENT OF UNPASSED MEN IN THE OFFICE OF THE PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION.

1181. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) Is it a fact that according to rule only passed candidates are eligible for employment in the Government of India Secretariat, attached and subordinate offices ?

(b) Is it a fact that the Public Service Commission have themselves broken the rules by employing two unpassed candidates in permanent posts ?

(c) Is it a fact that one of them never qualified himself for any division, is not educationally qualified to appear for any division, was only a second division clerk in the Finance Department and has been taken as an upper division assistant in the office of the Public Service Commission ?

(d) Is it a fact that the Public Service Commission have on their list many passed upper division assistants and stenographers awaiting employment and that the employment of the two unpassed candidates have prejudiced their preferential claim ?

(e) Will Government please explain why these two unpassed candidates were employed and whether they propose to revert them to make room for passed candidates whose names are already on the Public Service Commission list and who have not been employed in permanent posts ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) Yes, except in very special cases of appointments requiring technical or special qualifications.

(b) Both the appointments in question fall within the exception referred to.

(c) It is true that the clerk in question was only a second division clerk in the Finance Department, but he had 18 years' permanent service before he was appointed to the office of the Public Service Commission. Having been made permanent before the late Staff Selection Board came into existence, he was not required to qualify by examination for the second division, and as he was selected for the post of cashier it was not necessary for him to qualify for the upper division.

(d) The Public Service Commission have on their lists upper division assistants and stenographers awaiting employment but, in the circumstances explained, these assistants and stenographers have no preferential claim to the appointments in question.

(e) The circumstances have already been explained. Government do not propose to take the action suggested by the Honourable Member.

TOTAL EXPENDITURE INCURRED IN CONNECTION WITH THE GOLD STANDARD AND RESERVE BANK OF INDIA BILL.

1182. Mr. Ram Narayan Singh : (a) Is it not a fact that the Government of India only in compliance with the orders from the Secretary of State for India withdrew the Gold Standard and Reserve Bank of India Bill from the consideration of the Indian Legislative Assembly ?

(b) If the answer to the above be in the affirmative, will the Government be pleased to lay on the table all the correspondence between the Government of India and the Secretary of State for India since the very conception of the idea of the Gold Standard and Reserve Bank for this country ?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to state an approximate amount of total expenditure (all payments made to the officials, President, Members of the Assembly and the staff by way of salaries and allowances of every kind calculated in proportion to the number of days and hours devoted to the work in connection with the Bill either in the Assembly or outside it, in India and elsewhere, price of articles used, postage, etc., etc.), incurred by the Government in connection with the Bill ?

The Honourable Sir Basil Blackett : Parts (a) and (b). I would refer the Honourable Member to my statement in the House on the 8th instant and to my speech on the adjournment motion on the 13th instant. The Government of India are not prepared to lay on the table the correspondence with the Secretary of State.

Part (c). The total expenditure incurred on account of travelling and daily allowances to Members of the Joint Committee at Bombay and Calcutta and of the office staff on account of travelling allowance, etc. (excluding pay) amounts approximately to Rs. 26,000. No additional expenditure was incurred on establishment, the work in connection with the Bill having been performed by the ordinary staff. The details for postage, etc., are not available.

Mr. Ram Narayan Singh : Sir, I do not want to put questions Nos. 1183 and 1184.

CONSTRUCTION OF THE NEW RAILWAY LINE FROM BARKAKHANA TO RANCHI.

1185. Mr. Ram Narayan Singh : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state the progress hitherto made with regard to the construction of the new railway line from Barkakhana to Ranchi (Central India Coalfields Railway) ?

(b) What is the probable date of its completion ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) and (b). A survey of the line has just been made, and the report is expected to be ready this month. Government will decide whether the line should be built after examination of the survey report.

NUMBER OF STUDENTS IN THE MINING COLLEGE AT DHANBAD.

1186. Mr. Ram Narayan Singh : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state the present number of students in the Mining College at Dhanbad ?

(b) How many of them are Biharis ?

(c) How many of them are natives or old residents of the Chota Nagpur Division ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : (a) Forty-five.

(b) One student is a resident of Bihar, but not a Bihari by birth.

(c) None.

ADMINISTRATION OF THE INDIAN ARMS ACT IN BIHAR AND ORISSA

1187. Mr. Ram Narayan Singh : 1. Are the Government aware of the facts (a) that the policy pursued by the Government of Bihar and Orissa in the matter of granting agricultural or other licences for guns for protection of life and property from wild animals is hopelessly unsatisfactory and too narrow and (b) that as a result of this harmful policy, there is every year a great loss of human lives and property (including valuable cattle) in the whole of the Province in general and in the Division of Chota Nagpur in particular ?

2. Do the Government propose to draw the attention of the Local Government of Bihar and Orissa to these facts and to ask them kindly to be more liberal in their policy mentioned above with special reference to the condition of the Chota Nagpur Division which is full of deep forests with wild animals ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (1) The Government of India have no reason to suppose that the facts are as suggested.

(2) The Government of India do not consider that there are grounds for the action suggested.

Mr. Ram Narayan Singh : Will the Government of India make enquiry as to the allegations I have brought to notice ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I am afraid I cannot add anything to the reply already given.

DEPUTY DIRECTOR GENERAL OF ARCHÆOLOGY, EXPLORATION BRANCH.

1188. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : (a) Will the Government kindly state the drawings and photographs prepared and published by the officer appointed as Deputy Director of Archæological Exploration in any publication of the Department or refer to them ?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state what original research work apart from epigraphical notes has been contributed by this officer to the departmental literature during the last six years ?

(c) Will the Government kindly state the number of unexplored and unknown ancient ruins brought to light by this officer before he was considered fit to hold his present post ?

(d) Will the Government be pleased to state if it is a fact that an officer of vast experience in Near Eastern Archæology has been brought out from England and placed under an officer of less experience in the Exploration Branch of the Archæological Survey ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : (a) Drawings and photographs in the Archæological Department are prepared by draftsmen and photographers respectively. In the publications of the Department, therefore, there are no drawings or photographs prepared by the officer in question.

(b) During the last six years this officer has contributed to departmental reports articles on the subjects mentioned in the statement placed in the Library.

(c) During the last 23 years this officer has either assisted in or personally supervised excavations on the sites mentioned in the statement placed in the Library.

(d) No.

INDUS VALLEY PRE-HISTORIC SCRIPT.

1189. Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Will the Government be pleased to state :

(a) Since when the peculiar Indus Valley pre-historic script has been before the Indologists of the Archæological Department, and (b) How far has their knowledge of oriental languages helped them to decipher this writing ?

Mr. A. R. Dalal : (a) Specimens of the peculiar pre-historic script of the Indus Valley have been before Indologists for the last 55 years.

(b) Their knowledge of oriental languages has not helped them to decipher the writing.

STAY OF MISS MAYO, AUTHOR OF " MOTHER INDIA" AS A GUEST OF A SUPERINTENDENT OF THE C. I. D. AT LAHORE.

1190. Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : (a) Is it a fact that Miss Mayo, the author of " Mother India ", was the guest of a Superintendent of the C. I. D. at Lahore, during her visit to this country, and that an Inspector of the C. I. D. was deputed to help her in making enquiries and acquaintances ?

(b) Is it a fact that an official of the Intelligence Department, Government of India, arranged for her stay in Lahore, with the Superintendent of the C. I. D, or helped her in any other way ?

(c) Do Government propose to institute an enquiry, and place the facts before the House ? If not, why not ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) No.

(b) No.

(c) I have placed the facts before the House and no enquiry is necessary.

MISS MAYO'S BOOK " MOTHER INDIA ".

1191. Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : (a) Has the following telegram from Bombay published in the Leader of the 7th instant come to the notice of Government :

" A special message to the ' Hindustan ', a local Gujerat daily, says that many of the British Members of Parliament have been provided with free copies of Miss Katherine Mayo's book ' Mother India '."

(b) If the information contained in the message is correct, will Government state whether free copies of " Mother India " have been distributed by or at the instance of the British Government ? If so, have the British Government made themselves responsible for the statements made in the book ?

(c) Are Government aware that " Mother India " is regarded by Indians as a malicious and filthy libel on the people of this country ?

(d) Have Government informed the British Government that a free distribution of this book by them would create deep and universal resentment and indignation in this country ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) and (b). I invite attention to the answer I gave to Mr. M. S. Aney's question on the subject on the 19th September 1927. The British Government have neither caused the book to be distributed nor made themselves responsible for any statement contained in the book.

(c) Government have seen articles on the subject in the Public Press.

(d) The fact is obvious and it is unnecessary to bring it to the British Government's notice.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Is the Honourable Member aware that this publication has accentuated racial feeling in India to a very great extent ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : That, Sir, is a matter of opinion.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : May I ask the Honourable Member, Sir, whether the British Government have borne any portion of the cost involved in the distribution of the book ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Not a penny, Sir.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : May I know, Sir, if the Publicity Bureau of the Government of India have received any complimentary copies of the book ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : No, Sir ; they have not.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : Will Government kindly inquire as to who it is that has distributed these copies to the Members of Parliament in London ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : That, Sir, is not the concern of the Government of India.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Are Government prepared to contradict the distorted statements contained in the book in view of the racial feeling that has been accentuated by it in India ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I think that matter could better be dealt with by a non-official agency.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Do not Government think it worth their while to correct the misstatements and exaggerations contained in that book in view of the fact that it has been circulated in other countries and is being used as a sort of propaganda against this country ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : As I have already replied, Sir, that is a matter which can be much more effectively dealt with by a non-official agency and by those who have the most direct knowledge of the matters dealt with in the book.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Does the Honourable Member admit that this book contains untruths and exaggerations ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : That, Sir, is asking for an expression of opinion.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Is not the good name of the people of India a matter of concern for the Government ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Certainly the matter is one in which the Government of India naturally take interest.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : Do not the Government of India maintain a propagandist in countries like America who could be asked to correct the misstatements contained in Miss Mayo's book ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : We have no propagandist agencies in America.

Mr. Varahagiri Venkata Jogiah : May I know, Sir, if the Government of India propose to proscribe the book ?

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : May I know, Sir, whether the Government of India do expend some money out of the revenues of India on propaganda work in America ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : No, Sir

Mr. K. Ahmed : Are Government aware that the Manchester Guardian has made the observation and has given the advice to the people of India that it is better for them to counteract the effects of the book and that it is good for the English people to forget them ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I remember seeing something in the Manchester Guardian somewhat vaguely and remotely resembling what the Honourable Member has said.

Dr. A. Suhrawardy : Will the Honourable Member kindly inquire as to how many Members of this House have read Miss Mayo's book, " Mother India " ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I suggest that that question should be addressed to other Members of this House and not to myself.

Dr. A. Suhrawardy : Is the Honourable Member aware that Miss Mayo's book contains extracts from the debates of this House ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Yes, Sir.

Dr. A. Suhrawardy : Will the Honourable Member kindly inquire whether Mr Coatman was responsible for supplying the appalling statements and figures to the Honourable Member who moved the Bill regarding Hindu child marriages ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I do not think, Sir, that question arises.

Mr. Ram Narayan Singh : Are Government prepared to proscribe the book ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Quite apart from any legal considerations that might arise, I think that it would be very ill advised from the Honourable Member's own point of view to proscribe the book.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Are Government taking any legal opinion in the matter ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : No, Sir.

Mr. M. Ruthnaswamy : Are the Honourable Members opposite in favour of proscribing the book ?

Mr. Ram Narayan Singh : Are Government prepared to take legal opinion in the matter as to whether the book is fit to be proscribed or not ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The legal position is so clear that it is unnecessary to do so.

Report relating to Educational Facilities for the Children of Railway Employees.

1192 Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Will Government lay the report of the special officer appointed to enquire into the educational facilities available to children of railway employees on the table ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : They will consider the question.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : The question is : Will Government lay the report on the table ? There is nothing to be considered.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : May I know, Sir, whether the ten days' notice of this question was not enough to enable Government to consider this question ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : Certainly not, Sir. While the Assembly is sitting, the Members of the Railway Board have not found time to read the report themselves.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Are Government aware that in answer to a question of mine in March last regarding the expenditure on railway schools, Sir Charles Innes said that the matter was being inquired into by a special officer ? How are Honourable Members to get that information unless the report is laid on the table ?

ESTABLISHMENT OF A LOCAL ADVISORY COMMITTEE FOR THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY AT JHANSI.

1193. Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : (a) Has the Great Indian Peninsula Railway any Advisory Committee in the United Provinces ?

(b) If not, are Government prepared to take steps to have an Advisory Committee established at Jhansi ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) No.

(b) The subject is under consideration.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Is the matter being discussed with the new Agent of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I mentioned the matter to Mr. Russell when I was down in Bombay recently and asked him to look into it ; and I understand that he is looking into it. Jhansi, however, is not, I believe, a particularly important station from the railway point of view and I am not sure if they will establish an Advisory Committee there.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Is it not a fact that it is the most important station on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway in the province from which I come and that it has got a railway workshop ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am not sure if it is the most important station.

ISSUE OF OCCASION CHEQUE PASSES TO EUROPEAN AND ANGLO-INDIAN EMPLOYEES OF THE NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

1194. Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : (a) Is it a fact that on the North-Western Railway " occasion cheque passes for short distances may be issued under the rules to European and Anglo-Indian employees and to their families living at road-side stations, to enable them to attend places of worship, entertainments, institutes, railway or Auxiliary Force sports " ?

(b) Are the same facilities afforded to Indian employees ? If not, what steps do Government propose to take to put a stop to the racial and religious discrimination involved in this rule ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) and (b). I am enquiring and will let the Honourable Member know the result.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : What is it that the Honourable Member is inquiring into—the accuracy of the statement or the prevalence of the practice referred to in the question ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am inquiring in order to obtain information to answer the Honourable Member's question which I do not at present possess.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : There are two parts of the question, (a) and (b). Which part is the Honourable Member inquiring into ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am inquiring about both the parts of the question, as both ask for information.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : May I take it that Government are not sure whether the statement contained in part (a) of my question is correct ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am sure the Honourable Member would be the last to make a statement in a question : if he had done so, you, Sir, might have disallowed it.

Mr. M. S Aney : Why is it that the Government were not able to make the necessary inquiries in the ten days they had at their disposal ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The inquiries which have been made have not so far produced the necessary information. Therefore I was obliged to give a reply in the terms in which I have given it As soon as I obtain the information, I will furnish it to the Honourable Member and if other Members are interested in it, I will lay it on the table.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Is it a fact, when Government generally find it rather inconvenient to answer a question, that they complain of shortness of time or that they say they want to make more enquiries ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I should not be prepared to admit that the Government ever finds it inconvenient to answer questions. In this particular case, I was not able to get the information in time.

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : Did Government find it inconvenient to answer my question because they thought it was extremely undesirable to do so ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : They thought it undesirable to do so in view of the terms in which that question was framed.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : May I ask the Honourable Member whether the rule referred to in question No. 1194 is not contained in the pamphlet entitled " Rules for the issue of free passes and privilege ticket orders, North-Western Railway "?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The Honourable Member's information, I am afraid, is in greater detail than mine.

ISSUE OF CHEQUE PASSES ON THE NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY TO CHRISTIAN MINISTERS OF RELIGION.

1195. Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : (a) Are Government aware that on the North Western Railway " cheque passes may occasionally be issued by Divisional Superintendents to ministers of religion to minister to the spiritual wants of railway employees at places where the services of clergymen are not ordinarily available " ?

(b) Are similar facilities given for the satisfaction of the spiritual wants of Hindus and Muhammadans ? If not, what is the ground for the preference shown to Christians ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Yes.

(b) I am enquiring and will let the Honourable Member know the result.

CLASSIFICATION OF ANGLO-INDIAN AND INDIAN EMPLOYEES OF THE EAST INDIAN RAILWAY.

1196. Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Is it a fact that the non-European employees are divided into two classes, A and B, by the East Indian Railway and that while Anglo-Indians are assigned to class A Indians are assigned to class B ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : The answer is in the negative.

INDIAN REPRESENTATION ON THE EAST AFRICAN ROYAL COMMISSION.

1197. Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : (a) Have Government seen newspaper reports to the effect that Sir Hilton Young will preside over the East African Royal Commission and that Sir George Schuster and Mr. J. H. Oldham will be its members ? Are they now in a position to state who will represent India on the Commission ?

(b) Are they aware that H. H. the Aga Khan has strongly urged that the Government of India should press for the nomination of two Indian members to the Commission ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : (a) Government have seen press reports to the said effect, but have received no authoritative information yet regarding the personnel of the Commission.

(b) Government have seen reports in the Press to that effect.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Are Government able to say who will represent India on the Commission ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : No, Sir.

Mr. B. Das : Have the Government recommended any Indian ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I answered a question on this subject which was asked the other day by Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas. My answer was that the Secretary of State for India had been asked to nominate a representative, not the Government of India.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Are Government in a position to assure the House that the representatives of India will at least be Indians ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : It is not possible for the Government of India to give any assurance on that subject, seeing that the nomination rests not with the Government of India, but with the Secretary of State for India.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Are they themselves still pressing the matter on the attention of the Secretary of State ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : That is so, Sir.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Do Government propose to recommend the name of an Indian to the Secretary of State ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : If my Honourable friend were more audible and less inarticulate, I would attempt to answer his question. (Laughter.)

Mr. K. Ahmed : Do Government propose to take steps to recommend the names of two or three Indians to the Secretary of State for India to serve on the Commission ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : I think, Sir, the Honourable Member is merely repeating the views which were expressed by this House on the 18th August. The Government of India are in full possession of the views of this House, and they have taken such action as it was in their power to take.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Can Government give any undertaking that they will fulfill their promise of nominating an Indian to the Commission ?

Mr. G. S. Bajpai : The Government merely promised to forward the proceedings of this House to the Secretary of State for India. That promise has been carried out.

Mr. K. Ahmed : I am asking that the Government of India should make a recommendation and should not be merely content with sending the proceedings. Isn't it an evasive reply ?

Stoppage of Recruitment to the Local Traffic Service of State Railways.

1198. Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : (a) Has recruitment to the Local Traffic Service been stopped or not ?

(b) Is it a fact that the Agents of State Railways have recommended the abolition of the service ?

(c) Were the Local Traffic Service men classed as Indians holding superior appointments when the Lee Commission enquired into the position of Indians in the higher services ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : (a) Recruitment to the Local Traffic Service from outside has been held in abeyance.

(b) Government have received no recommendations from the Agents of State-worked Railways to this effect.

(c) They were shown in the sanctioned cadre and actuals of the Superior Traffic establishment as India-recruited, the fact that they belonged to the Local Traffic Service being explained.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : If they were shown as belonging to the superior establishment, when will Government take steps to promote such men as are in the Local Traffic Service to the superior grade ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : I am afraid I am unable to answer that question I gave information in reply to another question a few days ago as to the position of the Local Traffic Service, pointing out that there were considerable difficulties in amalgamating it with the superior service which we hoped to overcome but did not expect to overcome very quickly.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Am I to understand that the Government accept the principle that it will sooner or later promote these men to the higher grade in which they were supposed to be included when the Lee Commission came here ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : No, Sir. I do not think I can go as far as that.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : How is it then that they were included in the superior grade when the Lee Commission came here ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : They were recruited to the Local Traffic Service and in a particular statement which was laid before the Lee Commission, they had to be shown either as superior or inferior. They were shown in that statement actually as superior but it was clearly explained therein that they were local traffic service men. There is no question of the Lee Commission having been mislead on that point.

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : Will the Honourable Member kindly state whether the Government of India are addressing the Secretary of State as to the retention or otherwise of these Local Service men ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : As far as I remember, I do not think the Railway Board have addressed the Secretary of State for India on the subject. They have not yet formulated their own proposals, nor am I certain that this is a matter which would require to go to the Secretary of State.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : May I take it, Sir, that in the meanwhile no new recruits are being appointed to the Local Service ?

Mr. A. A. L. Parsons : That is in the reply which I gave. As far as I know we are not now taking anybody into the Local Service, but I am not quite sure whether we did not take some men a short time ago. Certainly our intention is not to take any more men into it.

STATUS AND PROSPECTS OF MEMBERS OF THE BAR APPOINTED TO INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE POSTS.

1199. Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : (a) Are members of the Bar who are appointed to superior judicial posts classed as belonging to the Indian Civil Service or not ?

(b) What is their position with regard to appointment to higher posts ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) Members of the Bar appointed direct to listed posts on the Indian Civil Service cadre do not become members of the Indian Civil Service. They enjoy, however, the status of members of an all-India Service.

(b) They are eligible on their merits for all judicial appointments borne on the cadre of the Indian Civil Service except the High Court Judgeships reserved for members of that service under section 101 (4) of the Government of India Act. They are, however, eligible, if duly qualified, for all High Court Judgeships not so reserved.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Are Government aware that in some of the highest appellate courts some posts are reserved, either by rule or by convention, for members of the Provincial Civil Service ? Are the members promoted from the Bar eligible for any of these posts or will they have to take their chance in connection with the posts which are not reserved for members of the Indian Civil or Provincial Services.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I must ask for notice of that question.

FUNCTIONS AND DUTIES OF THE OFFICERS OF THE BUREAU OF PUBLIC INFORMATION.

1200. Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : (a) Will Government be pleased to state the functions and duties of the officers of the Bureau of Public Information ?

(b) Is it one of their duties to furnish information to private individuals ? If so, can their assistance be asked for in the collection of material on any subject ?

(c) Does the supply of such information constitute a principal part of their work ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) The Honourable Member is referred to the reply given to question No. 305 by Mr. O'Donnell on the 1st March 1921.

(b) and (c). This has not been prescribed as one of their duties, but, as I think the Honourable Member is aware, they do everything in their power to furnish information to private individuals on any subject that can reasonably be regarded as coming within the scope of the Bureau.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Is it a part of the duty of this Department to furnish information to American tourists ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The Department is prepared to give information so far as matters on public record are concerned to all persons who desire to study the conditions of the country. I may add they are equally prepared to obtain similar facilities for Indian travellers who desire to visit European countries.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Will the Government kindly state whether this Department institutes any enquiry as to what use the materials placed at the disposal of the travellers would be put to ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The matter supplied is all contained in public documents. Under no circumstances, is any access given to confidential documents.

Mr. K. Ahmed : Is it a fact that one of the functions of this Department is to spend money on secret service ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : No, Sir.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : May I ask for an answer to part (c) of my question ? What proportion of their work consists in the supply of information either to Indians or Europeans ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I am afraid I should have to make a more extensive examination of the records of the Department than I have been able hitherto to do to give any arithmetical reply to that question.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Will the Honourable Member give an approximate answer ?

Lieut.-Colonel H. A. J. Gidney : Is it not a fact that it is the duty of this Department to supply information to the public ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : On matters coming within the scope of their functions.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Is it a part of the duty of the officers of this Department to canvass for votes in this House ?

Mr. K. Ahmed : Are the Government aware that there is a strong feeling among the elected Members of this Assembly that they are not allowed to criticise the functions or actions of the officers of the Bureau of Public Information ? It has been referred to by successive Home Members from Sir Malcolm Hailey onwards that this Department has to do some secret service which is beyond the sphere of the Members of this Assembly to enter into. (Laughter.)

FUNCTIONS OF THE BUREAU OF PUBLIC INFORMATION IN CONNECTION WITH THE VIEWS AND POLICIES OF GOVERNMENT.

1201. Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : (a) Is the Bureau intended to explain and popularize the views and policies of Government when they are in conflict with Indian views and policies.

(b) Are its officers freer from Government control than other Government servants because they are the agents of Government for official propaganda ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) I would refer the Honourable Member to the answer I have given to part (a) of his question No. 1200.

(b) The officers of the Bureau, like all Government servants, are governed by the Government Servants' Conduct Rules.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : May I know if they are allowed to write to newspapers in this country ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Yes, Sir, in so far as subjects which are within their function are concerned.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Is this Department in any way analogous to the C. I. D. ?

Mr. M. R. Jayakar : Are they propagandists of Government views ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : No, Sir.

Mr. M. S. Aney : Will Government once for all place on the table a statement showing the proper functions of this Department for the information of all ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : That, Sir, is contained in my reply to question No. 1200.

Mr. K. C. Roy : Is it a fact that the functions of this Department were defined by the Committee over which Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru presided ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : There was an Advisory Committee appointed and there is still an Advisory Committee in existence.

Mr. K. C. Roy : Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table the report of the Sapru Committee so that Members may know exactly what the functions of this Department are ?

Mr. M. Ruthnaswamy : Are any other Government servants allowed to contribute to newspapers ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Subject to the Government Servants' Conduct Rules, they are.

Mr. A. Rangaswami Iyengar : Sir, may I know how many meetings of this Advisory Committee have so far been held and what have been its proceedings ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I must ask for notice of that.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : Will the report of that Committee be laid on the table ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I will consider that.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : May I know whether the information communicated to the Press by these officers is published over their own signatures or as editorial paragraphs and leaders ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Newspapers rarely publish articles over the writers' signatures.

Mr. Gaya Prasad Singh : We should like to hear Mr. Coatman !

Mr. M. Ruthnaswamy : Will the Honourable Member give us some idea of the restrictions imposed on Government servants by the Government Servants' Conduct Rules in regard to their contributions to the Press ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I would invite the attention of the Honourable Member to the rules themselves.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : May I know if these officers write to newspapers in England and America ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Yes, Sir ; contributions are not limited to the Press in this country.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : May we know, Sir, on what occasions the Publicity Department during the last 12 months contributed articles to the foreign press ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I think, Sir, that is a notice question.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Are these contributions made solely in the interests of India ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Yes, Sir.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Do the officers concerned get any remuneration for their contributions ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I think that in the majority of cases, at any rate, the contributions are purely honorary.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Do they write under instructions from Government or on their own initiative ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Under general instructions, in particular cases, on their own initiative.

MESSING ARRANGEMENTS OF MEMBERS OF THE UNIVERSITY TRAINING CORPS OF THE UNITED PROVINCES WHILE IN CAMP.

1202. Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : (a) Is it a fact that members of the United Provinces University Training Corps have been informed that they will be supplied with uncooked rations in accordance with the scale fixed for Indian soldiers and given 2 as. 6 p. a day during the next annual camp ?

(b) Are Indian soldiers supplied with sugar and fuel free of cost as part of their rations and will the members of the University Training Corps have to pay for both these things out of their daily allowance of 2 as. 6 p. ?

(c) Will the various detachments also have to pay the cooks which they are required to bring with them out of the daily allowance referred to above ? If so, why ? Will the new arrangement cost Government more than the contract system under which the University Training Corps were fed till last year ?

(d) Is it a fact that the scale of rations fixed for the University Training Corps is lower than that fixed for British soldiers ? If so, how do Government justify this difference.

Mr. G. M. Young : Government have no information of the details mentioned by the Honourable Member. Arrangements for the messing of members of the University Training Corps while in camp are left entirely to the University authorities concerned, to whom Government make a lump sum grant for the purpose.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Do I understand that the sum contributed this year is the same as that which was contributed last year ?

Mr. G. M. Young : The sum is Rs. 3,500 for 15 days' training.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : May I know whether the sum this year is the same as last year ? I have not been able to hear the Honourable Member.

Mr. G. M. Young : I don't know, Sir. There is a fixed sum which is Rs. 3,500 for 15 days' training. I believe it was the same last year as it is this year.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : May I know in this connection, Sir, whether in accordance with the recommendations of the Auxiliary Force and Territorial Force Committee, the University Training Corps is to be regarded as a provincial or an urban unit ? The point of my question is that the Auxiliary and Territorial Forces Committee recommended that members of urban units should be paid extra messing charges at the rate of 5½ annas per day.

Mr. G. M. Young : I am not prepared to go into the general questions of urban and provincial units. As regards the present question, Government have no information of the details ; they make a lump sum grant to the Universities and the Universities use it according to their own discretion. No complaints have been received from any University so far that this grant is inadequate.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Whose duty will it be to carry out the recommendations of the Auxiliary and Territorial Forces Committee, if not that of the Central Government ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I do not see how that question arises.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Is it not the fact that while the Auxiliary Force and Territorial Force Committee, whose recommendations have been accepted, recommended that 5½ annas per day should be paid as an extra messing charge, the members of the Corps only receive 2½ annas per day now ?

(No answer was given.)

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : With regard to part (d), will Government enquire why the rations supplied to the members of the University Training Corps are on a lower scale than that applicable to Indian soldiers ?

Mr. G. M. Young : No, Sir ; Government do not propose to enquire into any of these details. As I have already informed my Honourable friend, the arrangements for the messing of the University Training Corps while in camp are left entirely to the University authorities concerned. Government make a lump sum grant. If the sum is insufficient, doubtless the Universities will make representations to that effect.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Is the Honourable Member aware that the arrangements are made not by the University authorities but by the Adjutant ?

Mr. G. M. Young : No, Sir ; I am not aware of that.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Will the Honourable Member be good enough to enquire into that ?

Mr. G. M. Young : No, Sir. The arrangements are left entirely to the Universities : the Adjutant has no instructions from Government to make the arrangements instead of the Universities.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : If the lump sum grant is not raised by Government, how is the University going to give 5½ annas per day as recommended by the Auxiliary Force and Territorial Force Committee ?

Issue of Rifles to the United Provinces University Training Corps.

1203. Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : When do Government propose to issue rifles to the United Provinces University Training Corps ?

Mr. G. M. Young : The Honourable Member is referred to part (b) of my answer to his starred question No. 514.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : May I know whether since that question was answered, Government have taken any steps to supply rifles to the University Training Corps ?

Mr. G. M. Young : Government were taking steps when my Honourable friend asked his question. They are still taking steps.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Have they taken any further steps, or are they still at the same stage ?

Mr. G. M. Young : They are proceeding with the same steps, Sir.

PROPORTION OF LEWIS GUNNERS IN UNIVERSITY TRAINING CORPS.

1204. Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Is it a fact that every Indian infantry battalion is supposed to consist of 75 per cent. riflemen and 25 per cent. Lewis gunners ? Does this rule apply to the Indian Territorial Force or the University Training Corps ? If not, why not ?

Mr. G. M. Young : The proportion mentioned in the first part of the question is approximately correct. The answer to the second part is in the negative. The University Training Corps are not supplied with Lewis guns because they are not liable for military service. The period of training for other units of the Indian Territorial Force is not long enough to permit of instruction in the use, mechanism and tactical handling of Lewis guns. The first essential is to train men fully in the use of the rifle.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : Did the Auxiliary Force and Territorial Force Committee recommend any difference between the training given to the University Training Corps and to the Indian Defence Force simply because they recommended that the University Training Corps should not be liable for general service ?

Mr. G. M. Young : I understand the Honourable Member to be asking me questions on the contents of the Report of the Auxiliary and Territorial Forces Committee of which he appears to have a copy in his hand. I have not.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : May I ask, since it concerns the Honourable Member's Department, whether there need be any difference between the training given to the University Training Corps and the training given to the Indian Defence Force simply because the University Training Corps is not to have any liability for general service ?

Mr. G. M. Young : That, Sir, is a question of opinion.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : May I ask whether it is not a question of fact, the matter being entirely in the power of the Government of India ?

Mr. G. M. Young : As I heard the Honourable Member's question, it was not a question of fact.

Pandit Hirday Nath Kunzru : May I know whether there is any warrant in the Auxiliary and Territorial Forces Committee's recommendations for making any distinction between the training given to the University Training Corps and the training given to the Indian Defence Force ?

OFFICIAL ASSISTANCE TO MISS MAYO IN COLLECTING MATERIALS FOR HER BOOK "MOTHER INDIA".

1163. *Mr. M. S. Aney : (a) Has the attention of the Government of India been drawn to Miss Mayo's book "Mother India" and the numerous statements regarding India and Indian people contained therein ?

(b) Is it a fact that Mr. Coatman, Head of the Publicity Department of the Government of India, was associated with Miss Mayo in collecting materials for her book ?

(c) Is there any truth in the rumour that Miss Mayo was in some way or other subsidised by the Scout Service Funds ?

(d) Is it a fact that Mr. Coatman saw the proofs of the book ?

(e) Will the Government find out and disclose the names of such officials as helped Miss Mayo in the collection of materials of that book or in writing it ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) Government have seen the book.

(b), (c) and (d). There is no truth whatever in these suggestions and I should like to repudiate them emphatically. I would also refer the Honourable Member to the Foreword to the book itself, in which the author expressly states that she submitted the manuscript of the book to no one connected with official life.

(e) Government have no reason to suppose that any official gave Miss Mayo any assistance beyond what is given to any member of the public.

ISSUE OF A CONTRADICTION TO THE NUMEROUS ALLEGATIONS CONTAINED IN MISS MAYO'S BOOKS "MOTHER INDIA" AND "ISLES OF FEAR".

1164. *Mr. M. S. Aney : (a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether they have issued any instructions to the Head of the Publicity Department to promptly issue any book or pamphlet to give an authoritative contradiction to any of the numerous allegations contained in the two books of Miss Catherine Mayo "Mother India" and "Isles of Fear" ?

(b) If not, will the Government be pleased to say whether they propose to do so hereafter ?

(c) If not, why ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : (a) and (b). Government have not given and do not propose to give such instructions.

(c) They do not consider that such instructions would serve any useful purpose.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Do Government attach any importance to the resentment that has been caused among the public by this book ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Government have naturally observed that with interest and concern.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Are Government in sympathy with the statements that have appeared in this book ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : That, Sir, is rather too general a question for me to reply to either affirmatively or negatively.

Mr. M. R. Jayakar : Does that book represent the opinions of Government on the culture and traditions of Indians ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : I have already explained that Government accept no responsibility for what has appeared in this book.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Is the Government attitude one of neutrality in this matter ?

(No answer.)

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Do Government possess any opinion on the statements contained in the book ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : The Honourable Member is asking for an opinion.

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Do Government possess any opinion at all ? That is not a question of opinion, but of fact.

Mr. B. Das : Are Government going to proscribe that book ?

Mr. K. Ahmed : In view of the fact that there is great commotion and disorder in the House and in the country, do Government propose.....

Mr. President : Order, order.

Mr. K. Ahmed : The question arises, Sir, and I am entitled to put supplementary questions. May I know under what rule or standing order the Chair rules me out of order ?

Mr. President : Order, order. Mr. Aney.

(b) Are the Government aware that Indian Muslims throughout the country have censured the Rajpal judgment in the strongest possible language ?

REBATES OFFERED BY HEAVY STEEL MANUFACTURERS OF THE UNITED KINGDOM ON JOISTS AND OTHER MATERIALS.

1174. Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : (a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to Reuter's telegram from London, dated 1st September 1927, stating that 28 firms of heavy steel manufacturers of the United Kingdom are offering a rebate from 2nd September of seven shillings six pence per ton on joists and five shillings per ton on other materials ?

(b) Have Government considered the effect of this step on the Indian steel industry ? And do Government propose to take any further steps to protect the industry ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : The Government of India have seen the telegram referred to, but a British official wireless message of the same date states that the rebate will be given only to home consumers. If this is correct, the rebate should have no effect on the Indian steel industry.

APPOINTMENT OF ASSISTANT ACCOUNTANT IN THE CALCUTTA PORT TRUST.

1175. Mr. Jamnadas M. Mehta : (a) Are Government aware of the strong feeling of resentment in commercial and other circles in Calcutta against the contemplated appointment of a European as the Assistant Accountant in the Calcutta Port Trust ?

(b) Have Government received any protests from public bodies in this behalf ?

(c) What steps do Government propose to take in order to prevent their policy of Indianisation being departed from by the Calcutta Port Trust ?

The Honourable Sir George Rainy : (a) and (b). The Port Commissioners, Calcutta, have invited applications from fully qualified Chartered Accountants, European or Indian, and not from Europeans only. Government have seen protests in the Indian Press against the qualification demanded, and have received representations on the subject from the Indian Chamber of Commerce, the Marwari Association, and the Bengal National Chamber of Commerce, Calcutta, and the Indian Merchants Chamber, Bombay.

(c) Under section 34 of the Calcutta Port Act, appointment to this post, which carries a monthly salary of less than Rs. 1,000, does not require the previous sanction of Government. The Government of India have, however, requested the Government of Bengal to forward the representation of the Indian Chamber of Commerce to the Port Commissioners for their careful consideration.

SHORT NOTICE QUESTION AND ANSWER.

INDIAN DELEGATION TO THE 11TH SESSION OF THE INTERNATIONAL LABOUR CONFERENCE.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : With your permission, Sir, I beg to ask two questions of which the Honourable Member for Industries and Labour has been good enough to accept short notice.

1. (a) Will the Government please state the clauses of the Treaty of Versailles under which they have made the following statement in a recent communiqué regarding the nomination of the Indian Delegation to the 11th Session of the International Labour Conference to be held in Geneva in 1928 " in selecting the Delegates for Employers and Labour the Government of India will attach due importance to the recommendations made by organised representative associations of employers and employed ?

(b) Do the words " organised representative associations " cover non-Indian national organisations in India ?

(c) If so, will the Government please state how they reconcile it with the definite findings of the Credentials Committee of the Ninth Session of the Conference that " the representation of a country at the General Conference should be a national one " ?

2. Will the Government please state if they propose to send to the next International Labour Conference as many Advisers of the Employers' and Workers' Delegates as are provided for by the Treaty of Versailles.

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : 1. (a) Article 389.

(b) In the view of the Government of India important organizations composed of employers or workers in India cannot be debarred from participation on racial grounds.

(c) In precisely the same way as the Credentials Committee reconciled the opinion quoted by the Honourable Member with their recommendation that Sir Arthur Froom's credentials should be validated by the Conference.

2. Government have not yet considered the question.

Mr. Sarabhai Nemchand Haji : With regard to 1 (c) of the statement of the Honourable Member that the Credentials Committee accepted the nomination of Sir Arthur Froom, is it true that the Credentials Committee laid down that that nomination of Sir Arthur Froom was valid for the purpose of that particular conference which was a shipping conference ?

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : I would refer the Honourable Member to the proceedings of that Credentials Committee. He was present at Geneva and tried his best to persuade them to accept his opinion in regard to Sir Arthur Froom's nomination. He failed in his efforts.

MESSAGE FROM THE COUNCIL OF STATE.

Secretary of the Assembly : Sir, the following Message has been received from the Council of State :

"I am directed to inform you that the Council of State have, at their meeting held on the 19th September, 1927, agreed without any amendments to the following Bills which were passed by the Legislative Assembly on the 14th September, 1927 :

A Bill further to amend the Cantonments Act, 1924, for certain purposes.

A Bill to amend the Indian Emigration Act, 1922, for a certain purpose.

A Bill further to amend the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922, for certain purposes.

RESOLUTION RE MANUFACTURE AND SALE OF KHADI—contd.

Mr. President : The House will now resume further discussion of the following Resolution moved by Mr. Ram Narayan Singh on the 13th September 1927 :

"This Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council to start Khadi (hand-spun and hand-woven clothes) depôts in each provincial capital with branches in each district therein for the manufacture and sale of Khadi under the entire management of the local Provincial Congress Committee and to set apart at least a sum of one crore of rupees for the purpose in the next annual Budget."

Mr. Ram Narayan Singh (Chota Nagpur Division : Non-Muhammadan) : With your permission, Sir, I beg to state that this Khadi Resolution is a very important one and its importance requires that there ought to be a large attendance in the House and a good many Members ought to take part in this discussion. As the House has grown rather thin, I am afraid, full justice will not be done to the subject. I, therefore, beg leave of the House to withdraw the Resolution. My friends have also advised me to do so. I beg to add one thing more.....

Mr. President : The Honourable Member is not entitled to make a speech on a motion that leave be given to him to withdraw his Resolution.

The Resolution was, by leave of the Assembly, withdrawn.

RESOLUTION RE PENSIONS OF THE EMPLOYEES OF THE TELEGRAPH DEPARTMENT.

Mr. K. C. Neogy (Dacca Division : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : With your leave, Sir, I will move the Resolution that stands in the name of the Honourable Mr. Jamnadas Mehta, and runs as follows :

"That this Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council to be pleased to revise the rules and regulations relating to the pensions of the employees of the Telegraph Department to make them equitable and just by providing :

(1) that an employee rendering 21 years' net service, i.e., excluding any kind of fundamental leave, shall, on being invalided, be in receipt of half the average pension ;

[Mr. K. C. Neogy.]

(2) that an employee rendering 25 years' net service as above shall receive a retiring pension of five-eighths of average pay and in addition a bonus of one year's pay ;

(3) that an employee rendering 30 years' net service shall receive five-eighths of average pay and in addition a bonus of 15 months' pay.''

Sir, I regret the circumstances which have not enabled my Honourable friend Mr. Jamnadas Mehta to be present in this House to move the Resolution himself. I do not propose to take the House into any very great details in regard to all the items mentioned in this Resolution, but I will beg of them to extend their sympathy to the general principle which underlies this Resolution and which I think can be stated in a very few words. The conditions of service in the Telegraph Department are particularly hard, and in view of that fact the pension rules should be relaxed for the benefit of the members of that particular branch of the public service. Sir, there are three very serious statements made in support of this contention. The first is that in the majority of cases the members of the telegraph service die before they reach the age of retirement. The second is that in about 90 per cent. of cases the officers after retirement do not live beyond five years to enjoy their pension. The third is that, although theoretically a telegraphist is held to be entitled to full pension after 30 years' service for all practical purposes he puts in 37 years of active service having regard to the fact that he does not enjoy any holidays. I do not vouch for the accuracy of these allegations, and all I can say is that when they are made they are certainly serious enough to merit an inquiry at the hands of Government. Sir, it may be that service conditions in certain other branches of the public service may be quite as onerous as in the Telegraph Department ; and if that be so, then the enquiry that I suggest might not necessarily be confined to the Telegraph Department. However, Sir, that raises a very wide issue which, I am afraid, will not fall within the scope of the department of which my Honourable friend Sir Bhupendra Nath is in charge. I mention this point particularly because the Honourable Member in charge is responsible for the administration of the Labour Department which concerns itself with the welfare of the working classes generally, and as the Honourable Member particularly is responsible for the administration of such humanitarian measures as the Workmen's Compensation Act and other measures of a similar character, I naturally expect a greater degree of sympathy from him than from other Members of Government when I put forward this claim for an inquiry. If, as a matter of fact, service conditions in any particular branch of the public service really cut short a man's natural span of life, then surely it is a case in which these conditions and pension rules should be suitably revised. I do not think I need say anything more to commend this suggestion of mine to the Government, but before I sit down, I want to make it clear that it is not my intention to press this Resolution, and that I am perfectly willing to withdraw it if my Honourable friend Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra can hold out a hope that an inquiry into the facts I have mentioned will be made.

Mr. N. M. Joshi (Nominated : Labour Interests) : Sir, while supporting this Resolution, I wish to confine myself to the case of the telegraph peons and to what is called the line staff. Sir, the employees belonging to the Telegraph Department other than the telegraph peons and the line staff and other menials in the offices at least get their pension on a superior scale according to the Civil Service Regulations, but unfortunately the telegraph peons and the line staff are considered to belong to an inferior service and not to what is called the superior service and get pension on an inferior scale. I have spoken on this point in this House several times, and I take this opportunity again to bring to the notice of the department concerned that there is no justification for making this distinction. They consider the postmen to belong to the superior service, while the telegraph peons who do the same kind of work are considered to belong to the inferior service and are therefore given inferior rates of pension. I hope, Sir, the department will see their way to do justice to the telegraph peons and the line staff belonging to this department. Sir, in the case of the telegraph peons, as my Honourable friend Mr. Neogy has pointed out, there are special conditions why they should not only get pension according to the superior Civil Service Regulations, but according to a scale better than the ordinary regulations. Sir, about two or three years ago I asked a question in this House whether Government will make inquiries as to why the telegraph peons die earlier than other employees of the Government do. The Government of India at that time refused to make an inquiry. I hope, Sir, in the interests of their poor employees the Government of India will not persist in refusing to make an inquiry into the fact whether the telegraph peons die a somewhat premature death.

Sir, there is another difficulty in the case of these telegraph peons. These peons are examined periodically by doctors, and if they are found unfit, they get a much smaller pension than they would ordinarily get. I hope, Sir, the Government of India will either do away with the medical examination of the telegraph peons or that they will introduce medical examination for their superior servants as well. It is not only the telegraph peons and the inferior staff who suffer in health by old age or by any other reason. There are many superior officers who do not maintain a uniform state of health throughout their service. If these superior officers are also examined periodically, I am quite sure a fair proportion of them will have to be retired every year.

Sir, unfortunately, these telegraph peons and the line staff are considered to belong to the inferior staff, and the trouble with the Government of India is that, when a body of men are stamped as belonging to an inferior service, they do not find time to listen to their grievances and to remedy them. These telegraph peons are considered to be menials. The question of these menial servants was placed before Government several times by us through questions, and for the last four years I have been receiving one stereotyped reply, namely, that the question is being considered by the Government of India. Sir, since I first asked this question about the pension of menials, the Lee Commission has sat and reported, and most of the superior officers have got concessions in pay, prospects, leave rules and passage, and various other concessions. But, Sir, during all these years the Government of India are still considering the question of the pension of menials. I do not know when they will find time to look into this question.

Then, Sir, there is one more point on which I should like to say a few words. As these menials and telegraph peons are said to die prematurely, it is better that in their case the Government of India should introduce a provident fund system instead of the pension system, or let these people be given the choice between pension and provident fund. Sir, even in the case of the provident fund, the Government of India are indifferent. Questions have been asked several times, and every time the Government of India say that the question is being considered. Sir, I wish you to tell me whether there is any other method by which you or I can make the Government of India move in the case of these poor people.

Sir, there is only one more point on which I should like to say one word. The Government of India give pensions to their superior servants on a superior scale. As a matter of fact, I feel, Sir, that if any distinction is to be made between the superior and the inferior servants, there should be a discrimination in favour of the inferior servants. The superior servants are paid very generously by the Government of India.

It is quite possible for the superior service who get Rs. 2,000 a month or Rs. 3,000 a month or Rs. 80,000 a year to save something out of their pay for their old age. But it is not possible for a man who gets Rs. 10, or 15 or 20 a month to save anything out of the small pay to make provision for his old age. I therefore feel, Sir, that the Government of India will show some sense of justice and bring the pension scales of inferior servants to at least the ordinary scales of civil servants. I hope, Sir, that the Government of India will inquire into this matter and will not take up much more time to do justice to the bulk of their employees.

12 NOON.

I support this Resolution.

Mr. B. Das (Orissa Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, before I heard my Honourable friend Mr. Neogy I was determined in my mind that I would oppose this Resolution. This Resolution reminds me of another Bill which we have made into an Act, namely the Cotton Yarn Protection Bill. The millowners were agitating for protection. This is in the same line. The vested interests clamour for more and more help. The vested interests of the telegraphists are here demanding special scales of pay and pension which, if the Government were to introduce in one department, they would have eventually to concede in other departments and from what we know of the Honourable the Finance Member he will not permit any extra money going into the pockets of the employees of the Government of India. But I would like to confine my remarks to this Resolution. It has given my friend Mr. Joshi an opportunity to air the grievances of peons and menials on whose behalf he can speak with great authority, and in case the Honourable the Industries and Labour Member is going to consider sympathetically the concession of these pension rules, he will have to concede first Mr. Joshi's point and then the interests of the telegraphists in Bombay and Calcutta. But in my opinion and in the opinion of many Members in this part of the House, some people are getting fat salaries and fat benefits which the Indian element in the Telegraph Department have always been deprived of and they have always admitted this. With these remarks, I hope the Honourable Member for Industries and Labour will give Mr. Neogy such an assurance as will satisfy him and enable him to withdraw his motion.

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra (Member for Industries and Labour) : Sir, I confess I find myself in the same difficult position in which my Honourable friend Mr. Neogy found himself placed. He tried to persuade this House to support a measure without being sure of the facts of which he was talking. His main point was that he had heard somewhere and from somebody that the mortality among the telegraphists was higher than that in any other branch of the public service.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : Telegraph peons.

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : My friend Mr. Neogy was referring to telegraphists. He was on quite a different track from my Honourable friend Mr. Joshi. Now, Sir, the information which we have managed to collect shows that the mortality among telegraphists during the period of their service is no greater, and certainly not substantially greater, than the mortality in the rest of the public service. Well, that throws out the most important of my Honourable friend's hypothetical assumptions. That being so, Sir, so far as the particular body of people with whom he was dealing are concerned, the question of special concessions does not arise. And that is the only answer I have to give to my Honourable friend Mr. Neogy. My friend Mr. Joshi tried to bring within the purview of this limited Resolution certain other grievances of other people in whom he takes a great interest ; and here again, as he had not had the time to work out his case, he placed before the House a number of misstatements.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : I did not.

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : As I listened to his speech, I was amused, when I heard that a telegraph line man belonged to the inferior service and that the scale of pension for the inferior service was something outside the scope of the Civil Service Regulations.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I explain, Sir, that the pension given to these menials may be within the scope of the Civil Service Regulations, but the pensions given to them are on a smaller scale than the pensions given to what is called the superior service. That is my grievance.

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : That may be so. But their scale of pay also is lower than the scale of pay of various officials in superior service. But that is not the proposition we were dealing with. The Resolution is confined to the grievances of a certain class of telegraph employees. It does not cover the wider ground of the pensions of all the inferior servants of the Government of India. If my Honourable friend Mr. Joshi wants to discuss that proposition on the floor of the House, it is open to him to bring forward a separate Resolution.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I point out, Sir.

Mr. President : Order, order. I cannot allow the Honourable Member to go on interrupting the speaker now and again.

The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra : Now, Sir, in view of the facts which I have set forth, I should advise the House very strongly to negative the particular Resolution which has been brought forward by my Honourable friend Mr. Neogy. I have nothing further to add on the subject.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : May I say, Sir, one word ?

Mr. President : The Honourable Member has no right to make a second speech.

Mr. N. M. Joshi : I am not making a second speech.

Mr. President : Will the Honourable Member resume his seat ?

Mr. K. C. Neogy : Sir, I do not think my Honourable friend, Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra, was quite kind to me when he assumed that I was referring to certain gossip which I had heard in the bazaar when I made those statements. As a matter of fact, I had in my hand a statement prepared on behalf of a responsible trade organisation representing the Telegraph Department and the three points that I mentioned find place in this particular memorandum. Sir, I do not know why my Honourable friend is particularly keen on throwing out this Resolution. I never expressed my intention to press it on the House at all, and this strikes me as being rather unkind on his part. I should have thought that he would give a little more time to this question and make a more thorough inquiry than it has been possible for him to make into the allegations to which I have drawn attention. Admittedly he himself is not very sure of his ground, because I should have expected him to give me slightly more definite details with regard to the mortality statistics in the Telegraph Department. As the Honourable Member is in charge of the Labour Department, surely it is not wrong on our part to expect him to be a little more sympathetic. When an allegation is made in regard to the higher rate of mortality in this particular branch, surely it is the duty of the Honourable Member in charge to make a thorough investigation into the allegations. And before he is in a position to satisfy this House that there is nothing absolutely in that allegation, he should not ask this House to negative this Resolution. Sir, I beg leave of the House to withdraw my Resolution.

The Resolution was, by leave of the Assembly, withdrawn.

Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava (Ambala Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, for certain reasons I am constrained to submit that I do not wish to move this Resolution* to-day, and I beg leave to withdraw it.

Mr. V. V. Jogiah (Ganjam cum Vizagapatam : Non-Muhammadan Rural) : I too, Sir, beg leave to withdraw my Resolution†.

Kumar Gangnand Sinha (Bhagalpur, Purnea and the Santhal Parganas : Non-Muhammadan) : In view of the fact that there is a very thin attendance in the House I do not want to risk my Resolution.‡ I shall bring it up later on.

---

*" This Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council that the policy of the railway administration in India be immediately Indianized, and further recommends that the Railway Board should have a majority of Indians and no future appointment should go to a non-Indian until the majority is secured to and maintained for Indians."

†" This Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council to take steps, at an early date, to constitute the contiguous Telugu-speaking areas in the Madras Presidency into a separate Province for all legislative, administrative and judicial purposes."

‡" This Assembly recommends to the Governor General in Council that he may be pleased to take immediate steps to stop the exportation out of India of sacred objects and of Indian antiquities, manuscripts, works of ancient art and such other things as are either national heirlooms and are objects of national pride or are necessary for a proper understanding and appreciation of India's past and for the study and reconstruction by Indians of the history of ancient and mediæval India."

MOTION RE PRIVILEGES AND STATUS OF MEMBERS OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub (Rohilkund and Kumaon Divisions : Muhammadan Rural) : Sir, I beg to move the motion which stands in my name and which runs as follows :

"That this Assembly do appoint a Committee under the Chairmanship of the Honourable the President and consisting of the Honourable Members named below, to enquire into the privileges and status of Members of this Assembly and to make recommendations :

(1) The Honourable the Home Member.
(2) The Honourable Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra.
(3) Mr. K. C. Roy.
(4) Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum.
(5) Pandit Motilal Nehru.
(6) Lala Lajpat Rai.
(7) Mr. M. A. Jinnah.
(8) Mr. Shanmukham Chetty.
(9) Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya.
(10) Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas, and
(11) the Mover."

Sir, the motion which I am moving to-day before the House ought to have been brought before the House long before this.

Mr. President : Is the Honourable the Home Member in charge of this motion on behalf of Government ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar (Home Member) : I am prepared to deal with the matter, Sir.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : In fact, the subject matter of this motion ought to have formed the subject of inquiry by the Southborough Committee and the status and privileges of Members of this House should have been formulated in the form of regulations as soon as the Legislative Assembly came into being. As a result of their not being so formulated in the form of such regulations we, the Members of this House, are deprived of all the privileges which are enjoyed by the Members of other Parliaments within the British Empire, nor do we possess any rights, privileges or status in the public life of the country or on ceremonial occasions as Members of the Legislative Assembly. Even the name of the Legislative Assembly has been removed from the Warrant of Precedence. It is for this reason, Sir, that I consider it necessary to move the present motion before the House. The Muddiman Committee on their own initiative took up this question, but there being no material before them, they were unable to go into the details of the question. The Muddiman Committee in their report have said :

"It has not been suggested to us from any source that Legislatures in India should be provided with a complete code of powers, privileges and immunities as is the case with most of the Legislatures in other parts of the Empire."

Notwithstanding this, Sir, the Muddiman Committee made certain recommendations They made three recommendations. First they recommended that Members of the Legislative Assembly should be exempted from serving as jurors and assessors, secondly, immunity from arrest and imprisonment for civil causes during meetings of the Legislature in question and for periods of a week before and after such meeting, and their third recommendation was that the corrupt influencing of votes within any of the legislative bodies by bribery, intimidation and the like should be made a penal offence. But this should not be dealt with, as at present, as a question of privilege. All these three recommendations have now been put on the Statute-book in the form of rules and regulations, but as the Muddiman Committee themselves said, these recommendations were not really in the nature of privileges of Members of the House. There are several other questions which have come up before the House during the last few years in which the necessity of such regulations has been very keenly felt by the House. For instance, Sir, one Honourable Member of this Assembly after having been duly elected by his constituency and after having received an invitation from His Excellency the Governor General to attend the Assembly was not allowed by the Executive authority of the country to attend the House and he was absent throughout the whole Session. This is a question which will form the subject of discussion by the Committee which I am proposing. Only the other day we saw in the papers that the house of another Honourable Member of this House, while he was attending this Session of the Assembly in Simla, was searched at Lahore by the local authorities. This question also should be discussed by the Committee and we must see how far such action can be taken against Members of the Assembly while they are attending a session. Then, Sir, the question of allowance and residence may also come up before this Committee if the amendment of my Honourable friend Mr. Das is accepted by the House. These and many other questions of a similar kind are very necessary to be discussed. Honourable Members of the other House were more vigilant in this respect. A similar motion was moved in the Council of State as long ago as 1926 by my Honourable friend Mr. K. C. Roy, who, I am glad, has now been degraded to this House, and whose name I have placed on my Committee. Unlike the Honourable Members of the Council of State, I will not press that the question of the prefix of "Honourable" should form a subject for discussion by my Committee, because I consider that all the Members of the Assembly are Honourable without borrowing feathers from anybody. With these words, Sir, I beg to move the motion which stands in my name.

Kumar Ganganand Sinha : I move, Sir, that the name of Mr. K. V. Rangaswami Ayyangar be added to the Committee.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That the name of Mr. K. V. Rangaswami Ayyangar be added to the Committee."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. B. Das (Orissa Division : Non-Muhammadan) : Sir, I beg to move the amendment standing in my name, namely :

"That after the words 'to enquire into the privileges' the word 'allowances' be inserted ;

That the following names be added at the end :

Mr. K. C. Neogy, and

Mr. N. M. Joshi."

and with your permission, Sir, I should like to add also the name of Colonel Crawford. Sir, my Honourable friend Mr. Yakub has already signified his approval of my amendment. Another House which sits somewhere on the other side of the hill passed a Resolution in that House during the last Session whereby they enhanced the privileges they have been enjoying all along.

Whether that House is a representative House is the question and this House will never give that House the privilege of being called a representative House. The Members of the other House enjoy the title of " Honourable ". I hope this Committee, when it deliberates, will see how far they are Honourable gentlemen. We are all Honourable gentlemen. The title " Honourable " should be dropped in the case of Members of both Houses. If the Members of the other House enjoy such benefits, the Members of this House are equally entitled to enjoy them. Regarding allowances, I am not particular whether I get any allowance or not, but I do not like that there should be any differentiation between this House and the other House, which is so particular, like old women, about its privileges and allowances. I hope the Committee will go into the question of allowances. There should be no differentiation between the other House and this House, which, if I may be allowed to say so, is representative of the people of India and the Parliament of India ; and if this House has its own way, the other House should not exist at all.

Regarding the three names I have suggested, I have suggested Mr. Neogy's name and Mr. Joshi's name as they were Members of the first Assembly after the Reforms, and as we are going to consider the privileges and status of Members, it is best that Honourable Members who have fought the battle before us and who know how to extract a certain amount of privilege from the Government should be there. I have suggested Colonel Crawford's name, a member of European group, to add to the representative character of this Committee. With these remarks, I commend by amendment.

Mr. President : What is the third name ?

Mr. B. Das : Colonel Crawford.

Mr. President : The question is that the names of Mr. K. C. Neogy.....

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar (Home Member) : Sir, I wish to speak.....

Mr. President : On the question of adding names ?

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : On the amendment.

Mr. President : The question is :

" That the names of Mr. K. C. Neogy, Mr. N. M. Joshi and Colonel Crawford be added to the Committee."

The motion was adopted.

The Honourable Mr. J. Crerar : Sir, I should like to say a few words both on Mr. Das's amendment and on the motion. In the first instance, I will deal very briefly with the motion itself. As the Honourable the Mover pointed out, this question was one of the questions dealt with by the Reforms Enquiry Committee, and on receipt of their recommendations the Government of India took the action which they at that time thought proper to take and certain legislation was passed. That appeared to the Government of India what was necessary to do in the present state of affairs. It may that as a result of the enquiry by the Statutory Commission, changes may be made in the constitution of this country which would render reconsideration of the subject matter of this motion necessary. But, as matters at present stand, the view of Government is that it would be premature to make the enquiry suggested by the Honourable Member. We do not intend as a matter of fact to oppose the motion, but we wish to make it quite clear that we cannot lend our support to it. In particular, though the Government of India will be glad to hear what views are entertained on these important matters, matters on which non-official Members of this House are certainly entitled and expected to have opinions of their own, while they will be glad to receive these opinions, they do not think that it would be proper that members of the Government should themselves be associated in the deliberations of the Committee. Consequently we cannot agree to the inclusion in this Committee of members of Government.

Secondly, with regard to the amendment moved by Mr. Das, we consider that it would be undesirable and in fact inadmissible that this Committee should go into questions relating to the allowances of Members ; it raises specifically financial questions. Subject to these remarks, the position of Government, I reiterate, is this. If this motion commends itself to the House, though we consider that it is premature, though we are not prepared to give it support, we at the same time are not prepared definitely to oppose it. We cannot agree to the inclusion of allowances of Members as a matter to be dealt with by the Committee and we cannot agree that members of Government should be members of the Committee.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Sir, I am glad that the Honourable the Home Member has at least declared that Government members are not going to oppose my motion. But, Sir, really I consider that the points raised by the Honourable the Home Member in his speech are self-contradictory. In the first place, he says that he considers this motion premature, because the Royal Commission will soon be coming and the whole question will be revised ; and in the same breath the Honourable Member says that the commission would like to know the opinion of the Members of this House on this question. Now, Sir, unless a motion like this is accepted by the House, unless the question comes before the House and a report is made by the Committee, how will the Statutory Commission be in possession of the views of the Members of this House ? On the very ground which the Honourable the Home Member has pressed I consider that this is exactly the proper time when this motion ought to be moved and accepted by this House, because we are on the eve of the Statutory Commission, and if really the Commission would like to know the views of Honourable Members of this House on the question of their privileges and status, this is really the time when this question should be discussed, so that our report may be ready before the Commission has arrived.

As regards the inclusion of Government members on this Committee, personally I thought that at least there are certain questions on which the Members on this side of the House and the Members on the treasury benches can co-operate with each other, but if the Honourable the Home Member considers that the members of the Government cannot take part in our discussions, that is to say, they do not want to give us any help in the matter of the status and privileges of the Members of this House, we on this side of the House are not very eager to have them on our Committee.

Mr. President : Does Mr. Das wish to press his amendment or would he like to leave the motion as it is, unamended ?

Mr. B. Das : May I ask the Honourable the Home Member.....

Mr. President : Government are going to oppose that amendment.

Mr. B. Das : I may point out that it may lead to a reduction of the allowances, and not to a recommendation for increase.

Mr. President : Is it the pleasure of this House that leave be given to Mr. Das to withdraw his amendment, namely :

"That after the words 'to enquire into the privileges' the word 'allowances' be inserted ?"

As no Member objected, the amendment was, by leave of the Assembly, withdrawn.

Mr. President : The question is :

"That this Assembly do appoint a Committee under the Chairmanship of the Honourable the President and consisting of the Honourable Members named below, to enquire into the privileges and status of Members of this Assembly and to make recommendations :

Mr. K. C. Roy,
Nawab Sir Sahibzada Abdul Qaiyum,
Pandit Motilal Nehru,
Lala Lajpat Rai,
Mr. M. A. Jinnah,
Mr. R. K. Shanmukham Chetty,
Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya,
Sir Purshotamdas Thakurdas,
Mr. K. V. Rangaswami Ayyangar,
Mr. K. C. Neogy,
Mr. N. M. Joshi,
Col. J. D. Crawford, and
the Mover."

The motion was adopted.

Mr. President : This House now stands adjourned sine die.

The Assembly then adjourned sine die.

APPENDIX B.*

Translation of the Urdu Speech of Khan Bahadur Makhdum Syed Rajan Bakhsh Shah (South West Punjab : Muhammadan).

Khan Bahadur Makhdum Syed Rajan Bakhsh Shah (South West Punjab : Muhammadan) : Mr. President, first of all allow me to thank you for giving me an opportunity to speak. It was very necessary that I should speak about two things ; firstly, because this is a religious Bill and secondly, that the Urdu language may not be deprived of its share of such a good deed done within the four walls of this Chamber.

The primary duty of every Government is to keep peace in the country and the Government which neglects this duty is not fit to govern.

The present Bill which has been introduced in this House by the Honourable the Home Member goes to prove that the Government has some regard for the country's good.

The need for the Bill arose because, owing to the bad luck of the country, a Judge of the Lahore High Court let off a man by the name of Rajpal who had hurt the feelings of His Majesty's innumerable subjects by his very mean acts. Section 153 has always been applied to such offences as the one committed by Rajpal. All the High Courts considered this section to be quite sufficient. The subject matter in the cases of "Vichatar Jiwan", "Vartman" and Rajpal were identical in each case. Mr. Justice Dalal of the Allahabad High Court and the Divisional Bench of the Lahore High Court sentenced the accused under this very section, but Justice Dalip Singh let off the accused.

Although practically the Rajpal decision can have no standing against the decisions of such experienced and learned Judges, still the subordinate Courts, acting on the Rajpal decision, which has not been set aside as yet, can only produce bad results in the country.

I cannot understand why a few Honourable Members are opposing this Bill and think it to be a Muslim Bill. There is no doubt that the Bill is being brought in because a Judge of a High Court let off a Hindu accused who had used obscene language and the worst possible expressions against Islam and its Founder. Indian Muhammadans expressed their resentment at this and requested the Government either to set aside such a wonderful decision and to dismiss the Judge who had hurt the feelings of crores of Muhammadans, or to remove the defect, if there be any in reality, in the present law.

The Honourable Members who are opposing the present Bill mean to say that the present law is quite sufficient. If it is so, Mr. Justice Dalip Singh has committed such an error as was not to be expected of a Judge of a High Court.

Mr. President: The Honourable Member is not justified in criticising the judgment of the High Court.

Khan Bahadur Makhdum Syed Rajan Bakhsh Shah : Will the Honourable Members blame the Hindu Press which is upholding the Rajpal decision with all its strength? If not, what then does the opposition to this Bill mean? Our Hindu brothers would have done much better if they had, along with the Muhammadans, asked the Government to appeal to a full Bench against such a dangerous decision and to have it set aside. In that case there would have been no necessity for this Bill ; but that was not done. The Rajpal decision is at the bottom of this Bill. Has this Bill been brought in to save only Islam from the attacks made on it ? Certainly not. It has been introduced to save all religions from such attacks.

I very much blame every person who vilifies the religion of another. I was quite surprised to hear from the Honourable Mr. Amar Nath Dutt that the Government was siding with the Muhammadans in an unfair manner. In the first place, keeping the pitiable state of the country in view, the Honourable Member should not have used such irresponsible expressions.

Secondly, when the Hindu-Muslim Unity Conference is taking place in Simla, the utterance of such bigoted sentiments by an Honourable Member is wholly undesirable.

Mr. Amar Nath Dutt : On a point of order, Sir, I do not follow the Honourable Member, but I am told that some reference was made to my speech in a way not consistent with the dignity of the House.

Mr. President : Syed Rajan Bakhsh Shah.

Khan Bahadur Makhdum Syed Rajan Bakhsh Shah : The Muhammadans have much to complain of against the present policy of the Government and they have reason to do so, when in every province of the country their rights are being trampled upon and the Government is quite callous about it. For instance look at the unsatisfactory reply the Honourable the Home Member gave in response to my query in this Chamber to-day.

It has been said that the Muhammadans who were self-seekers or promoters of discord have alone engineered this Rajpal decision agitation. I can assure the Honourable Members that the Muhammadans of every school of thought from one end to the other of the country, whether they were Swarajists, Moderates or pro-Government, took part in it thinking it to be a religious duty, because no Muhammadan will ever tolerate the finger of derision being pointed at his true Prophet.

The Government and this Honourable House should remember that the Muhammadans will sacrifice their lives and property but they will never suffer a word to be said against the honour of their Holy Prophet.

Maulvi Muhammad Yakub : Sir, the Honourable Member is not talking on the Bill but is making irrelevant remarks.

Mr. President : Syed Rajan Bakhsh Shah.

Khan Bahadur Makhdum Syed Rajan Bakhsh Shah : With all the force I can command I support this Bill, as introduced by the Honourable the Home Member and as amended by the Select Committee.
